Another fashionable gray fur for sets and also for trimming is the Arica chinchilla. This rich and velvet-like fur is beautifully shaded, and looks especially handsome when associated with velvet. The muff and boa cost from $60 to $75; the trimming is from one and a half to three inches wide, and costs from $8 to $15.

FISHER-TAIL SETS.

The sets of fisher-tail fur that were so highly prized last season are very difficult to procure now. This is a dark, rich, warm-looking fur, costing from $75 to $150 a set. The trimming ranges from $12 to $18.

BLACK-MARTEN SETS, ETC.

Sets of the black-marten fur, sometimes called Alaska sable, remain the prevailing choice in low-priced furs. The long round boa and muff cost from $15 to $25; trimming costs from $1.50 to $4 a yard. There are also various low-priced fox furs which to some extent rival the marten and seal sets chosen by ladies of limited means. Sets of blue fox cost from $30 to $40; trimming to match is $6 a yard. White-fox sets are even less than this, ranging from $20 to $25, while a border of the same is only $3 or $4 a yard. Lynx is a glossy black long fur that is very handsome for ladies in mourning; lynx borders for cloth sacques cost from $1.50 to $3 a yard.

MINK AND ERMINE.

The demand for mink furs becomes more limited every season, yet the fine dark grades are still worn by those who do not care for changes of fashion, and consider instead durability and comfort. The prices range from $20 to $75 a set. Ermine, which was considered the most dressy fur, looks passee now that fox and chinchilla furs are used. It is, however, the most suitable fur for evening, and will never lose its prestige entirely. A set of muff and boa, such as formerly cost $50 or $60, can now be bought for $25 or $35.

ASTRAKHAN, ETC.

Astrakhan, Russian lamb-skin, krimmer, and other black furs, though no longer novelties, are still liked for their soft rich fur, and may be obtained at very reasonable prices. Cloaks of these furs in long sacque shapes are chosen for traveling and for long sleigh-rides in cold neighborhoods. The sets are especially liked for mourning.

THE POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT.

Annual Report of the Third Assistant Postmaster-General.

Mr. E. H. Barber, Third Assistant Postmaster-General, has completed his annual report. It contains many facts of interest. The number of official letters received in that bureau in the last fiscal year was 685,000. These were opened, classified, indexed, and distributed by four clerks. The figures show that the postal cards are very popular. During the year there was issued 107,616,000, of the value of $1,076,160. In the month of October last there were issued of the new cards, 20,138,000, which is one-fifth of the entire amount sold during the fiscal year. The estimate of the number necessary for the next fiscal year is 154,967,000. The number of public or ordinary postal stamps issued to Postmasters during the fiscal year was 682,342,770, of a value of $18,271,479. The value of postage and periodical stamps was $815,902. The number of official stamps issued to the executive departments was 18,495,900 of a value of $834,970. The total number of stamps of all kinds issued was 973,275,025, of a value of $25,477,511. The increase in the number of ordinary stamps is about 10 per cent. The increase, including official stamps, is about 7 per cent. The postage stamps sent through the registered pouches to Postmasters numbered 359,462. Of this entire amount there were lost but ten packages, of an aggregate value of $250. The statistics of the Dead-Letter Service are of a quite romantic interest. The number of dead letters handled during the year was about 4,500,000. Of these 31,799 contained money aggregating $61,000; 14,225 letters contained drafts, notes, and bills of exchange, of a value of $2,987,847; 135,027 letters contained samples of merchandise, postage stamps, and miscellaneous articles; 3,740,000 contained nothing of value. There were mailed to foreign countries from the United States 12,500,000 letters. Of these 106,200 were returned undelivered. The number of letters received from foreign countries was 11,800,000, of which 219,100 were returned undelivered. These figures show the advantage which this country will derive from the new postal treaty of Berne. That treaty provides that each country shall retain the postage on all letters mailed in its own territory, and that no account shall be kept between the countries. The excess of letters mailed from this country over the number received from foreign countries is nearly 1,000,000. The net gain to the United States from the treaty, therefore, presuming all letters to be only single weight, is 5 cents on 1,000,000 letters, $50,000. The result of the operations of the new law, which requires prepayment of newspaper postage, presents a curious paradox. While the aggregate receipts from this source have not been as large as they were under the old system, the net gain to the government is greater. The Postoffice Department estimated that the new law would yield $1,500,000 annually. This estimate was based upon the returns from 55 leading offices for a uniform period. But the Postmasters either erred or did not make truthful returns, for the receipts from this source are less than $1,000,000. The government makes a gain, however, from the fact that this sum is mainly collected in advance at a few offices, where no commission is allowed upon the sums collected. The amount received under this new system is near $800,000—about the sum received under the old system in 1873. Of the entire amount collected, commissions were paid upon only about $100,000. Newspaper prepayment-stamps have been supplied to 3,400 offices—the total number of places in the United States where daily newspapers are published. The increase in the number of registered pouches during the year was 15 per cent. The system of registered through-pouches works satisfactorily. They have been used upon all the principal routes. Postmasters generally certify to their usefulness.

Miss Robinson, teacher of one of the lower grades in a Baltimore school, deserves at least "honorable mention." Fire broke out on one of the upper floors, and the pupils came rushing down in the wildest panic, when she ordered one of her assistant teachers to play a march, and, going from room to room, she had the children file out quietly, without breaking step—or limb.

Mr. John Sanford, of Montgomery, New York, went out hunting the other day, and had a $100 pointer with him. The first shot Mr. Sanford made at a quail he killed that $100 pointer, and now he considers himself the only man in the country precisely equal in skill and judgment to the Captain of a British iron-clad.

Danbury is a curious town. It covers a good deal of ground, but has only one street—Nelson—running through it or around it.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Over the river and through the wood,
To grandfather's house we go;
The horse knows the way
To carry the sleigh
Through the white and drifted snow.

Over the river and through the wood,
O how the wind does blow!
It stings the toes
And bites the nose
As over the ground we go.

Over the river and through the wood,
To have a first-rate play,
Hear the bells ring,
"Ting-a-ling-ling!"
Hurrah for Thanksgiving Day.

Over the river and through the wood,
Trot fast, my dapple-gray!
Spring over the ground
Like a hunting-hound!
For this is Thanksgiving Day.

Over the river and through the wood,
And straight through the barn-yard gate,
We seem to go
Extremely slow—
It is so hard to wait!

Over the river and through the wood—
Now grandmother's cap I spy!
Hurrah for the fun!
Is the pudding done?
Hurrah for the pumpkin-pie!

During the recent excursion of Texan editors, an intelligent compositor at Chicago alluded to one of their number, whose paper is called the Marlin Moving Ball, as the conductor of the Mooing Bull. The editor went round to the office to ask the int. comp. to come out and take a horn, but the int. comp. had taken down his coat and sold his string within ten minutes after the paper appeared.

A young Hartford merchant called on a young lady, a few evenings since, and was shown into the parlor to await her appearance, when the lamps being unlit, he removed a large quid of tobacco from his mouth and threw it out of the window, as he supposed. When the lady appeared with a light, the most prominent object in the room was that young man staring in a very embarrassed way at a big chunk of tobacco pinning the lace curtain to the unopened window.

Brant Geese.

Mr. Hapgood gives, in Forest and Stream, an interesting article on brant geese, and concludes that they breed in the open polar sea north of 82 degrees. He quotes the observations of many Arctic explorers to show that they reach a high latitude and are seen moving on beyond even 82 degrees. That when kept as decoys in considerable numbers at Cape Cod, they have not been known to breed. That some years there are no young birds, in which case the season is supposed to be too short to sufficiently mature the young for the long flight south, beginning in September. These geese are found in very great numbers, and yet only one instance is mentioned of their eggs. They appear to breed beyond haunts of men, and have never been successfully domesticated.

The Speakership.

A Washington correspondent telegraphs to a Western newspaper: "Mr. Weight, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Commission, of Pennsylvania, and member of the Forty-fourth Congress, writes to this city that he is for Sam Randall for Speaker, each and every time. Also, that the seventeen Democratic votes of the Pennsylvania delegation are pledged solid for Randall. The fact of his own State delegation backing Randall so strongly will give him a good footing in the House; but he will have to yield to Kerr, who is growing stronger and stronger every day. The Democrats already here feel that, in this selection, they must have a man above reproach, and whose record is clear. Kerr is the only available candidate who fills this demand."

Sergt. Bates is reported still becalmed in Canada, stationary for want of money. The man who lends him anything, under these circumstances, will merit everlasting obloquy from Americans.

American Cheese Production.

In Harper's Magazine for November is an interesting paper on the wonderful growth of American production and trade in cheese. The business is of comparatively modern origin. The manufacture of cheese in Herkimer county, New York, dates back prior to 1830, but, while the establishments for the manufacture increased, it was carried on by each dairy-farm from its own materials. In 1851 there was an extensive dairy-farm in Oneida county, New York, carried on by Jesse Williams. His cheese had a high reputation. In that year one of his sons married and went to live on a dairy-farm in the neighborhood of his father's establishment. The father desired to have this farm produce cheese like his own—both to be sold together. The son was not a skilled manufacturer, and the father could not personally attend to both farms. At last an escape from the quandary was furnished by the expedient of taking the milk from the son's farm to the factory of the father. This was the beginning of the associated method of making cheese. The system of each man making his own cheese gradually gave way, and one factory became the consumer of all the milk brought to it. The American factory system, thus suggested and begun, has now become general, and has extended over all parts of the United States, and has been adopted in various parts of Europe.

In the same twenty-five years the home consumption and the export of American cheese has grown wonderfully. There are 500 factories in the State of New York alone. Canada has become a large producer on the American system. The whole number of establishments in the United States making cheese is now estimated at 5,000.

Cheese as an article of human food has become immensely popularized since 1860. In England and in other countries where meat is a rare and costly luxury cheese has become the great substitute among the laboring people. The growth of the export trade may be thus stated. In 1831, "butter and cheese" are reported in bulk among the exports at a value of $264,796, which aggregate had in 1840 fallen as low as $210,749. The value of both articles exported in 1856 reached $334,000, and for the ten years from 1850 to 1860 aggregated $13,049,971, or about $1,300,000 a year. In 1861 the two articles were reported separately, and the figures of each since then are as follows:

Year.	Butter.	Cheese.
1861	$2,355,985	$3,224,831
1862	4,164,344	2,715,892
1863	6,733,745	4,216,804
1864	4,146,081	5,892,000
1865	7,392,718	11,627,749
1866	1,267,881	6,096,928
1867	1,184,367	7,893,535
1868	382,745	7,019,434
1869	494,984	5,437,985
1870	692,220	8,881,984
1871	853,096	8,752,990
1872	1,496,812	7,782,938
1873	952,920	10,496,010
1874	1,092,381	11,898,998

The export of cheese did not assume any large proportions until 1861, but the value exported in 1874 was almost $12,000,000, and in 1875 was something greater, being three times greater than the value of the cotton and wool manufactures exported in 1874.

The New York Butter and Cheese Exchange furnishes the aggregate receipts at that place, and the exports therefrom for several years, computed by pounds. Each box is rated at 60 pounds. In 1874 there were received in New York city from the interior 2,204,493 boxes, weighing 132,269,580 pounds. In the same year there were exported from New York 96,834,691 pounds of cheese. Canada in the same year exported to Europe 20,000,000 pounds.

The production of butter in the United States is estimated by the New York Butter and Cheese Exchange at 1,440,000,000 pounds, of which 53,333,333 are exported, and 1,386,666,667 pounds consumed in the country.

As a food, cheese ranks among the wholesome and nutritious articles. It is the best substitute for meat, and its use is becoming more general as its manufacture increases and becomes more perfect. The principal cheese-producing States are New York, Ohio, Vermont, Illinois and Massachusetts, though it is produced largely in other States. So largely has the trade become that the New York Legislature in 1873 chartered a Butter and Cheese Exchange to do business separately from the general Provision Exchange. The amount of capital invested in cheese manufacture is estimated at $25,000,000.—Chicago Tribune.

Sankey, the Sweet Solo Singer.

Mr. Sankey is a quiet, thoughtful, intelligent, gentlemanly-looking man; Mr. Moody a short, stout, honest and earnest man, very simple, very direct in his speech, but with more faculty for telling stories than for preaching, according to the present scholarly acceptation of that term. The immediate effect upon the congregation is produced by the singing, and the picturesque, not to say dramatic, distribution and manipulation, so to speak, of the services. The favorite hymn is the famous "Ninety and Nine," which Mr. Sankey sings with such wonderful expression and pathos as to draw tears from many, and affect even the most uninterested spectator. The following are the first verses of this now famous hymn:

"There were ninety and nine that safely lay
In the shelter of the fold;
But one was out on the hills away,
Far off from the gates of gold,
Away on the mountains, wild and bare—
Away from the tender Shepherd's care.

"Lord, Thou hast here Thy ninety and nine;
Are they not enough for Thee?
But the Shepherd made answer: 'There is one
Has wandered away from Me;
And though the road be rough and steep,
I go to the desert to find My sheep.'"

Fast Mail Trains—Statistics as to Their Operations.

The following statistics as to the operations of the fast mail train in the West have been obtained from the Post-office Department: The mails from the East and Southeast into Chicago weigh daily an average of 32,202 pounds. The mails from the Northeast, East and South, into St. Louis weigh daily an average of 10,293 pounds. The mails from St. Louis to Chicago weigh daily an average of 1,218 pounds. This includes only the St. Louis proper and Arkansas mails. The mails from Chicago to St. Louis daily average of 2,553 pounds. This includes mail from the north of Chicago, and from Michigan. The mails going into Missouri for the country west and southwest of and including that State daily average 10,755 pounds. This includes mails from all directions, North, South, and East. Mails from Cleveland for the South and West have a daily average of 3,100 pounds.

From these figures it will be seen that the amount of mail matter distributed to the sections immediately tributary to Chicago is seven times as large as the amount received and distributed from St. Louis.

Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Whatever may be thought of Mr. Bergh, in a general way, we take it that no humane person can withhold approval of his act in arresting an infant prodigy and the reputed father thereof at the Tivoli Theater, New York. The prodigy in question is called "Leo," and his prodigiousness consists in his precocious abilities in the trapeze and tight-rope lines. He is only 6 years of age. Bergh sent two officers into the theater, who, when the child appeared and began his performance, rushed upon the stage and took him into the wing, where his parent was found and arrested. When the audience found what the disturbance meant, they expressed their indorsement of it in a "storm of applause." The trapeze business is a bad business at best, even when followed by adults. A certain class of persons may derive moral improvement from looking on while a man or woman who sees fit to risk his or her not very valuable neck in "flying leaps," shoots between the balcony and the footlights over their heads; there may be a demand for such sights that makes their production in some sort a matter of managerial necessity; but there is absolutely no such excuse to be offered for the painful exhibition of young children in the like entertainments. People sit and watch the motions of these poor little "prodigies" with commiseration, and a mark of sympathy, and not of approbation. There can be little pleasure drawn by a right-minded man from the display of childhood robbed of its childishness and distorted into a speculation. For the fathers and mothers who trade upon their little ones in this way no words of condemnation are severe enough. We hope Mr. Bergh's vigorous protest will be followed by a general war that will drive this barbarous and cruel business from the American stage.

The Triumph of Corncob over Meerschaum.

How unsatisfactory is the possession of a meerschaum pipe? Supposing you to have secured a fine piece—the best piece in the universe, say—you would not be more happy than miserable. The whole universe seems leagued to destroy it. You fear to put it away, lest harm should come to it in your absence; equally do you dread taking it up, for there is the risk of dropping, scratching, breaking. While smoking it you cautiously keep on the morocco case; handling would soil the bowl, and you have heard that the coloring oil evaporates if the pipe be exposed to the air. The longer and more completely your precautions are successful, the greater your anxiety and nervous apprehensions; and if, after all (it generally ends so), the cherished, the inimitable, the invaluable meerschaum is broken all to pieces, your agonizing sense of loss pays dear for your season of uneasy ecstacy.

This ever-present excitement and unrest is destructive to the peace and comfort which should attend thoughts of pipe-smoking. Our pipe should be our refuge and solace rather than our care and torment. You will seldom find a smoker of age and experience indulging his habit through a costly and fragile medium; possibly, if he be rich, he will have you to his cabinet and parade before you a choice specimen of "real Vienna," but you will notice that the clay is still virgin; and having carefully locked it back in the cabinet, your experienced friend picks up some battered, disreputable-looking old corncob or other, which he loads and fires with a sigh of relief and satisfaction; and when he is through smoking he throws the corncob carelessly on the table, nor careth he should it fall thence to the floor; bless you! the corncob can stand it. Be not deceived by this seeming neglect, however; trust me, your wise friend loves corncob from his heart, and would feel its loss there, while the "choice Vienna" evanishment would chiefly harrow his—pocket.—Julian Hawthorne, in the Galaxy for November.

The Dead-Letter Office.

The following figures, taken from the forthcoming annual report of Postmaster-General Jewell, shows the aggregate number of dead letters received at that office during the past year. Those known as ship letters are the letters that are brought to different ports in this country by vessels in the merchant service who have no authority to carry the mails, but who have received them from other vessels on the ocean, or ports which have no regular exchange of mails with the United States:

Marrying for Holmes.

John B. Holmes, of New York, is persecuted as well as unfortunate. Shortly after his arrival in this country he deserted his wife, who came with him from England, and married another woman. The latter died not long since and Holmes almost immediately promised himself to a young girl of 16. When the promise matured he refused performance, and upon the trial of the suit brought for breach of promise he was compelled to pay heavy damages. To crown all, before he was well through with the breach of promise suit his original wife sued for a divorce on the ground of desertion, and a decree has just been given in her favor by which Holmes is required to pay a certain sum monthly for her support and $150 for the expense incurred by her in bringing suit. He is looking around for another wife now.

THE INDIANS.

Synopsis of Commissioner Smith's Forthcoming Report—The President Will Adhere to the Peace Policy.

In his forthcoming report on Indian affairs for the last fiscal year, Commissioner Smith will make some important recommendations in regard to the future management of the bureau. That which will probably attract the most attention, and which is supposed to be in harmony with the views of the President, Secretary Chandler, and other members of the Cabinet, is the abolishment of the contract system of purchasing supplies, and the transferring the whole of this portion of the business of the bureau to the proper branches of the War Department when the purchases shall involve an expenditure of 1,000 or more. Commissioner Smith thinks it will be better in all respects for the Indian service if it can be relieved of every transaction of a purely business or commercial character, and devote itself exclusively as far as may be to the civilization and education of the Indians. His plan is that all supplies of clothing, annuity goods, arms, and ammunition, horses, wagons, tents, farming and domestic utensils, etc., etc., be furnished the agents for distribution by the Quartermaster's Department of the army, after having been inspected by an officer of the army to be appointed for that purpose, so that the agent shall be responsible only for the proper distribution of the goods, and that all food be purchased and dropped at the agencies in the same manner by the Commissary Department of the army. This will, on the one hand, relieve the bureau of all suspicion of financial mismanagement, and, on the other hand, will benefit the agent in his official relations with the Indians in many ways, and give him more time to attend to their education.

Commissioner Smith will also recommend that the Indians living on reservations within the limits of certain States be transferred to the care of the proper officers of those States. There are now living in the State of New York on their reservation, and under the care of the bureau, 5,000 Indians; in Wisconsin there are 8,000; in Michigan, 9,000; and in Minnesota, 6,000. In each of these States the Indians have reached a degree of enlightenment and civilization that separates them from what are known as "plains," or wild Indians, and the same systems do not apply properly to both classes. In each State there is property enough in the reservation, if properly managed, to educate each individual Indian to the average standard of citizenship, and give them permanent schools and churches. Commissioner Smith will recommend that the care of these Indians, their property and funds, be transferred to the government of the States in which they live, believing it can be better managed, both for their interests and the interest of the general government.

NO CHANGE IN THE PEACE POLICY.

A delegation of Quakers, headed by Friend Roberts, of the Board of Indian Commissioners, called upon the President the other day to urge him not to change his policy of peace toward the Indians. The President assured them of his confidence in the present policy as the best that could be pursued toward the Indians, and said he had no idea of altering it in the least so long as he remained in the Executive chair. He did not know how the impression got out that his views had altered, and he said the circulation of such report had caused him a great deal of annoyance.

AN ACCIDENTAL CURE.—When death was hourly expected from consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea of the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in 24 hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP, FOR THE CURE OF CONSUMPTION, COUGHS AND COLDS.

The great virtue of this medicine is that it ripens the matter and throws it out of the system, purifies the blood, and thus effects a cure.

SCHENCK'S SEA WEED TONIC, FOR THE CURE OF DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, ETC.

The Tonic produces a healthy action of the stomach, creating an appetite, forming chyle, and curing the most obstinate cases of indigestion.

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS, FOR THE CURE OF LIVER COMPLAINT, ETC.

These Pills are alterative and produce a healthy action of the liver without the least danger, as they are free from calomel and yet more efficacious in restoring a healthy action of the liver.

These remedies are a certain cure for Consumption, as the Pulmonic Syrup ripens the matter and purifies the blood. The Mandrake Pills act upon the liver, create a healthy bile, and remove all diseases of the liver, often a cause of Consumption. The Sea Weed Tonic gives tone and strength to the stomach, makes a good digestion, and enables the organs to form good blood, and thus create a healthy circulation of healthy blood. The combined action of these medicines, as thus explained, will cure every case of Consumption, if taken in time, and the use of the medicines persevered in.

NEW AND BEAUTIFUL INSTRUMENT. THE Piano-Harp CABINET ORGAN. An exquisite combination adding to the capacity of the organ much of that of the piano-forte and harp. With a double-reed organ, complete and perfect in every respect, is combined a new instrument, the PIANO-HARP, the tones of which are produced by steel tongues or bars, rigidly set in steel plates affixed to a sounding-box, and struck by hammers, as in the piano-forte. The tones are of a pure, silvery, bell-like quality, very beautiful in combination or alternation with the organ tones. The organ may be used alone, and is in every respect as complete and perfect an organ as without the PIANO-HARP, or may be used with the PIANO-HARP; the latter may be used separately or in combination with any or all the stops of the organ, to which it adds greatly in vivacity, life and variety, adapting it to a much wider range of music. Upon its invention and introduction, about a year since, this new instrument was received with so much favor that the demand greatly exceeded the manufacturers' utmost ability to supply; so that they have had no occasion to advertise it extensively. Having now perfected facilities for a large supply, they offer it to the public with confidence. Circulars, with drawings and full descriptions, free. MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN CO., 154 Tremont St., BOSTON; 25 Union Square, NEW YORK; 80 and 82 Adams Street, CHICAGO.

DR. SANFORD'S LIVER INVIGORATOR. Compounded entirely from Gums. 1856. LIVER INVIGORATOR. 1876. These GUMS remove all morbid or bad matter from the system, supplying in their place a healthy flow of bile, invigorating the stomach, causing food to digest well, PURIFYING THE BLOOD, giving tone and health to the whole machinery, removing the cause of the disease, effecting a radical cure. As a FAMILY MEDICINE it is UNEQUALED, and is ALWAYS SAFE. Persons using should adapt the dose to their individual constitution, from a teaspoonfull to a tablespoonfull according to effect. For all affections of the LIVER, Irregularities of Stomach and Bowels, diseases dependent on or caused by such derangement as Bilious attacks, Costiveness, Chronic Diarrhea, Dyspepsia, Jaundice and Female Weaknesses, 1 tablespoonfull taken at commencement of an attack of SICK HEADACHE cures in 15 minutes. YELLOW or SALLOW SKIN MADE YOUTHFUL by 1 bottle. TRY IT! For pamphlet containing useful information and all about the Liver, address DR. SANFORD, New York. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

The Wonders of Modern Chemistry. Sarsaparillian and Its Associates. Changes as Seen and Felt as They Daily Occur after Using a Few Doses of DR. RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent, THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

1. Good spirits, disappearance of weakness, languor, melancholy; increase and hardness of flesh and muscles, etc.
2. Strength increases, appetite improves, relish for food, no more sour eructations or waterbrash, good digestion, calm and undisturbed sleep, awaken fresh and vigorous.
3. Disappearance of spots, blotches, pimples; the skin looks clear and healthy, the urine changes from its turbid and cloudy appearance to a clear sherry or amber color; water passes freely from the bladder through the urethra without pain or scalding, little or no sediment; no pain or weakness.
4. Marked diminution of quantity and frequency of involuntary weakening discharges (if afflicted that way), with certainty of permanent cure. Increased strength exhibited in the secreting glands, and functional harmony restored to the several organs.
5. Yellow tinge on the white of the eyes, and the swarthy, saffron appearance of the skin changed to a clear, lively and healthy color.
6. Those suffering from weak or ulcerated lungs or tubercles will realize great benefit in expectorating freely the tough phlegm or mucous from the lungs, air cells, bronchi or windpipe, throat or head; diminishing of the frequency of cough; general increase of strength throughout the system; stoppage of night sweats and pains and feeling of weakness around the ankles, legs, shoulders, etc.; cessation of cold and chills, sense of suffocation, hard breathing and paroxysms of cough on lying down or arising in the morning. All these distressing symptoms gradually and surely disappear.
7. As day after day the SARSAPARILLIAN is taken, new signs of returning health will appear; as the blood improves in strength and purity, disease will diminish, and all foreign and impure deposits, nodes, tumors, cancers, hard lumps, etc., be resolved away and the unsound made sound and healthy; ulcers, fever sores, syphilitic sores, chronic skin diseases gradually disappear.
8. In cases where the system has been salivated, and Mercury, Quicksilver, Corrosive Sublimate (the principal constituent in the advertised Sarsaparillas, associated in some cases with Hyd. of Potassa) have accumulated and become deposited in the bodies, joints, etc., causing caries of the bones, rickets, spinal curvatures, contortions, white swellings, varicose veins, etc., the SARSAPARILLIAN will resolve away these deposits and exterminate the virus of the disease from the system.
9. If those who are taking these medicines for the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous or Syphilitic diseases, however slow may be the cure, "feel better," and find their general health improving, their flesh and weight increasing, or even keeping its own, it is a sure sign that the cure is progressing. In these diseases the patient either gets better or worse—the virus of the disease is not inactive; if not arrested and driven from the blood, it will spread and continue to undermine the constitution. As soon as the SARSAPARILLIAN makes the patient "feel better," every hour you will grow better and increase in health, strength and flesh.

The great power of this remedy is in diseases that threaten death—as in Consumption of the Lungs and Tuberculous Phthisis, Scrofula, Syphiloid Diseases, Wasting, Degeneration, and Ulceration of the Kidneys, Diabetes, Stoppage of Water (instantaneous relief afforded where catheters have to be used, thus doing away with the painful operation of using these instruments), dissolving stone in the bladder, and in all cases of Inflammation of the Bladder and Kidneys, in Chronic cases of Leucorrhea and Uterine diseases.

In tumors, nodes, hard lumps and syphiloid ulcers; in dropsy and venereal sore throat, ulcers, and in tubercles of the lungs; in gout, dyspepsia, rheumatism, rickets; in mercurial deposits—it is in these terrible forms of disease, where the human body has become a complete wreck, and where every hour of existence is torture, wherein this great remedy challenges the astonishment and admiration of the sick. It is in such cases, where all the pleasures of existence appear cut off from the unfortunate, and by its wonderful, almost supernatural agency, it restores the hopeless to a new life and new existence where this great remedy stands alone in its might and power.

In the ordinary skin diseases that every one is more or less troubled with, a few doses will in most cases, and a few bottles in the more aggravated forms, work a permanent cure.

Those afflicted with chronic diseases should purchase a package containing one dozen bottles. Price $10 per dozen, or $5 per half dozen bottles, or $1 per bottle. Sold by druggists.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF WILL AFFORD INSTANT EASE.

INFLAMMATION OF THE KIDNEYS, INFLAMMATION OF THE BLADDER, INFLAMMATION OF THE BOWELS, CONGESTION OF THE LUNGS, SORE THROAT, DIFFICULT BREATHING, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, HYSTERICS, CROUP, DIPHTHERIA, CATARRH, INFLUENZA, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, MUMPS, NEURALGIA, RHEUMATISM, COLD CHILLS, AGUE CHILLS.

The application of the READY RELIEF to the part or parts where the pain or difficulty exists will afford ease and comfort.

Twenty drops in half a tumbler of water will, in a few moments, cure CRAMPS, SPASMS, SOUR STOMACH, HEARTBURN, SICK HEADACHE, DIARRHEA, DYSENTERY, COLIC, WIND IN THE BOWELS, and all INTERNAL PAINS.

Travelers should always carry a bottle of RADWAY'S RELIEF with them. A few drops in water will prevent sickness or pains from change of water.

IT IS BETTER THAN FRENCH BRANDY OR BITTERS AS A STIMULANT.

Price 50 Cents. Sold by Druggists.

DR. RADWAY'S REGULATING PILLS

AUBURN INDIANA, NOV. 25, 1875

Death of Vice President Wilson.

Henry Wilson, Vice President of the United States died last Monday morning at 7 o'clock, of apoplexy.

The President has issued the following:

It is with profound sorrow that the President has to announce to the people of the Unite States the death of Vice President Henry Wilson, who died in the Capitol of the nation this morning. The eminent station of the deceased; his high character, his career in the service of his State and the Union: his devotion to the cause of freedom, and the ability which he brought to the discharge of every duty are conspicuous and indellibly impressed on the hearts and affections of the American people. In testimony of respect for this distinguished citizen and faithful public servant the various departments of the Government will be closed on the day of the funeral, and the Executive Mansion and all Executive Departments in Washington, will be draped in mourning for thirty days. The Secretaries of war and of the Navy will issue an order that appropriate military and naval honors be rendered to the memory of one whose virtuesand services will long be honored in recollection by a grteful nation.

Signed. U. S. Grant.

Hendricks and Curtin are named for the Presidency and Vice Presidency. Curtin will be remembered as a renegade Republican from Pennsylvania, having left the party a few years ago because he failed to get an appointment he was after.—Fort Wayne Gazette.

Are you not a little "off?" If we are not mistaken the change of heart was experienced by Mr. Curtin during the time he was an officer of the administration—Minister to Russia. Mr. Curtin is like a very limited number of Republican politicians—a man the purity of whose motives cannot be doubted. He belongs to the same political school as others of our leading men who no longer affiliate with the Republican party. He is in no sense a renegade Republican he is not a deserter from the party; he holds to-day the position held by the leaders of Republicanism ten years ago; but because he refused to follow the organization into its oppression of the Southern people, its ruinous financial policy, its systems of robbery and the thousand and one other features which distinguish Radicalism from honesty and reform, he became a renegade. The country would be honored in the possession of more such.—Logansport Pharos.

The Indianapolis Sentinel anxiously inquires.

"Who has been convicted? Who has been dismissed from high places with disgrace? Who answers as a criminal when streams of fraud abound, flooding the very highest avenues of trust and responsibility."

We believe his name is William M. Tweed, a clear headed Democratic reformer of the city of New York. —Richmond Palladium.

Yes, you are correct. William M. Tweed, the Democratic chief, is in prison, suffering the penalty of his crimes, sent to his punishment] by a Democratic court, but his peers in rascality, who have defrauded the people of millions upon millions of dollars are free, free to continue their infamous practices beneath the protecting aegis of the Radical administration. Boss Tweed is in prison; Boss Shephard is the bosom friend and confidant of the President. Tweed is in prison; Bill King, the prince of the Pacific Railway swindlers, is free and exultant in his defiance of the law. Tweed is in prison; the entire horde of thieves, who, under the guidance of Delano, systematically robbed the Indians and the Government during the past four years, are free to continue their nefarious practices. Tweed is in prison; Moses, Scott, and Bullock, the Radical Governors of South Carolina and Georgia are free in the enjoyment of the millions which they stole from their unfortunate people. Can the Palladium point to one of the legion of barnacles who, under the protection of the Radical government, have systematically robbed the people, that have been made to feel the penalty of their misdeeds.

Grant isn't a professional orator. He doesn't make a speech unless it is absolutely necessary. He told the people of Maine in one of his famous public addresses that if he didn't come to see them oftener in the past then he had done seldom in the future he wouldn't visit 'em pretty scarcely, or words to that effect.

From Angola.

Angola, Nov. 22nd, 1875.

—Weather good and a large force at work on the Round House. Will have it to use in a few days.

—If the old maxim is true, that a rolling stone gathers no moss, then our M. E. church is in a bad fix, for it has been rolling more or less for two weeks. Its destination is on Scaley-st., formerly Maumee.

—Its lonesome at our house since all of the girls have left school. We return our most sincere thanks to some of your DeKalb Co., girls for the many favors extended toward us during the fall term.

—Our ever smiling Landlord of the Eureka hotel has become pious since his return from the S. W. He has converted his dancing hall into a church. Well Peter always was a sort of a methodist, and a noble singer, too, and will have a chance to do his best. Now, who will follow suit. Don't hang fire.

Notice to Scalesmen.

All those having old dilapidated hay or cattle scales to dispose of can do so applying to our corporation men, the corporation having concluded to accommodate every house on Maumee st., with a set of old scales, and for ever after that street will be known as Scaly-st.— Bring them on soon before the ground freezes up so as they can't be set up.

—B. F. Smith, formerly a resident of this place, has been on a visit among his friends. Benjamin left here in very limited circumstances, five years ago but by having a good knowledge of the law and meeting with good success in a new country, he now controls some 25,000 acres of land in Nebraska, and is probate judge of Adams county, of the same State.

—The Methodists of Angola and vicinity have a grand skirmish for wild game this week Tuesday, but too late to notice the result in this week's paper. I believe they choose sides and have a sort of jolly hunt. There is good hunting here, though very little wild game.— Look out, boys, that somebody don't enforce the game law. Some of our young lawyers want business.

—Why don't the Auburn band get a pass over the Saginaw road. Ours have and did'nt build the road, either. This is more than the Company will do for the citizens along the road who gave one and two thousand dollars toward building it. It looks to me as if somebody was making free with that which don't belong to them. If they are the officers of the R. R. Co., they are only the guardians of the stockholders. If they hold any stock it is watered only and did'nt cost them anything.

Railroad Accident.

On the Saginaw road, Saturday last, as the engine No. 2, attached to wood train going north with twenty flats loaded, met with an accident near Freemont caused by section hands, having the iron up for repairing track. The train was flagged as required but there being a heavy grade it was impossible to stop the train in time. Nearly all the brakes on the flats were wore out, no blame being attached to any of the employees of the road. Five cars completely demolished and one the hands, Mr. Woodworth of Pleasant Lake, was seriously injured. Both mail trains passed over by 4½ o'clock P. M.

Angola.

The repot to the State Treasurer for the year ending Nov. 1 exhibist condition of the financial affairs of the State very encouraging. Notwitnstanding the extraordinary expense of two sessions of the Legislature, the receipts exceed the expenditures $177,181. The balance in the Treasury on the 1st inst. was $421,394.85, against $244,203.78 one year ago. This is the result of Democratic administration.

The Post-office Department Register says that it might save publishers, and subscribers to newspapers, some little trouble if the latter were conversant with the following rules relative to newspapers:

1. Subscribers who do not express notions to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.

2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrearages are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their periodicals from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill and ordered them discontinued.

4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publishers, and the periodicals are sent, the courts have decided that refusing to take periodicals from the office, or removing and leave them uncalled for, is 'prima facie' evidence of intentional fraud.

Any person who receives a newspaper and makes use of it, whether he has ordered it or not, is held in law to be a subscriber.

for Constipation, Headache, Pain in the shoulders Dizziness, Sour Stomach, bad taste in the mouth billious attacks, Palpitation of the heart, pain in the region of the kidneys, despondency, gloom and forbidings of evil, all of which are the offspring of a diseased liver.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, poor appetite and tongue coated you are suffering from torpid liver, or biliousness and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend thee disease, at others very few, but the liver the largest organ in the body is generally the seat of the disease and is not regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and death will come.

Armed with this antidote, all climates and changes of water and food may be faced without fear. As a remedy in Malarious fevers, Bowel complaints, Restlessness, Jaundice, Nausea, it is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

CAUTION.—Buy no powders or prepared Simons' Liver Regulator unless in our engraved wrapper, with Trade Mark Stamp, and Signature unbroken. None other is genuine.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous.

Several new saloons are preparing to start in the county.

Billy Mensch, of Garrett, was in town on Saturday last.

The streets are filled up with wood. Its a poor place for a wood-pile.

See the new advertisements this week They may be of great benefit to you.

That contribution about the night watch is declined, as it is pointless.

FOR SALE.—A good horse and buggy, at half price, for cash. Call at this office.

Mrs. A. J. Little has purchased a mocking bird. It came from Moberly, Missouri.

Dr. Kerr, at the Swineford House, is meeting with good results in his new method of treating diseases.

Our plasterers were "throwing mud" last Sunday on the McIntyre block. We are "rushers."

Lauferty, the cheapest man in town, has just received a large supply of winter socks. Price them.

They are still working about the new jail building, cleaning up the rubbish and so forth.

Jas. Clifford and Sl. Locke, of Waterloo, was in town Saturday.

The Philomathic Institute, conducted by A. J. Little, was largely attended last Monday evening.

Several business men here don't advertise. Yes, worse than that, not even take a town paper.

Why is it B. & O. that our Altoona package is not left at the station regularly? We want this attended to.

We learn that the Links, in this county, have fallen heirs to a large estate in Chicago.

Winter is upon us and our sidewalks are in a frightful condition—some of them at least.

That wood is coming it very slow. Is your time occupied "plowing," or what's the rip-up.

The wheeling is bad in the country and our farmers come to town on horseback.

Ryan & Ford have turned out a new three-seated open hack. It runs nice and looks well.

We were visited by a light rain last Monday evening. It came quick and remained a short time.

We are getting new subscribers every week, and by a little effort on the part of our patrons we could do better.

To-day is Thanksgiving and it will be recognized by the COURIER office. No labor will be performed on this day.

The new jail is not finished yet, but the probability is that the Sheriff will get in next week.

McIntyre is rushing his building through with all speed in order to escape cold weather.

Mr. P. V. Hoffman, the enterprising attorney of Butler, has rented an office and will locate here in a few days.

A change of time took place on the Eel River road last Saturday, corrected next week.

There is to be a dance at Ensley Hall this Thrusday evening. Good music has been secured and a good time is expected.

Our local poets are requested to write on both sides of the paper; one printer can then work while the other commits suicide.

We publish a day earlier this week so we can spend a day of thanks. We hope other places of business will follow our example.

School will not begin until a week from Monday. This was caused by the furniture being mislaid on the railroad at Fort Wayne.

Mr Maloney, of the Garret "New" gave us a pleasant call last week. He assumes he is a Democrat and his name would indicate that he was.

The social connected with the Presbyterian church will be entertained by Mrs S. W. Ralston on next Wednesday afternoon and evening. A general and cordial invitation is extended.

Peter Reiling, formerly with Vordermark & Sons., was in the city this week visiting with his wife's relatives. Pete is in the shoe business at Ronoake, this State.

The pin-back dresses were out last Sunday in great numbers. They don't occupy so much of the sidewalk as the "hoop-out style" used to. One good point at enerate.

Not many young men who goes to Sunday school, can afford to toss a dime into the contribution box each Sunday. But none of them are so poor that they can't afford to pay out a dollar and a half a week for cigars.

Those who promised us wood on subscription will not be necessitated to bring it before next harvest. We got half a cord this week.

The person who took a basket and contents from the door of the Granger store the other night, had better return them and thus escape publicity.

—Mrs. Little & Fair are bound to do the fair thing, and have put down women and childrens' FELT HATS for 50c each. Call and see them two doors north of Rainier House.

TO PARENTS.—How often does a slight cough or cold lead to the most serious consequences. Keep Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup at home. Physicians perscribe it. Thousands take it. Price, 25 cents.

The Steuben "Republican" warns the people of Steuben county to beware of swindling pedlers and dishonest scamps a large number of whom are traveling about the country fleecing the people.

Talk about 'clear grit' 'pluck" 'sand' etc., one of Auburns' innocent girls had the nerve to give her fellow the mitten just because he wanted her company home from church without taking her there.

John Hebel says our notice of the German dance was all correct except three points: No beer, no supper, dance stop at 12 o'clock. That ain't getting out o' the way much on a five line item.

It's getting worse all the time. Now our hackmen sing, on their way to night trains, "If you'll love me, Molly darling.' Where is the night police, oh, where, oh where is he.

The poet who wrote "There's music everywhere," is wanted here immediately. We want him to gaze on the fellow that is putting in the school furniture, when he sings, "Alas and did my Savior bleed."

Wall, the murderer of Cronkheit, near Fort Wayne, has been found guilty of murder, and is sentenced to be hung. This was the only thing needed to make Fort Wayne a full-fledged city and she is now happy.

If you should see on these dark nights a great big light ahead of you looking like the head light of a train of cars don't be alarmed, its only the Sheriff meandering out for a walk. He carries the boss lantern. None of your fire bug lights for him.

F. N. Wright & Co., are launching out in the lumber trade quite lively.—Mr. Lewis informs us that their business for the last year amounted to one and a half million feet, the sales being over $30,000. This indicates that low prices will draw.

F. E. Davenport has just received a fine new lot of truss goods, of a new style just introduced. They are made of hard rubber, and are much cheaper and equally as durable as any other. Those in need of such goods will do well to call.

FREE RIDE—The Eel River Road gives a free ride to everybody this Thanksgiving day, and bills have been posted announcing the same. Our people think a great deal of the Eel River road, and such arrangements will certainly add to its popularity.

The new jail at Fort Wayne did not prove strong enough for five persons who escaped therefrom last Monday night by sawing through the cross bars Fort Wayne should come to Auburn, and see a jail that cannot thus be trifled with. We have the best jail in the State.

PETIT JURORS.—The following gentlemen will comprise the petit jury for the December term at court:

G. A. Gates, Moses Willis, Joel E. Tompson, Albert Pryar, S. M. Knott, Wm. Sheffer, Geo. W. Gorden, Isaac Meese, Talma Rummell, Thomas Baldock, E. S. McDowell and John Yard, Jr.

There was left at the M. E. Church some months ago, the first volume of Clarks' Commentaries on the Testament with the name of Wm. W. Snider, New Alabany, Ind, inside the cover. The owner can have it by calling at Rev. Welch's, and giving satisfaction that the book is theirs, and paying for this notice

SEXTON, M. E. Church.

CATARRH.—If you would avoid being rendered deaf, or unfit to mingle in society, on account of foul and nauseating discharges from gangrenous ulcers in the head, use Dr. Detchon's celebrated Catarrh Remedy. It is the greatest cure and control for the hideous destroyer, the world ever saw. It will save every life threatened by it. It immediately arrests its progress, and if perseveringly used, will never disappoint in a cure. Go to Davenport's Drug Store, and get a sample bottle free. Sept. 30 y

One of our citizens has a lantern that requires haste in its use. He fixes it up in trim shape before he starts, and then if he runs, he can go three squares easy before it goes out. One night he tried to make four squares, got off the sidewalk into a culvert and after he stoped exclaimed, "By Hoky I came pretty near making it." It was a Wee mor(e) than he barganed for.

The first meeting of the Philomathic Institute took place last Monday night and a large number were in attendance. From the way it opened we judge that it will prove successful. We could just as well have a young men's literary society in connection therewith as not, meeting on some other evening of the week. We believe it would be a valuable auxillary.

Our thanksgiving has commenced, and E. E. Williams the enterprising boss of the Auburn Fruit House, is entitled to a portion of them for a fine turkey, presented to us, for our dinner on that day. If there is anything that can make an editor feel that he is not entirely forgotten in a cold, heartless world, it is these little evidences so graciously tendered by great big liberal hearts.—Thanks.

For the Ladies Only.

Hair Switches Curls, Frizes and all kinds of Hair work made to order from "combings." Also want to buy hiar for which we will pay cash. Having an experienced workman we warrant our work. Call at Little & Fair's popular millinery store, two doors north of Rainier House.

Answer to Problem.

The following is the anylsis to the problem in last week's COURIER:

Dog eats 8-7 sheep in 1 hour. Wolf eats 4-5 sheep in 1 hour. Bear 5-8 sheep in 1 hour. All together eat 29-7 in 1 hour. The dog eats 8-7 in one hour he eats 4-7 in ½ hour, hence there remains 3-7 for all to eat. All eat 29-7 in 1 hour To eat 1-7 it will take 1-29 of an hour; to eat 3-7 it will take 2-29 of an hours, equal to 6 min 12 and 12-29 seconds.

C. P. HOUSER.

A gentleman not living on Main street one of our very best citizens, who is the father of one or more pretty daughters, has had his patience tried, almost past indurance by certain young men who never sleep much Sunday nights. He complains against so much swinging on the front gate. He says they have ruined its hinges, and defaced the pointed tops of the pickets with their teeth. It is a fact that any reasonable young man should at once admit, that gates costs money.

In full view of the fact that an earnest effort is being made for the suppression of profanity throughout our land, and that to sustain our present highly enviable standing in society, we should never let an opportunity pass to administer to it a rebuke, the very next fellow that wakes us up at five o'clock in the morning to borrow our shot gun, will be treated to a few quotations a trifle more to the point than demolition flinders or anything of that sort.

Some three or four years ago a drayman of this city owned an old horse, which took sick, laid down and to all appearence, died. His owner had a rope tied about the horse's neck, and then drew him out into the adjoining woods as food for the ravens. Some boys went out the next day to take the shoes off the old horse, and to their utter surprise found him up and feeding about the woods. The owner sent for him, put him to work, and the old horse is yet doing faithful service in the same line of business.—[Goshen Democrat.

The lower mill has been undergoing extensive repair under the superintendence of one of the best mill-wrights in the country. The Grosh Brothers are determined to have facilities for turning out the BEST flour in the country. When all their arrangements are completed, those who want a good article of flour will know that they can be supplied from this mill at reasonable rates, and that their flour will always be found as represented.

—Mr. Williamson has moved into the Shull building, and will not keep groceries as heretofore, but has opened out a large stock of glassware, queensware, woodenware, crockery &c., which will be sold at the lowest prices. Best coal oil always on hand.

Stop that Cough.

No pulmonary complaint however obstinate, can resist the healing influence of Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Cherry and Horehound.—Nothing that we have ever sold acts so promptly and effectually in coughs, colds, hoarseness, sore throat, asthma and all diseases of the throat lungs and chest, leading to consumption. It is a certain cure for Hooping Cough and Croup. Contains no opium and is pleasant to take.—Cough-worn victims whose lungs are racked and torn with paroxysms that threatened to choke them, find speedy relief in its use. Trial size 10 cents. Ask for Dr. Morris' Syrup take no other. F. E. Davenport Druggist.

Is Your Life Worth 10 Cents.

SICKNESS prevails everywhere, and everybody complains of some disease during their life.—When sick, the object is to get well; now we say plainly that no person in this world that is suffering with Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint and its effects, such as Indigestion, Costiveness, Sick Headache, Sour stomache, Heart-burn, Palpitation of the Heart, Depressed Spirits, Billiousness &c. can take GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER without getting relief and cure. If you doubt this, go to your Druggist and get a sample bottle for ten cents, and try it. Regular size 75 cents. Two doses will relieve you.

So superior in workmanship and style, is the stock displayed in our house, that competition with other Clothiers is out of the question. Our trade and customers acknowledge this fact, that our clothes fit better, are much cheaper, and in every way equal to the best custom work, really making us competititors of Merchant Tailors. A New Arrangement.

THE COURIER and Indiana State Sentinel for $2.75. We have completed arrangements with the Indianapolis Sentinel by which we are enabled to offer this paper and the Weekly Sentinel, in every respect one of the best weekly papers published, for the sum of $2.75 per annum. Only 75c more than the cost of this paper alone. Its editorials are spicy and always readable. It is thoroughly Democratic in politics. Its market reports are reliable. Nothing will be published in its colums unsuitable for the most refined family circle. Its selections are always of the best, and no pains spared to make it in every respect one of the best weekly newspapers offered to the public. Payable in advance.

Several sent in answers to the problem in the COURIER last week, but none of them were quite right except Mr. C. P. Houser. The exact answer is 6 minutes, 12 seconds and 12-29ths of a second.

But here's another, tougher than shoe leather:

A ship will sail 24 miles an hour in still water. It will take it 5 hours to go a certain distance up a river, and four hours to go down the same distance.

Required, the rate of the current per hour in miles.

In case you can't do that here's an easy one.

If 3 cats catch 3 rats in three minutes how many cats will it take to catch 100 rats in 100 minutes. Required, number of cats.

BUTLER ITEMS.

BUTLER, Nov. 22, 1875.

—What has become of the Debating Club?

—You should have had a spelling match in Auburn about three weeks ago so that some body would not have spelled Turkey without an e.

Another wedding.—Miss Hattie Reed of this place to Mr. Henry Coe, of Waterloo, Tuesday night Nov., 16th, 1875. Rev. N. T. Peddycord officiating minister.

—Some Three card-Monte men stopped at the Restaurant last Thursday morning and divided $600 among themselves that they had just stolen from one man. Their victim was from near St. Johns Michigan and had sold his property a few days before, for the $600; truly had his "money taken to itself wings and flown away."

—Tim Otis had a very narrow escape from fire last week. Three pet flying squirrels were shut up in a bed room to play and gnawing some matches on the dressing table till they ignited and caught some clothing hanging near. A gentleman passing on the street saw the flames through the window and gave the alarm. Some clothing was destroyed, but the escape was worth that much. People should take warning and not leave matches laying around loose.—Mice will do the same as the squirrels and probably many fires charged to incendiaries were caused in this manner.

"LENA."

The Board of Commissioners held a special session last Tuesday. Messrs Duncan and Wanemaker being it attendance. Architect Tolan made a report on the jail work, recommending its acceptance, and that the contractors give bond in $500 for the completion of the work, which was done accordingly.

J. D. Williamson has moved his stock of goods to Shull Bros' new brick building, on Words block, where he will put in a fine lot of glassware, queensware, woodenware, crockery, &c.

What Shall we Do?

Now that our woolen mills have been destroyed our citizens seem to have settled down contentedly, taking no note of the future. But one or two have spoke of rebuilding, and they received but very little encouragement. There is no use disguising the fact that we will have a woolen factory in the county and if the citizens of Auburn do not care to build one, some other point will. With the material we have on hand at present, we can establish a factory here at a much less cost than can be done anywhere else. Three thousand dollars will start the enterprise again, and if this is subscribed as stock, another year will find it in full operation. Our citizens can well afford to do this, but the great difficulty in this place arises from the fact that those who are able never subscribe a cent, while those who can afford it least, have to bear the burthen. But we must have a woolen factory, or else we must stand by and see one of our permanent industries taken away from us. Can we afford to witness this, without one earnest effort to rebuild here. Circumstances favor us, shall we take advantage of them.

T. J. Toland, Esq., the accomplished architect of our new jail, informs us that his estimates of the building contemplated an outlay of $30,000 in its erection, but finds that the work has been done in first-class style, the best material being furnished at a cost of only $28,647.-78 being $1,352.22, less than was anticipated. This is one of a thousand cases where the erection of public buildings cost less than the estimates made on them, and speaks well for the economy and honesty of all concerned. Mr. Tolan has rendered valuable services in its construction and great credit is due him for the faithful discharge of his duties. With a good architect, one who understands his business as thoroughly as Mr. Tolan does, and square, goood workmen there is is not much chance of a job being put up against the people, as our jail will clearly demonstrate.

The contractors, Duncan, Crane & Co. have done their work admirably. There is not an unsound piece of material in the whole building, there is not one single defeat in the workmanship. Mr. J. R. Duncan, of the above firm, superintended the work in person, and saw the whole work progress inch by inch.—A fine mechanic himself no one could impose on him with inferior workmanship and our jail stands to-day as a monument of the care, good taste and strict economy that was evidinced in its construction.

The Board of Commissioners are deserving of great credit for their part, in the construction of the best jail, for the money, in the State. They first gave the work into good hands and then watched over it with a zealous eye.—They were determined in the outset to build a good, substantial edifice, for the least money, and that they have succeeded, no one need doubt who will make an examination of the work. They have been faithful to the people in the expenditures of money, and true to themselves in an honest and economical investment of the same.

GILES' LINIMENT
IODIDE OF AMMONIA

Cures Neuralgia, Face ache, Rheumatism, Gout, Frosted Feet, chilblains, sore throat Erysipelas, Bruises or Wounds of every kind in man or animal.

Dr. William Osgood Page, of No. 20 4th avenue New York, suffered for many years with stiffness and intense pain in his knee, and at times was unable to walk, caused by an injury received on the Hudson River Railroad. Tried every remedy that skill or science could devise, without benefit. Giles' Liniment Iodide of Ammonia gave instant relief and affected a complete cure.

GOSSIP OF THE DAY.

Carl Schurz announces that he has decided to permanently reside in New York city.

Anna Dickinson is certainly going on the stage. She has canceled all her lecture engagements, and will make her debut at Daly's Theater, in New York, about the 1st of January.

It is not generally known that the son recently born to the Princess Imperial of Brazil, Comtesse d'Eu, was delivered by the Cæsarian operation. The delivery was very painful, and the Princess' life was for a long time despaired of. The child is heir to the throne of Brazil. May he not prove another Cæsar!

The Supreme Court of Maine has recently decided that if a person buys a railroad ticket for passage between two given points, he has a right to ride an equal distance anywhere on the road, and in any direction. This decision is a just one, as the passenger is supposed to pay for so many miles of transportation.

Stanley, the explorer, was madly in love with an actress named Annie Ward, now deceased, when he lived in Omaha. This is given on the authority of the busy Bee of that town, which sets forth the fact that Stanley once offered a certain old inhabitant $50 if he would affect an arrangement by which he could marry the object of his younger affections.

Politically, the Senate for the Forty-fourth Congress, which meets on Monday, Dec. 6, will consist of: Republicans, 43; Democrats, 28; Independents, 2. Senator Booth, of California, will probably act with the Democrats, which will give them 29, and leave the Republicans a majority of 13. The House is largely Democratic. Of the 292 members the Democrats have 178, the Republicans 108, and the Independents 6.

A New Orleans merchant did rather a neat thing the other day. A young man about town called at his store to ask for a loan of $25, which he said he wanted for "only fifteen minutes." The merchant looked at his watch, noted the time, and then engaged the young gentleman in conversation on general topics. After a pleasant chat of some duration, he looked at his watch again and remarked that, as the time was up, he presumed the money was not needed now, and politely bowed his visitor out.

Dr. Isaac I. Hayes, the Arctic explorer, in a lecture delivered in New York the other day, gave a laughable description of a breakfast he took with Mr. Gladstone in an Icelandic farm-house, wherein the two sat on opposite sides of a big wash-basin filled with a white and horribly sour substance called "skea," and each took alternate dips at it with horn spoons. Mr. Gladstone did not seem to relish it much, and held back till he saw how rapidly it was disappearing on the other side, when he went in and did manfully.

The Bostonians are once more exercised at the possibility of losing another of their old landmarks—this time King's Chapel. The preliminary steps have already been taken toward widening School street, which will involve the loss of the chapel and its old burial-ground, where Gov. Winthrop, John Cotton, John Davenport, John Oxenbridge and Thomas Bridge, the first four pastors of the chapel, are sleeping, and where there are stones dating back to 1658. The first chapel was built in 1686, but by the middle of the last century fell into decay, and in 1754 the present structure was built.

"Unser Fritz," who is coming to visit us next year, is the second Royal Prince who has promised to visit America during the Exhibition in Philadelphia. He is the only son of the present Emperor of Germany, and is heir to the imperial throne. He is now in the 44th year of his age, is a General Field Marshal in the German army, and was a famous commander during the wars with Austria and France. In a population like ours, where the German element is so extensive and important, there will be no need of asking that such visitors be heartily welcomed. A famine in lager beer may be expected shortly after his arrival.

A Pittsburgh genius has devised a cunning scheme to raise money for the completion of the Washington monument. He proposes that, as the remains of George Washington are still in a good state of preservation (!), they shall be removed to Philadelphia upon the occasion of the Centennial, and be exhibited to the crowd at so much per head, the proceeds to be devoted to the completion of the monument. This genius also suggests that the remains of Lincoln might also be borrowed and placed on exhibition as an additional attraction. Imagine the bones of Washington and Lincoln being carted over the country and exhibited to the gaping public at 50 cents a head!

There is considerable stir among the manufacturers of Pittsburgh over the project of supplying the iron mills and factories of that city with gas from the great natural wells of Butler county, some twenty-five miles distant. It is claimed that if the project realizes all that is anticipated for it, all the manufactories will in a year or two be run by gas. As a consequence, production will be cheapened to such an extent that Pittsburgh's supremacy as a manufacturing city will be assured, and an export trade of great importance will be built up; from a sooty-begrimed people they will become clean, tidy and handsome as their neighbors; and then, besides, they will lose forever that hated name of the "Smoky City." Happy Pittsburghers! May they realize their cherished dream to its fullest extent.

The Singer will case has been suddenly adjourned, at New York, by mutual consent of counsel. Meanwhile new developments are constantly occurring which promise one of the most remarkable domestic revelations ever made in the records of the courts in this country. A proposition has been made by the legatees to compromise with the contestant, Mary Ann Foster, by paying her $200,000, but this she has refused, and states her determination to have $4,000,000 or nothing. The most remarkable feature of the case, however, is the fact that while there are over twenty children mentioned in the will and provided for, there are numerous others, not mentioned, who are now putting in their appearance from all parts of the country and claiming their share of the vast fortune.

It will be eighteen years the 7th of next December since a Democratic Speaker has been elected by the National House of Representatives. In that interval the Republican party has controlled the House for nine consecutive Congresses. At the beginning of the Thirty-fifth Congress, James L. Orr, of South Carolina (who lately died as Minister to Russia), was elected as a Democratic Speaker, and served from December 7, 1857, to March 4, 1859. He was succeeded by William Pennington, of New Jersey, who was elected Speaker, as a compromise Republican, after a protracted balloting and exciting contest of nearly eight weeks, on February 1, 1860. Then came the Thirty-seventh or War Congress of 1861, which met on the 4th of July, and elected Galusha A. Grow, of Pennsylvania. Schuyler Colfax, of Indiana, succeeded him for the Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth and Fortieth Congresses, and James G. Blaine, of Maine, in turn succeeded Mr. Colfax for the Forty-first, Forty-second and Forty-third Congresses.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

Ten thousand dollars' worth of diamonds, which were some time ago stolen from the wife of Brick Pomeroy, in New York, have just been recovered by the aid of a clairvoyant.... The Brooklyn scandal volcano is beginning to rumble again. Mrs. Moulton does not propose to accept in silence the action of Mr. Beecher's church in dropping her name from its roll of membership, and will appeal her case to a council of Congregational ministers.... Senator Dawes, of Massachusetts, has been seriously injured by the kick of a vicious horse.

Geo. L. Fox ("Humpty Dumpty"), the well-known actor of New York, has become insane from overwork and injury received while on a Western trip.... A murderous affray took place in Philadelphia last week between a party of men, in which a man named Wooster had a long-bladed knife pushed through his head just below the brain, the handle breaking off close to the head.

Orrin Marshall, of Stoughton, Mass., in a fit of jealousy, last week, shot and killed his wife, and then committed suicide.... The Fall River (Mass.) manufacturers have dispatched a commission to England to make arrangements for the exportation of their fabrics to that country.... Upon the affidavits of the depositors of the Third Avenue Savings Bank of New York, the late President and Secretaries of the bank have been arrested and placed under bonds to answer to the charge of perjury.... The Court of Appeals of New York has refused Tweed a reduction of bail and a bill of particulars.

Another of the suits growing out of the Tilton-Beecher scandal, the libel suit of Henry C. Bowen against the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, for $100,000 damages, came up in the Brooklyn Court the other day, and was postponed to the next term.... Mark M. Pomeroy, better known as "Brick" Pomeroy, the editor of the New York Democrat, has joined the noble army of bankrupts. His liabilities aggregate over $140,000. Assets, nil.

Three laborers were killed by a collision on the Pan-Handle Railroad, near Dennison Station, Pa., last week...The New York tea trade is in a sadly demoralized state, judging from the large number of failures recently announced in that line. Some of the heaviest dealers in the city have gone to the wall.... A Philadelphia dispatch announces that Charley Ross has been seen in Connecticut. He was in charge of a woman at Thomaston, and fully identified as the the lost boy by a brother of Mr. C. K. Ross. Before proper measures could be taken to detain the woman, however, she and the boy suddenly disappeared. Detectives are now following her up.

THE WEST.

The mystery which at first shrouded the loss of the steamship Pacific has been cleared up. A vessel cruising for survivors in the vicinity of the disaster discovered upon an island the Master and crew of the ship Orpheus, which ran upon a reef and sunk. The Captain of the Orpheus states that his vessel collided with an unknown steamship, undoubtedly the Pacific, and sustained serious damage. He imagined that the steamer had received little injury, and that she would put about and render him needed assistance. But the steamship kept on her course, and finally disappeared in the distance. The Master of the Orpheus affirms that he used every means possible to avoid colliding, but that for some reason the lights of the Pacific were not visible when they ought to have been, and she bore down upon the Orpheus as though utterly oblivious of her presence. The vessels struck and parted, when the Orpheus sought a harbor, but, making a mistake in her reckoning, she struck a reef and went down, all hands being saved.... The jury in the great Ward will case, at Toledo, failed to agree on a verdict. Eight were in favor of breaking the will and four in favor of sustaining it.

Col. Joyce, ex-Revenue Agent, who was recently convicted at Jefferson City, Mo., of revenue frauds, has been sentenced to three and a half years' imprisonment in the Penitentiary. Joyce made an eloquent appeal to the Court in mitigation of his sentence, asserting his innocence, and declaring that he was convicted on the testimony of perjured witnesses.... The population of Kansas, according to the new State census, is 543,000.

The Western millers propose to give all their Eastern-bound freight to the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, provided it will keep out of the trunk-line combination.... Advices from the Black Hills report the discovery of rich diggings in the northern hills.

A party of miners who were driven out of the Black hills by the [illegible] have arrived at Kansas City. They report having found rich placer diggings, and, if let alone, could have easily earned $10 a day to the man.

Eighteen Mormons, living at Franklin, Idaho, have been indicted for polygamy.... Counterfeit fives on the First National Bank of Peru, Ill., and First National Bank of Galena, Ill., are in circulation. Look out for them.... There was a general fall of snow throughout the Northwest on the 14th inst., the first of the season.

A remarkable tragedy was recently enacted at a rural school house near Warrensburg, Mo. Jerry Foster, a colored Methodist preacher, became jealous of Peter Hawkins, another colored preacher, on the the latter accepting an invitation to feed the Mount Olive lambs. Foster went to the window of the house and seeing the brethren listening enraptured at Peter's words of wisdom, drew a revolver and fired. The bullet missed the mark, but fatally wounded another man. A second ball had the same result, and the congregation hurriedly dispersed, while Foster escaped in the darkness.... The entire party engaged in the murder of the four Italians at Denver, about a month ago, have been arrested. It is believed they will all be hanged—there are seven of them. Some of the band have confessed.

Henry Hallenshed and his wife have been sentenced to death, at Hermann, Mo., for the murder of their son-in-law in June last.... Brigham Young is out of jail again. Chief-Justice White, of Utah, having decided that the order of Judge Boreman committing him for contempt was void. So Ann Eliza won't get her alimony after all.

THE SOUTH.

The eastern section of Tennessee experienced a severe earthquake shock on the 12th of November.

Advices from all parts of the South indicate that on an average the cotton crop of 1875 will fully equal if it does not exceed in quantity and quality the product of former years.... Three of the Owen county (Ky.) Ku-Klux have been convicted.

The Grand Jury of the United States District Court, at Brownsville, Texas, has been investigating the Mexican raid business, and report that for a distance of 600 miles in length and 100 in breadth along the border the Americans have been ordered to leave their ranches by the Mexican bandits, and that 100,000 cattle are stolen yearly by the greasers.

Paul Morphy, of New Orleans, the famous chess-player, has become a hopeless maniac.... Wm. A. Borden, confidential clerk of J. S. Mitchell & Co., boiler makers, of Louisville, Ky., is a defaulter in the sum of $5,000. Gambling did it.

The monument to Edgar Allan Poe, at Baltimore, was dedicated on the 17th inst., with imposing ceremonies.... The new City Hall of Louisville was seriously damaged by fire last week.

It is rumored that the New Orleans, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad will shortly pass into the hands of the Illinois Central Company, which will give that road an unbroken line from Chicago to New Orleans.... Things are becoming lively on both sides of the Rio Grande River. Col. Terragas, of the Mexican army, recently drove a band of Indians across the river into Texas, killing twenty-five of them, and losing fifteen of his own men. The Indians are supposed to be a band driven by our troops into Mexican territory. A portion of the 8th United States Cavalry have recently crossed into Mexico, near Edinburg, in pursuit of cattle thieves.

WASHINGTON.

The majorities of the Wisconsin State officers, except Governor, are as follows, all being the Democratic candidates: Lieutenant Governor, Charles Parker, 1,312 majority; Secretary of State, Peter Doyle, 1,144; Treasurer, Ferdinand Kuehn, 3,198; Attorney General, A. Scott Sloan, 2,193; Superintendent of Public Instruction, Edward Searing, 1,213. The majority of Ludington, Republican, over Taylor, Democrat, for Governor, is 715.

The total amount of interest paid on the public debt of the United States for the last fiscal year was $96,000,000.... Secretary Bristow has issued ten calls for the redemption of 5.20 bonds, aggregating $15,769,950, which completes the redemption of that class of bonds of 1864.... Internal Revenue Commissioner Pratt makes a supplemental report upon the subject of the taxation of capital, deposits and circulation of national banks. The amount realized during the last fiscal year was $7,270,758.40. The total sum received for taxation since the organization of national banks is $64,989,374.46.

Postmaster-General Jewell gives the lie direct to the rumor that he contemplates resigning.

The trouble with Spain, growing out of a demand on the part of our Government for a modification of the treaty of 1795, is at an end, the Spanish Government having agreed to concede all that we ask.

POLITICAL.

The total vote polled for Governor at the recent election in Pennsylvania was 609,564, Gov. Hartranft receiving 12,030 majority over Pershing, Democrat.... Chief Justice Waite says he would under no circumstances accept a nomination for President.... Ex-Senator Pease has been reinstated in the Vicksburg Postoffice.... The official majority of Pillsbury (Rep.) for Governor of Minnesota is 11,899.... Alabama has ratified her new State Constitution by a large majority.... Complete returns of the Wisconsin election make the majority of Ludington (Rep.) for Governor 820. The Democrats elect the balance of the State officers.

GENERAL.

The ship Calcutta, from Quebec to Liverpool, has been lost at sea. Twenty-two men of the crew and a lady passenger were drowned. The captain, three men and a boy were saved.

Another shocking marine disaster, resulting in the sacrifice of fifteen lives, is reported. The brig Morue, from St. Pierre, N. F., for France, was capsized at sea, and thirteen passengers and two of the crew drowned.... The remains of Guibord have been reinterred in the Roman Catholic cemetery, at Montreal, without disturbance.

The testimony in the trial of Gen. John McDonald, ex-Supervisor of Internal Revenue, at St. Louis, is of a most startling character. It clearly showed the existence of a powerful combination between Government officials and others to defraud the Government of its tax on distilled spirits. The distillers made regular contributions, which were shared between the conspirators, and in consideration thereof the whisky went into consumption free.

The house of Dennis Cunningham, at Craigville, Canada, was recently destroyed by fire, and four children perished in the flames.... The Commission appointed to negotiate with the Sioux Indians for the acquisition of the Black Hills reservation, have made their report to the Secretary of the Interior. The report gives a full and concise history of the whole affair, including a statement of the reasons of failure, conspicuous among which was the interference of white men who were interested in having a large money payment to the Indians, of which they hoped to despoil them. The Commission urge a thorough revision of our relations with the whole Indian population west of the Mississippi. They recommend (1) that Congress shall provide by law for the separation of all Sioux Indians between the ages of 6 and 16 years from the adult population, and make provision for their thorough education; (2) that the adults shall perform labor as a condition of subsistence; (3) that every Indian be encouraged in the acquisition of private property; (4) that supplies be hereafter furnished under the supervision of officers of the army; (5) that all Indian agencies be abolished; (6) that the Government take possession of the Black Hills, paying to the Sioux a fair equivalent therefor, such sum to be paid to become part of the fund required in the general plan to educate and civilize the Sioux.

FOREIGN.

The crew of the British ship Lennie, from Antwerp to New York, recently mutinied, and killed the Master, mate and boatswain.... Servia has withdrawn her troops from the Turkish frontier, and the army of the Sultan has likewise retired. This is a step toward a settlement of the pending difficulties.

Bridgewater, in Somersetshire, Eng., was recently inundated by an immense tidal wave ten feet high, which caused much damage to shipping and other property.... The movements of the Prince of Wales, in India, are seriously hampered by the prevalence of cholera.... Disastrous floods are reported throughout England and Ireland.... Cardinal McCloskey has sailed for home.

A severe battle has been fought between Turkish troops and Herzegovinians, near Gotacho, resulting in the total rout of the troops, with the loss of nearly 1,000 killed, together with all their ammunition, baggage and several cannon.

The British ship Astrida, from London to the United States, has been lost off Andressell, near Boulogne. Nine of her crew were drowned. Many other vessels were wrecked on the French and English coasts by the recent gale, which is represented as the most destructive for years. It is estimated that the damage caused in London by the tide in the Thames, which was the highest on record, will reach fully $5,000,000.

The Turks have gained an important victory over the insurgents in Bosnia.... The letter which Don Carlos recently addressed to King Alfonso, mentioned heretofore, did not make proposals for peace, but offered to unite their forces and make common cause against the United States, should the Cuban difficulties cause a war between this country and Spain.... The statement that the German Crown Prince intended visiting this country next year is now denied.

A Berlin dispatch says the German Catholic priests are submitting to the ecclesiastical laws.... The Spanish Gen. Quesada has been commanded, by royal order, to henceforth receive no communication from Don Carlos except an announcement of the unconditional submission of himself and his partisans.

The Black Hills---Prof. Jenney's Report.

The official report of Prof. Jenney of the geological survey of the Black Hills has been published. We reproduce that portion relating to gold deposits in the hills:

> That portion of the hills which may be designated as Harney's Peak gold field is almost wholly in Dakota, and extends about fifty miles north and south, with an average breadth of nearly twenty miles, covering an area of not less than 800 square miles. The valuable gold deposits, however, are found in the valleys of the streams which drain that area, the gold being derived from the disintegration of the quartz ledges, which are very numerous in the rocks of that region.
>
> The most extensive and valuable deposits of auriferous gravel discovered during the past season were in the valleys of Spring and Rapid Creeks, and their tributaries, where in almost every case the gravel bars are very advantageously situated for working, and many natural circumstances contribute materially to the profitable extracting of the gold which they contain.
>
> Timber of suitable size and quantity for the construction of flumes and sluices is abundant. The water supply is in most localities ample, and the fall of the streams sufficiently great to enable the water to be readily carried above the level of even the more elevated bars and deposited gravel.
>
> While as yet there have been discovered in the Blacks Hills no deposits of gravel sufficiently rich in gold to be profitably worked in the primitive manner with pan or rocker, yet there are many bars in the Harney's Peak field, especially upon Spring Creek, the forks of Castle and Rapid Creeks, and the valleys of these mountain streams, which, when skillfully worked by gangs of miners with sluices, will yield a good return for the labor employed and the moderate capital required to be invested. But little could be done in a single season in prospecting the numerous segregated quartz veins of this region, some of which undoubtedly contain gold. I have procured abundant samples by testing their value by assay.
>
> The Bear Lodge gold field, situated in the extreme northwestern portion of the hills, is wholly in Wyoming and entirely separated from the Harney Peak region. It does not exceed fifty square miles in area; the gold deposits are small compared with those on Rapid Creek, and are remarkable for the absence of quartz in the gravel, the gold being derived from the disintegration of feldspar porphyry carrying irregular masses of iron and manganese ore.

Dowery and Wills.

Three estates, aggregating $20,000,000, are now in litigation, through alleged testamentary defects. We refer to the Taylor, Ward and Singer estates. The prospect is that, through the expense and losses incident to legal proceedings, a very large per cent. of the property will be frittered away. Clearly there is something wrong. Either the law is defective or its interpretation unjust. The difficulty in disposing of property by testament is so great as to make it almost impossible to divert the descent of property from its natural course, provided the amount is vast. The attempt to do so inures to the benefit of lawyers mainly.

In view of this difficulty, a correspondent of the Chicago Journal suggests that the testator append, as a safeguard against litigation, a clause something as follows:

> I have now, by this my last will and testament, bequeathed all my property, real and personal, in precisely the manner in which I desire to have it distributed among my heirs; and I further declare that any heir or legatee herein named, who shall commence legal proceedings against my estate for the purpose of destroying the force and effect of this my last will and testament, or to harass the other heirs therein named, shall be instantly and forever deprived of his or her right to any share in the distribution of my estate, any other provision or devise mentioned in this my will to the contrary notwithstanding; and the legacy or bequest so forfeited by such heir shall be divided equally between the other heirs to my estate herein named, by my executors.

This might operate as a wholesome restraint in one class of cases; but often the contestant has been ignored in the distribution of the property, or "cut off with a shilling," as the phrase is, and the risk of the proceeding in case of failure would be out of all proportion to the gain in case of success. At most the remedy would be partial.

Pompeian Revelations.

Speaking of recent excavations in Pompeii a writer says: The last house excavated contains a small bakery. In the corner of one room is a cistern, and opposite a small marble temple, which contained a little statuette of Venus decorated with tiny armlets and anklets of pure gold. The goddess seems to be trying to remove one of the anklets. The statuette has been placed in the bronze collections of the Naples Museum. In this same Pompeian house there is a beautiful fresco representing tall plants growing from behind a balustrade; birds nestle among the verdure, and above are two side terraces [illegible] animals. In another room is a fine Hercules landing in ancient Sicily. A half-injured fresco represents men struggling with serpents, a bull careering, while one man lies dead in the arena, and the spectators of the conflict look on tranquilly from their seats. The other rooms are mostly adorned with paintings of birds. A neighboring shop is frescoed with charming little vignettes, one of Mercury and Bacchus, another of Venus and Cupid angling, with good luck, evidently, as the large fish are seen in the clear water dangling from their lines. There is Cupid in a variety of graceful actions, now playing on a lute, now eating grapes with a comrade, on whom a little dog has put his fore-legs, begging to share in the repast. In another vignette Cupid is seen playing the tibia, now the horn, and again he is astride of a dolphin on the sea, carrying a letter to some love-lorn, green-crowned deity. On the sides of many of the shops on the street are inscriptions written in irregular red characters on the stucco. In another of the recently excavated buildings is an admirably arranged kitchen, in which a deep, bronze, and perfectly clean boiler (as it might well be after its long cleansing with ashes) still remains. Below it is a large opening for the fire. The whole arrangement of the kitchen suggests that an apartment in one of these Pompeian houses would furnish more comfortable culinary conveniences than are often to be found in the modern Italian "palaces." The court is adorned with a marble fountain (there was a fawn, through whose mouth the water fell, but it has been removed to the Naples Museum), and a white marble table. The inner room contains three large marble tanks, and the opening for the water-pipes which filled them is seen. On the side of the wall are caricature frescoes. Among these is a wounded man demanding justice, and the fete of the dyers is represented; for the establishment is supposed to have been a dyeing and cleansing house, and a quantity of substance which, when analyzed, proved to be soap, was found in an adjoining small room.

Health Maxims.

Nature is very much like a shiftless child, who, the more he is helped, the more he looks for it. The more medicine a man takes the more he will have to take, whether it be anodyne, tonic, or alterative.

The thinnest veil or silk handkerchief thrown over the face while riding or walking against a cold wind is a remarkably comfortable protection.

Never sit or stand with the wind blowing on you for a single moment, for it speedily produces a chill, to be followed with a fever, and then a bad cold.

A hearty meal, taken while excessively fatigued, has often destroyed life.

A sour look, an impatient gesture, or a cross word at the breakfast table is enough to make the best food indigestible and spoil the day.

A good laugh is anti-dyspeptic.

To spend two or three moments on rising and retiring in rapid friction of the whole surface of the body with the hand is a more rational treatment of the skin, and a more health-promoting operation for most persons, than a daily cold-water bath.

If you can't get good wages, work for your board rather than do nothing, or go in debt, or live on the earnings or charity of another.

Acidity always arises either from having eaten too much food, or of a quality which the stomach could not dissolve. The remedy is, eat less and less each meal until there is no acidity, then you know for yourself how much your stomach can manage; to eat the same amount and as regularly take something to correct the acidity is certain to cause dyspepsia or some other more serious form of disease.—Dr. W. W. Hall.

A Cats Devotion to Her Kittens.

The Meriden (Ct.) Republican says: "In the building which burned last week on West Main street there was a cat with a litter of four kittens. At first the cat would not move, but stayed with her little ones; but as the fire progressed and became too warm for her, she finally jumped to her feet and seized one of the kittens in her mouth and carried it to a place of safety. The old cat then returned to the building and took another one of the kittens, and carried that to the place where she had taken the first, and so on until the four were out of danger. The old cat was injured very badly, besides being permanently blinded. On the tail there is hardly the resemblance of a hair left, and on the other portions of her body there are marked effects of the fire."

A Tough Young Man.

The young man Chapell, O'Leary road, who fell from a hay-stack, and, being run through the body by a pitch fork, was given up by the surgeons, has recovered and is walking about. A year or two ago, while chopping in the woods, a tree fell on him and pinned him to the ground for several hours, on which occasion he was believed to have been fatally injured. Some time before, he fell down the hatchway of a mill, and was taken up for dead. Earlier he was thrown from a swing, and was supposed to be killed, and, it is said, he was once drowned. Chapell is a slight young man of 19 or 20 years of age.—Summerside (P. E. I.) Progress.

It is proposed in France by the telegraphic administration to encourage the introduction of private wires, and to offer such inducements that no great factory and no rich man's house in the country will be without its wire.

The Marine Hospital Service.

In his annual report, Dr. J. M. Woodworth, Supervising Surgeon of the Marine Hospital Service, takes strong grounds in favor of the adoption of more stringent methods for the prevention of the introduction of cholera into this country, and will make important recommendations. Dr. Woodworth has already called the attention of the President personally to the matter, and Gen. Grant has taken an unusual interest in Dr. Woodworth's plans. Dr. Woodworth thinks cholera can be entirely prevented by prompt and authoritative information to threatened ports of the shipment of passengers and goods from a cholera-infected district, and a rigid quarantine. If the health officers at the different ports of the United States were made aware by telegraph of the fact that emigrants or goods supposed to be infected were en route to this country, measures could be taken to prevent, without difficulty, their admission. Dr. Woodworth thinks that it is most needed that the national government through its consular officers should acquire the necessary information, and then promptly and intelligently furnish it to the ports and localities proposed. This would be simply an utilization of already existing machinery on the part of the general government for the acquisition of knowledge indispensable to general welfare. Dr. Woodworth recommends that the first step taken be the issuance of a circular letter from the President of the United States through the Department of State, instructing consular officers to place themselves in communication with the health authorities of their respective localities; to advise promptly, by cable if necessary, of the outbreak of cholera (or other epidemic disease) at their ports or in any section in communication therewith; to inspect all vessels clearing for United States ports, with reference to the original and intermediate as well as to the final points of departure of emigrants thereon; and to report, always by cable, the sailing and destination of any such vessel carrying infected or suspected passengers or goods. The next step would be equally simple. A medical officer, selected for his good judgment and attainments in sanitary science, should collect and digest the information thus obtained, and transmit direct to the threatened ports, as well as through the public press, the note of warning. Thus advised, threatened communities would have ample time for preparation; and the publicity given to the warning would be the most efficient means of insuring proper precautionary measures. The President has promised to give Dr. Woodworth's recommendations the due attention they deserve, and will, no doubt, carry out the plan before another cholera season.

Major Andre's Monument.

I notice that the Journal repeats the story going the rounds, and originally started here, that the head of Maj. Andre, on his monument in Westminster Abbey, has been knocked off no less than three times. This is entirely untrue, as it has never been knocked off once. There is on the monument a group in bas relief, the conspicuous figure of which is Washington, and it is his head, and not that of Andre, which has three times been wantonly destroyed—the last time I saw it, the mark round the neck showing the decapitation was plainly visible. Of course no one but a wretch too contemptible for even ordinary anger could have perpetrated such a piece of vandalism. Every possible effort was made by the authorities of the Abbey, on the three occasions alluded to, to discover the offender, but he kept his secret too well. I doubt if at this day the offense could or would be repeated.—London Cor. Chicago Journal.

The other day an engineer on the Central road had to stop his train near the Junction and pull a drunken man from the track, the fellow having laid down and fallen asleep. "You fool you!" shouted the engineer, "suppose you had been run over by the train!" "You (hic) fool you!" stammered the inebriate, "s'posein' I'd (hic) run over your blamed old (hic) cars!"—Detroit Free Press.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

The Farmer's "Hands."

Some pure and perfect summer morn
I meet a farmer plowing corn.
The sun is shining like a king,
Alive and glad is everything.
Sweet music in the robin's mouth,
A soft wind singing from the South
Persuades the willing world to grow,
From crown of oak to apple-blow.
The farmer halting by the way,
I ask, "Who works for you to-day?"
"I am alone," the man's reply,
And wondering looks, when I deny
And say, "Not so. That royal sun
Is nothing but your hired man,
He comes a hundred million miles
Before your breakfast is begun—
Before your wife careens a pan,
To coax your corn with golden smiles,
And hang the silken tassels on,
And kiss the peach's cheek of down—
The farmer never toils alone.
The clouds, his angels hovering over,
Rain wine for grapes and buds for clover,
And shading, shining, coming, going,
Weave counterpanes for wheat by snowing.
The robins serve him for their board,
And eat a cherry now and then.
What is a ruby from the hoard?
They are the sinless friends of men,
For saving yours they take their own,
Foes of our foes. Pray, drop that stone,
And leave the red-breast bird alone!"

Around the Farm.

CHIMNEYS are excellent lightning conductors. In view of which it is recommended: First, that they be kept clean; then, that all the grates in a house be connected by means of a strong wire, such as is used for telegraph purposes, with a piece of metal in the earth, or with the iron gas or water pipes.

VARNISH brushes should never be allowed to touch water, as it not only injures the elasticity of the hair, but a resinous substance is formed in the hilt of the brush, which can never be thoroughly removed, and which will work out little by little when the brush is used, destroying the glassy surface which otherwise might be obtained.

A SKILLFUL sawyer, in sawing a log into scantling, which he knows will spring, will first mark off the end into cuts; and then, after sawing once through on one side of the log, will saw a slab off the other side, and finish in the middle. By this means the lumber will be about as true as if the timber were not inclined to spring at all.

THAT Kentucky has not long ago taken rank as one of the chief wool-growing States of the Union, is due to the pusillanimity of our legislators, who have been afraid to levy a tax on the dogs of the dear poor man. The Grangers have now taken the matter in hand, and we have reason to believe that the next Legislature will pass a law taxing dogs.—Paducah Kentuckian.

AS REGARDS cooking food for animals, intelligent farmers have been buying steamers that are now lying in the fence corners. Grain may be plenty in one place, fuel cheap in another. Who can tell under precisely what circumstances it will pay to cook cattle food? One superfine buttermaker declares that only from raw food will his cows bring the most perfect butter.—Olcott's Courant.

WE challenge any one to show that a single box of it was ever branded or marked oleomargarine cheese, or that it has ever reached the consumer abroad or at home in the legitimate channels of trade upon its own merits. If the article is as good as it is claimed for it, and is designed to be sold as an improvement on skim-milk cheese, and not as a substitute for full cream cheese, we fail to see why there should be any objection to branding its name on it.—Boston Cultivator.

I HAVE never known a case of cholera that was not traceable to indigestion, and had the herdsman observed, he would have noticed the symptoms of approaching disease (viz.: extreme indolence, thirst, costiveness, disordered skin, fickle appetite, etc,) weeks before the disease assumed the violent form called cholera. If the herd has been neglected, and disease is allowed to progress till it assumes a type of cholera, it may be arrested, except in extreme cases, by giving salt, ashes, sulphur and charcoal, and dieting upon sour milk or wheat bran cooked. I have advised this treatment in a number of cases, and it has invariably proven successful. If diet and care will not arrest the disease, it has gone too far for medicine.—Live Stock Journal.

SAYS the American Agriculturist: "An early sown crop of rye will furnish a valuable winter and early spring pasture. The cost would be as follows: Plowing one acre, seed two bushels, harrowing or drilling, and if necessary some fertilizer. Really, the whole cost will be the seed, because the labor will be well expended on the land. A portion of this cost will be returned in the manure left upon the field by the cattle pastured. The return will be at least equal to the value of one ton of hay per acre, which will be a handsome profit. In addition to the value of the feed gained, the condition of the stock will be greatly improved by a healthful change of feed at a time when it is much needed. What is left of the crop after it has been pastured will be valuable to plow under, and the ground will be in excellent condition for a spring crop.

About the House.

TAR and sweet oil, thoroughly mixed, will made boots waterproof.

ALWAYS fill a coal oil lamp every day before using. The bowl should never be allowed to get empty and be lighted in that condition, for the vacant space is always full of explosive gas.

BREAKFAST CAKES.—One quart of flour, one pint of milk, two eggs, butter the size of an egg, one teaspoon of soda, two teaspoons of cream of tartar, baked in a quick oven and heated pans.

FROZEN CUSTARD.—One quart of cream, two quarts of milk, one and a half pounds of sugar, yolks of four eggs. Mix milk, eggs, and sugar, put on the fire and let them scald; just cook.

COOKIES.—Two cups sugar, one cup butter, four eggs, one teaspoon of soda, two teaspoons of cream of tartar, and flour to roll. Carraway seeds or spice to taste. If put in a stone jar they will last for a long time.

COAL oil lamps will be much safer to use, if the bowls is loosely filled with raw cotton or tow before putting in any oil. In case of explosion or falling on the floor, the burning fluid cannot fly all over everything.

FOR damp closets and cupboards which generate mildew a trayful of quicklime will be found to absorb the moisture and render the air pure, but it is necessary to renew the lime from time to time as it becomes fully slaked. This last remedy will be found useful in safes and strong rooms, the damp air of which acts frequently most injuriously on the valuable deeds and documents which they contain.

SAVING WORK.—House maids can save themselves a great deal of work by using care in various ways. A particular nail for each cloth used about the sink, makes it easier to keep the table at hand, in order, and to cleanse the pots and kettles perfectly, and to make the pantry shelves neat. When water is slopped upon the floor, if it is wiped up, the rest of the floor is saved from soiling. Whole days may be saved in the course of the year, and any amount of irritated temper spared, if every dish and kitchen utensil is put away in its place. An intelligent girl will save her time and strength by using her head along with her hands.

CREAM CHEESE FROM BUTTERMILK.—Put the buttermilk in a kettle over the fire and heat slowly till it curdles, but do not let it get warmer than will be pleasant to the hand when placed in it. Remove from the fire and let it set on the back of the stove till the curd separates from the whey, then strain through a sieve or bag. Work the curd fine with the hands, salt it very little, and then put in cream, mixing it thoroughly with the curd.

A Cat Show.

Col. Forney writes thus from London of a cat show at the Crystal Palace: At first numbers of people were attracted by the novelty of the scene alone, but though this section of the visitors to the cat show is still large, many now come with a party of children. The Crystal Palace itself is familiar to Americans. The center transept, at once a beautiful promenade and a delightful resting place, was crowded yesterday by the visitors who came to see the cats in cages down each side. Each cage contained a cushion for pussy, a little saucer filled with milk, etc., while the prize cats were distinguished by a blue flag hung from the top. Some idea of the enterprise of the authorities at the Palace may be gathered from the fact that about 130 prizes were offered for competion from £5 to 15 shillings, while marks of distinction, which are equally coveted, such as "very highly commended," are also awarded. In certain classes, where there is a great competition, and only say three prizes, those cats which are highly commended have a good chance of carrying off the first prizes at local shows or exhibitions, where their standing would be more completely recognized. The best tabby cat received a silver cup. For this prize there was a general rivalry; there were thirty-six candidates, and as they were all first-class the decision of the judges was not made until after much discussion. The prizeman at last appeared in Master Shuckard's "Tommy Dodd," aged 9 years, and valued at £100 ($500); the winner of the second prize was also held at the same amount, while the value attached to others in the same class was never below £5. Miss Shorthouse's cat, "age unknown, possesses a tabular pedigree for six generations," and is valued by its owner at £10,000, but in face of these substantial arguments Miss S.'s favorite was not among the prizes, only receiving a high "commendation." Other of the candidates were magnificent creatures, graceful in their movements, their furs shining with gloss resembling the richest velvet. These cats were the best in the show, and were specially considered by the judges to be a superb class. The average weight of each was about 16½ pounds. One of the prizes was for the "heaviest cat in the show," and this was won by a specimen weighing a few ounces over 18 pounds. The gentleman was so overcome with joy at the honor he had won that he gave himself up to amusement the whole day, glad to engage in a game with the first youngster that came along. Few out of the 500 pussies showed bad tempers; the exceptions were among the black cats, which, for the most part, seemed discontented. Very different was the conduct of the long-haired Angora species, with their splendid coats white as snow, their pink eyes, and fiery appearance, forming one of the most interesting features. The crowds of children who almost, in these days, live at the Palace, make their choice without regard to the decision of the judges, and their favorites are at once exalted among themselves.

Ocean Meteorology.

Daniel Draper, Esq., Director of the New York Meteorological Observatory, has completed his report for the year 1873. The purpose of this report is more particularly to present a continuation of the report for the previous year, relating to storms crossing the Atlantic, and to show how its results were arrived at. He has shown heretofore that wind-storms are propagated from the shores of the United States to the shores of Britain, and in eighty-six predictions of storms to occur on the British coast, only three were failures. In the report just printed the course of several storms is carefully noted, as observed on board of different ships, and the conclusion arrived at that at the time they sailed the atmospheric disturbance might have been calculated and the vessel forewarned. Mr. Draper says it is now that the grand future of ocean meteorology is beginning to appear, for when self-recording instruments shall have been established in the Southern and Western portions of this continent, they will yield a far more correct and reliable record than is possible by personal observations, and, by furnishing estimates of the passage of atmospheric disturbances across the American continent, enable us to predict more correctly their movements across the Atlantic Ocean. The conclusion arrived at is that storms leaving America often cross the Atlantic, and the places where ships may meet them at sea, and the times of their arrival in Europe, may be predicted within certain limits.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

STANLEY IN AFRICA.

A Brief Outline of the Journalist-Explorer's Latest Achievements—A King with 2,000,000 Subjects and 300 Wives Gives Some Extraordinary Festivities and Displays.

The New York Herald has received by cable an interesting synopsis of the two last letters written by Henry M. Stanley from the heart of Africa. They were dated, respectively, April 12 and 14, and were sent from Uagalla, in Uganda, the capital of the country ruled by King Mtesa. They complete the subject dealt with in the letters received in October. The Herald's London correspondent telegraphs:

An interest almost as great as that of their contents attaches itself to the story of the journey of these letters from Stanley hither. They were committed to the custody of Col. Debelleford, whom Stanley met at Mtesa's court, and who left there April 17. This gentleman was apparently attached to the armed force which the Khedive has sent to those parts under Gordon. He was at Mtesa's capital with troops in pursuance of some object related to Gordon's expedition, and accepted Stanley's letters with a view to send them down the Nile by the Khedive's line of posts. He was on his return to Gordon's Station, and when he had nearly reached it was surprised and attacked by the Kari, by whom he was massacred, with thirty-six of his soldiers. Four of his soldiers escaped, and succeeded in reaching Gordon, who sent a detachment immediately to the scene of the tragedy. Stanley's letters, stained with blood, were found by this detachment among the bodies of the slain, and carried to headquarters, whence they were dispatched down the White Nile to Khartoum, and thence by the Khedive's couriers to Cairo.

Stanley describes fully in these letters his survey of the southern, eastern, and northeastern shores of the Victoria Niyanza. He gives thirty-seven observations of bays, inlets and creeks, minutely explored, with a view to determine their relation to the main body of water, and to exclude the possibility of their opening to other lakes or streams. He fully exhibits and demonstrates the unity of this magnificent sheet of water. He says: "Livingstone was wrong in reporting that the Victoria Niyanza consisted of five lakes. Speke correctly states that the Victoria Niyanza is one lake." Speke's two islands are proved by Stanley's observations to be peninsulas. One observation further confirms the great importance of the river Shimeeyu as the principal feeder of the lake, and the extreme source of the Nile yet discovered.

Stanley depicts graphically many incidents of his expedition. He had several conflicts with the treacherous slave-dealers on the lake. On one occasion he was attacked by 100 natives armed with spears, in 13 canoes, who were repulsed after a severe fight. Three natives were killed. He arrived at Mtesa's hunting camp at Msavura April 12, where he was received with great ceremony and cordiality by the King. In Stanley's honor the King directed extraordinary festivities and displays. One feature of the display was a naval review on the lake, of 84 canoes, manned by 2,500 men. On the second day, in addition to the naval maneuvers, there were races, in which 84 canoes were engaged, each propelled by 30 oarsmen, the King leading the fleet personally in the presence of a great throng of spectators. Among the onlookers were the 300 wives of the King. On the third day there was bird-shooting and target practice by 3,000 troops. On the fourth day they returned to Mtesa's capital.

This King has 2,000,000 subjects. Stanley praises his great intelligence, and depicts him as a ruler whose dominion affords the best augury for the possible civilization of Africa. He is a Mussulman, but your correspondent regards his conversion to Christianity as possible, and suggests this labor as a field for missionary effort that is capable of affording very brilliant results.

Picturesque accounts are given of the richness and beauty of the country. There are valuable geographical notes in further illustration of the map, including soundings of the Niyanza and an explanation of the White Nile above Ripon Falls.

Taken altogether with the letters previously received this completes the account of the grand discovery that it has been Stanley's good fortune to make through the good will of King Mtesa.

Courtship Among the Indians.

The age of womanhood is hailed with gladness by the parents, and is the occasion of rejoicing in the form of a feast, to which are invited all the friends of the family. On this great occasion the joyful father of the girl gives away as many ponies, robes, and blankets to his friends and the poor of his tribe as his possessions permit. Now the young girl is careful of her personal appearance, as the "bucks" will watch her. She adorns herself in garments of flaming colors, paints in an extravagant manner, and powders her hair with sweet-smelling leaves. Polygamy is the almost universal practice. There are three modes of marriage. The courtship of one form of marriage is conducted in a singular manner. A young "buck," becoming enamored of a young squaw, waits a convenient time, when, approaching stealthily, he wraps his blanket around her, and then, holding her in a firm grasp, pours his tale of love and devotion into her sometimes unwilling ear. This being completed, he goes to the father, and the price of the maiden is agreed upon according to the young man's wealth; one to three and sometimes more ponies are given for the girl. This transaction being finished, the girl becomes the warrior's wife, whether she has said "yes" or "no." There is one thing certain, however, that while she remains with him she obeys him. The squaw may leave her husband, or rather she may be deserted by him, and then going back to her family she is ready to be bought again. There seems no special regard between the "buck" and the squaw. In view of this fact, the Indian, strangely enough, evinces a strong affection for his children. Where there is no love between man and wife, you would suppose this could not exist. It is nevertheless a fact that the children are dearer to an Indian than his horses. Of course the squaws grow old fast, and soon become ugly hags. At this stage they are treated as an incumbrance. Old men, as well as women, have been left frequently on the prairie to die. A small store of provisions to sustain life for a few days is given them; this gone, death by starvation follows. This, I am told, is no longer practiced by the agency Indians.—Tribune Letter from Red Cloud Agency.

UNCLE SAM'S TREASURY.

Synopsis of the Annual Report of Treasurer New.

The annual report of Treasurer New shows that out of a total nominal balance of $173,876,064.95 on hand June 30, 1875, there were deducted "unavailable items" aggregating $29,094,075.96. The principal item was $28,101,644.91, due from the States to the United States on account of the act of Congress approved June 23, 1836, which is omitted from the statements of cash balance of the Treasury, but which is carried nevertheless from quarter to quarter and from year to year in the account of the Treasurer. The other "unavailable items" deducted were: Balance due at the outbreak of the rebellion from the United States Depository at Galveston, Texas, and the Branch Mint at Charlotte, N. C., and Dahlonega, Ga., amounting to $60,728.69; from the Sub-Treasury at New Orleans (May & Whitaker defalcation in 1867), $675,325.22; from the First National Bank of Selma, Ala., (failed), $38,985.75; from the Venango National Bank of Franklin, Penn., (failed), $217,391.38. In addition to the above the following items are also unavailable, and although they were not deducted they should be, namely: Due from First National Bank of Washington, D. C., (failed), $194,948.24 (against which the Treasurer holds $100,000 Union and Central Pacific bonds as security); amount stolen from the Treasury June 2, 1875 (no part of which had been recovered at the close of the fiscal year), $47,097.65. Deficits in United States Depositories as follows: Pittsburgh, in 1867, $2,126.11; Santa Fe, N. M., in 1866 and 1867, $7,448.27; Baltimore, in 1870, $1,196.87. Deficits in Sub-Treasuries, as follows: New York, in 1867, $87,206.70; New Orleans, in 1867, $5,566.31; Philadelphia, in 1875, $882.50, together with $765,966.37, special item of deficit in the bullion fund of the Branch Mint at San Francisco, Cal., which occurred in various ways between 1857 and 1869, amounting to $419,243.84. It appears, therefore, that there should be deducted from the cash balance, as reported in the monthly debt statement of July 1, 1875, the total sum of $765,996.39.

The Treasurer says three years will probably elapse before a final settlement of Gen. Spinner's accounts can be made, as many of them are outstanding, and the Auditors and Controllers cannot pass upon them before that time.

The number of national banks organized and which deposited security for circulation, in the fiscal year of 1875 was 127. The number organized to July 1, 1875, was 2,282. The number doing business June 30, 1875, was 2,089. Thirty-five failed prior to July 1, 1875; three failed in the fiscal year of 1875. The number that went into voluntary liquidation prior to July 1, 1874, was 97; in the fiscal year of 1875, 36. Ten wound up business for the purpose of consolidating with other banks.

The total number of official letters written during that period was 104,163. The total force in the Treasurer's office consists of 396 persons, their salaries aggregating $414,292.

Tramps, and How to Deal With Them.

Some of the village newspapers in this State, says the Cincinnati Commercial, complain of the number of "tramps" going from town to town, asking for raiment, shelter and food, and the proposition has been started to call a convention of representatives of all the cities and villages for the adoption of some uniform system of dealing with them. Various expedients have been tried in European cities, and some of our own; and that which seems to be most favorably received involves compensation in labor for the relief afforded. The tramps are given some kind of employment, which does not require special skill, and work a certain number of hours, or do a required "task." We see no reason why this system should not be adopted. The professional tramp is a fellow who shirks labor, though he professes an intense desire for it where there is no prospect that his desire will be gratified. We recall a wealthy farmer who lived on the post road between Cleveland and Pittsburg, when railroads were comparatively rare in the West, and who was plagued by tramps passing to and from the cities. He finally adopted the rule to give a meal of victuals to any one of them who would saw a certain amount of firewood; the task was not a large one, and an active man could get through with it in ten or fifteen minutes. It soon became known to the professionals that if they ate at that farmer's house they must work, and he was not much annoyed after that. There are always certain duties to be performed about station-houses, city buildings, etc., for the doing of which men have to be hired. By employing the tramps to perform them the corporation might be relieved of one item of its expenses, and at the same time aid those who profess to be on the tramp because they can find nothing to do.

Free-Letter Delivery.

The annual report of the free-delivery division of the Postoffice Department shows that there are now employed by that branch of the service 2,195 carriers, distributed among a total of eighty-seven offices, and that they delivered during the fiscal year nearly 228,000,000 letters, 68,000,000 newspapers, and some 34,000,000 postal-cards, beside collecting 243,000,000 pieces of various kinds. The total cost of the service was $1,880,042, and the receipts from postage on local matter amounted to $1,947,559. As compared with the preceding fiscal year these aggregates show an increase in the number of carriers of 146, and in the number of pieces handled of 71,000,000, together with an increase of 4 per cent. in the cost of the service, and of 21 per cent. in the receipts from local postage, which now for the first time exceed the cost of the free-delivery system.

FIVE shillings is the fine Eli Stacey paid for driving pigs through the streets of Bridgewater, England, one recent Sabbath morning, "the same not being a work of necessity or charity on the Lord's day."

PROF. COX, State Geologist, has just been making a geological exploration of Huntington county. No coal on the Wabash is his verdict.

OLD Trader, the father of the man who killed his brother-in-law, Martin, at Terre Haute, and who was in jail as an accessory to the murder, died a few nights since.

JOHN WORLEY, a 12-year-old Kokomo boy, picked up in the street a box containing two strychnine pills, and swallowed them. It proved an overdose, and his life was saved.

A RECENT number of the Lafayette Courier announces the death in that city of Caleb Kee, in the 87th year of his age. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and was present at the surrender of Hull.

CHARLES BICKEL, who killed Robert A. Hill, at Evansville, on the 24th of May last, by cutting him with a knife, has been found guilty of manslaughter, and sentenced to an imprisonment of two years.

REV. MARTIN HOUSER died at the residence of George Fry, in Hope, Bartholomew county, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. He was the founder of that village and of the Moravian congregation there.

THE people of Madison have been a little alarmed about reports of small-pox in the city, but the Marshal, who has visited all the places where the disease was reported to exist, says he can find no cases.

THE Goshen Democrat says: "The white postal fast train ran from Goshen to Elkhart, the other night, ten miles, in seven minutes. It blew out every switch light as it passed, and made the gravel fly in the air like hailstones.

J. M. BRADDOCK, of Etna Green, was seriously if not fatally shot while hunting the other day. His gun struck a piece of timber while he was walking along, discharging it and filling his face with fine shot. He will lose both eyes.

THOMAS LAWSON, a boy who lives in Knox county, a few miles below Vincennes, saw a deer swimming the Wabash last Sunday morning, and jumping into a canoe, paddled after it, and killed it with an axe. The deer weighed 150 pounds.

A WELL-KNOWN Wabash Valley railroad conductor has boasted for years that he is a "dead shot." He proved it last week on a hunting expedition by stealing a dead bird out of a wagon, shooting into the air, and bring it back as a trophy.

AT Ossian, Wells county, last Saturday, while John Hoover was walking with a friend who was carrying a gun, the latter accidentally let the weapon fall. It was discharged, and Hoover's foot so badly mangled by the charge that amputation was necessitated.

A FEW days ago, while a man named Enos W. McKinney was driving to Evansville with his son, the latter had reason to alight, and when about to get in again the horse suddenly turned, jamming the boy's body between the body of the vehicle and the wheel in such a manner as to tear a great gash in his abdomen. It is thought he cannot recover.

ON Tuesday, John Uphile, an old man about 60 years of age, living near Huntington, was shot by his own son and killed. The young man was about to shoot a beef, when the rifle was accidentally discharged, the bullet hitting the old man who was sitting on a straw-stack near by. It entered the abdomen and pierced the kidney. He lived but a few hours.

THE State Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-Fellows met at Indianapolis, on Wednesday last. Reports show that twenty-three new lodges have been instituted during the last six months, and four petitions in hand. Over 1,600 brothers and nearly 200 families have been relieved, at an outlay of over $41,000. There are 479 effective lodges in the State, with 2,586 working members.

THE death of Dr. McMillen, of Bedford, Lawrence county, announced some days ago, occurred under the following circumstances: He returned from visiting a patient late at night, and as he was suffering from headache went to his medicine case for something to relieve it. By mistake he took a large dose of digitalis. He soon discovered his error, but though help was immediately summoned by his wife he was soon past all aid.

AT Merom, Sullivan county, last week, Jonas Wright commenced the erection of a small frame building, and when night came had the rafters up. A rumor having gone abroad that the building was to be utilized as a liquor saloon, some indignant citizens went to work during the night, tore down the frame and scattered the timbers around promiscuously. Wright, hearing the noise, went out to save his property, but was overawed by superior numbers. He caused the arrest of several citizens, but one was acquitted on trial before a Justice, and the others were discharged.

THE twenty-ninth annual report of the officers of the Blind Asylum for the year ending Oct. 31 has been filed. The institution is in the highest degree prosperous. The resources for the year were $34,262.28; disbursements, $34,189.79; the balance added to the appropriation for the current year makes the available resources $22,578.49. During the year 116 pupils were enrolled. The number now in the institution is 103. The limited accommodations forbid a larger attendance. There is an indigent graduates' fund amounting to $820 founded by Mrs. Nancy Fitzpatrick, of Delaware county.

THERE are three very foolish men living in the town of Huntington. One is a lawyer, one a Justice of the Peace, and the last of the trio an editor. The lawyer's name is W. C. Cocher, the name of the Justice is J. Z. Scott, and that of the editor is Winter. The lawyer is foolish in that he spoke ill words of the Justice, the Justice is foolish in that he rebuked the lawyer and then turned his attention to the editor, and the editor is foolish in that he rushed out the next day and fired three shots at the Justice. The Justice of the Peace—a poor Justice, that !—and the lawyer—a poor lawyer, that !—have escaped arrest, but the editor—poor editor, that !—has been fined $40.

November, 1775—1875.

On the 1st day of November, 1775, the Continental Congress, in session in Philadelphia, received the royal proclamation which cut off the last hope of terminating the difficulties between the mother country and the colonies by any other means than the stern resort to arms. In July, as noted in the article for that month, Congress adopted a petition to the crown, and four days after its adoption Richard Penn, one of the proprietors, sailed for England with the document in charge. The formal reception was refused, the Cabinet deciding that the colonies should be treated with one by one, and that no recognition should be made of their confederation. But, though the petition was not formally received, it was answered by a royal proclamation declaring the Americans in "open and avowed rebellion." Certain classes were directed against "divers wicked and desperate persons," within the realm, who were in traitorous correspondence with the rebels in the colonies. At the Royal Exchange (London) the proclamation was received with a general hiss. After the publication of the proclamation, the American agents, Penn and Arthur Lee, were permitted to present the petition of Congress to Lord Dartmouth, who informed them that no official reply was to be expected. The tidings of these events, as already stated, reached America in the early part of November, together with the intelligence that the British government was in treaty with other powers for soldiers and that more ships and more troops were to be sent over for the subjugation of the colonies. Step by step, and cauticusly, Congress proceeded. The marked measures of this month were resolutions recommending New Hampshire and North Carolina to establish forms of government, such as, in their judgment, would best produce the happiness of the people and secure peace and good order "during the continuance of the present dispute between Great Britain and the colonies." Though in their minds the majority of the delegates saw no end to the dispute but in the sundering of the relations between the colonies and the crown, they left that interpretation to the people.

In the British Parliament, Richard Penn, having been summoned as a witness before the House of Lords, expressed a positive opinion that the American Congress had formed no design to assert the independence of the colonies. The tenor of the petition which he had brought over supported this view; and it was moved that the petition should be made the base of a plan of conciliation. The proposition was rejected. In the Commons a bill, introduced by Edmund Burke, repealing the acts of Parliament against the colonies, and granting amnesty for the past, was rejected by a vote of two to one. Another similar proposition shared the same fate. There were changes made in the Ministry by which the British Cabinet became a unit on the hostile policy which had been resolved upon; and despite of protests from various directions, the government became fixed in that fatal policy. Of course these proceedings could not have been known in the colonies. Enough, however, was known to lead the Americans to anticipate the course of events. And it was known, also, that the cause of America had many friends in England, Ireland and Scotland, as well as on the continent of Europe. The very phraseology of the proclamation against "divers wicked and desperate persons within the realm," accused of correspondence with America, fixed, if it did not prompt the appointment of a secret committee to correspond with those "wicked and desperate persons." Franklin was chairman of this committee. Harrison, Johnson, Dickinson and Jay were the other members.

The public feeling from one end of the colonies to the other was intense, and such letters of the period, from men and women, as have been preserved, mark decided patriotism or faint loyalty. Those were the days that forced men to the courage of action, and women to the great courage of endurance. Jefferson wrote to a friend or refugee who had sought protection within the British lines: "There is not in the British Empire a man who more cordially loves a union with Great Britain than I do; but I will cease to exist before I yield to a connection on such terms as the British Parliament propose. And in this I speak the sentiments of America."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ways in Which the Sun Influences the Earth.

If we now turn to the sun we find that there are three distinct forms of motion which animate his surface-particles. In the first place, each particle is carried round by the rotation of our luminary. Secondly, each particle is influenced by the gigantic meteorological disturbances of the surface, in virtue of which it may acquire a velocity ranging as high as 130 or 140 miles a second; and lastly, each particle, on account of its high temperature, is vibrating with extreme rapidity, and the energy of these vibrations communicated to us by means of the ethereal medium produces the well known light and heat effect of the sun.

Now, is it philosophical to suppose that it is only the last of these three motions that influences our earth, while the other two produce absolutely no effect? On the contrary, we are, I think, compelled, by considerations connected with the theory of energy, to attribute an influence, whether great or small, to the first two as well as to the last.

We are thus led to suppose that the sun must influence the earth in three ways, one depending on his rotation, another on his meteorological disturbance, and a third by means of the vibrations of his surface particles.

But we have already seen that, as a matter of fact, the sun does appear to influence the earth in three distinct ways—one magnetically and meteorologically, depending apparently on his period of rotation; a second cyclonically, depending apparently on the meteorological conditions of his surface; and a third, by means of his light and heat.—Popular Science Monthly for November.

TEAS—Our Tea trade is the wonder of the country. No one ever dreamt such a trade could be built up. We sell more chests daily than some houses do pounds, and still our trade is increasing. It is no uncommon thing for us to purchase two hundred chests at a time, and here is the great element of our success. As by purchasing such larger quantities direct of the Importers we save our consumer, at least the three extra profits of jobbers, speculator and wholesale grocer, who make 10 to 20 cents per pound. This our customers get the benefit of. No middle men with us. As with teas, so with sugar coffee, syrup and all other goods. No secret—it is simply in purchasing all our goods at first hands and re-selling direct to our customers at small margin, and save them at least 20 to 40 cents a pound on tea and 20 per cent on all other goods.

A ROMANCE OF THE RAIL.

A Young Woman Who Wanted a Seat for Her Lover Changes Her Mind

From the Salt Lake Herald.

They came into the car at a wayside station together. She was in the lead a position she is not likely to surrender as long as they travel together. A tall brunette, with a sharp face, piercing black eyes, hair black as a reven's wing a long, aquiline nose, with a mole on the side of it, a mouth the cut of which betokened determination and force. She had passed the shady side of the teens and had climbed to the apex of a quarter of a century. He was a guileless youth over whose tow-colored head some eighteen summers had passed,' an innocent hobbledehoy, just released from his mother's apron-strings. On him she cast loving glances, and his face, suffused in blushes, was turned with a timid, appealing look to her.

The car was crowded, and eligible seats not easily obtained. About the middle of the car a sedate traveler occupied a seat to himself. Thither the irrepressible lady pressed her way. The sedate traveler rose, and with much courtesy invited her to take a seat next to the window, and when she was seated he calmly ensconced himself upon the vacant half of the chair. By this time the young man whom she was escorting had come up. He placed his hand upon the back of the seat, looked appealingly on the face of his protectress, and timidly around the car. He was evidently embarrassed, and did not know what to do with himself. The sharp-nosed brunette eyed the traveler by her side with a sharpness that almost amounted to malignity.

But the traveler seemed all unconscious of the scrutiny to which he was subjected, and looked away over the fields through an opposite window.

The brunette could no longer endure to see her callow beau standing forlorn and thus she addressed the sedate traveler, whose eyes were wandering far away and whose thoughts were with the dear ag loving ones at home.

"I say, stranger——"

"Well say on," responded the sedate traveler.

"I say, look here, stranger."

"Well, what have you got to show me?" said the sedate man.

"I want you to know that this young gentleman standing up there is my feller."

"Oh! I'm glad to hear it. How long have you had him? Take care of him I suppose?"

"Now you just look here, stranger; this young man is my feller, and I'm bound to see that nobody shall impose on him. You hear me? Now, if you had any manners you'd just get right up and let him have a seat by his darling."

"Oh, I am very happy in your society You cannot imagine how much pleasure it has given me to furnish you a seat where you can see through the window. Beside, I always took a special delight in being near charming ladies like yourself," replied the traveler.

"But, sir, he is my feller, sir, my beau—do you understand?"

"Is that so? Who would have tho't it? And does his mother place him under your protection when he goes abroad?"

"Now, you look here, stranger, me and that young man expect to be engaged, and we've been keeping company together, and me and him wants to have a talk together. and you are real mean if you don't give him a seat by me, so that we can talk; that's what I think.

The imperturable traveler straightened up, then leaned over in the direction of the sharp-faced brunette, smiled most benighly and lovingly on her, and thus spoke:

"Charming lady I would be most happy to accommodate you but you see I'm a pilgrim and a stranger, way worn and weary, and a long way from home. Besides, my heart is just now beating tatto of ecstatic satisfaction because of your charming presence. Being a bachelor, and so near one so lovely and engaging, how can I forego the pleasure I now enjoy? I have had dreams in my time meeting one to whom I could reveal all this sad heart of mine would fain no longer to conceal. You are the impersonation of my dreams, and now would you drive me from your heart? I saw you come as a star rises above the horizon, and the light of your eyes has illuminated my soul. Say, beautiful stranger, would you drive me hence?"

The sedate traveler ceased to speak.

The fire had gone down in the brunette's eyes, the severe expression had vanished from her face stern lips had relaxed their rigidity and parted just enough to reveat the ivory structure within and in a tone that was soft and low she asked:

"Did you say you was a bachelor?"

"Aye beautiful stranger, that's my fortunate station."

Then the brunette turned her eyes softly upon her feller," who stood twitching his fingers and gazing around in an abashed, timid sort of way, and thus she addressed him:

"Tom, I guess you'd better get another seat, while I speak with this gentleman."

'Aw-ah, Miss. Brown,' simpered a swell to a young lady, as he leaned over her father's gate, the other evening,'what might you be—ah—be dawing?"

"Gathering leaves autumn leaves, replied she, glancing up from her work.

'What daw you gethaw them nasty things faw?' he further drawled.

'Why to press them to be sure,' she answered.

'Oh—ah! I—I with I wath an autumn leaf.'

And as he dodged a basketful of them and watch the fair one plunge into the house, he wondered what he had been saying so dweadful hawwid.

What to do in Case of an Accident.

Prof. Wilder, of Cornell University gives these short rules for action in case of accident:

For dust in the eyes, avoid rubbing; dash cold water in them; remove cinders, ets, with the round point of a lead pencil.

Remove insects from the ear by tepid water. Never put a hard instrument into the ear.

If an artery is cut, compress it above the wound; if a vein is cut, compress it below.

If choked, go upon all fours and cough,

For slight burns, dip the part in cold water; if the skin is destroyed, cover with varnish.

For apodlexy, raise the head and body for fainting lay the body flat.

One year ago, they clasped hands over a gate in the dusk of evening, and she said she would be his little angel until life was no more. Yesterday noon he went home and found his Sunday suit in strips on the floor, his silk hat kicked it, and his fine boots cut down, and she yelled out from the bed room:—"Is that you, you old skunk? Well I don't think you'll trot off again without splitting any wood!"

Murderous Assault on Another Herald Editor.

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 25—James McDermott, who has had temporary editorial management of the Herald since the nearly fatal shooting of its editor, Chas. F. Murray, on Monday afternoon, was assailed and shot at to' night, by two ruffians, while passing a small common on Scott street, on his way to the home of the friend with whom he is stopping here. They dragged him some distance when he at last freed the revolver and fired two shots at them, which together with the arrival of the neighbors, caused them to take to their heels. Whether their object was robbery or some dark design is not yet clearly apparent. Following so close upon the shooting of Mr. Murray, the affair will create a good deal of excitement.

Sudden Death.

A Newville boy named Will Burns, the son of a man well known through this section, on Thursday last met his death in a very singular manner. It seems that him and other boy named Oscar Hull started to singing school held in the Brethern Church this side of the river. When they came to the bridge, which is about a hundred yards long, they, according to the custom of boys, started to run through it to see which could beat to the other side. On reaching the end, they slacked up, and and Willie it is said almost instantly fell and when picked up was found to be dead. He was a fine boy and in the the prime of boyhood—being sixteen years of age. He was in comparative good health and his sudden and singular death created quite a sensation. It is supposed he sustained some inward injury through the exertion of running. —Hicksville Ind't.

There may be such a thing as love at first sight said an Auburn girl, I cant see where it comes in. There's Fred, I saw him a hundred times before I loved him an yet, I should'nt have fallen in love when I did, if he had'nt got that situation in a store.

"How much does he get a week," asked another.

"Five dollars, and stealings throwed in,"

"Why, la me. my man makes $2 a day and we can scarcely live.

"Well, that may be true, Mary, but between you and me Fred's stealings are more that his wages."

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1875.

GOSSIP OF THE DAY.

THE Official Gazette, of St. Petersburg, says "the peace of Europe is firmly established, and no danger of its disturbance exists."

THERE are at least two men living that will forever bless the much-abused corset. They are the two thieves who the other day sawed their way out of the Council Bluffs Jail with a saw made of a corset steel furnished them by a female prisoner.

WHEN an impertinent interviewer in Washington asked Secretary Bristow whether he intended to take a house and entertain this winter, the Secretary gruffly replied: "I make it a rule never to interfere with my superior officers; ask Mrs. Bristow." What a husband that Secretary must be! Will not the women vote for him?

THE following neat obituary notice is from the San Antonio (Tex.) Herald: "Pancho Vidal was recently hung by Mexican authorities at Matamoras. He was a murderer and a thief of great executive ability, and Cortina in his retirement will drop a silent tear for him. May wild jackasses revel about his grandfather's grave!"

THE great astronomer of Paris, Leverrier, who discovered the planet Neptune, which could eat up this little earth of ours and not suffer from indigestion in consequence, has made a prediction which is noteworthy. It is that the winter of 1875–76 will be uncommonly severe. Enormous quantities of snow are to fall in December and January.

THE sleepy old newspapers of London are beginning to exhibit some signs of enterprise in the matter of gathering news. The Times and Telegraph, we read in a current paragraph, have each chartered the use of a special wire between Paris and London, and now all their Paris letters are telegraphed instead of being sent by mail, as heretofore.

A LONELY house on the coast of Cork, Ireland, has been the scene of a dreadful accident. A barrel of petroleum was washed ashore from a wreck, and a woman named Sullivan used a portion of the oil for the house lamp. The oil overflowed from the receptacle and set fire to the house, and four—one account says six—persons were burned to death on the spot, or received injuries which proved fatal in a few hours.

THERE is little room for doubt that the passengers and crew of the steamship Waco were the victims of a wholesale murder—a murder growing out of the recklessness and greed of the vessel-owners, who, in violation of law, crammed the ship's hold with petroleum and other highly inflammable and combustible articles. This fact is probably susceptible of absolute proof, and there is presented a one opportunity to make a terrible example of the men who are responsible for the sickening horror.

A NEW style of rat has been imported into this country from Africa. It is called the "roof-rat." It is an aristocratic kind of vermin, cleanly in manner and shapely in appearance. It affects the attics of houses, and is a relentless foe of the rodent that consents to occupy the sub-basement. It is believed that the "roof-rat," with its superior civilization, will exterminate the present house-rat, and demonstrate the Darwinian theory of the "survival of the fittest." Anything for a change.

THE name of Chief Justice Waite has been prominently mentioned of late in connection with the Republican nomination for the Presidency. Recently, a delegation called upon the Chief Justice at Washington, and asked him if he would consent to become a candidate. Mr. Waite responded that he would under no circumstances accept a nomination. He was very grateful, and all that sort of thing, but he now occupied the highest position possible in his profession. His ambition, he says, is completely satisfied, and would have no other official joys.

THE bonds, coupons, etc., belonging to the Indian trust fund, in the hands of the Secretary of the Interior, have just been counted by a committee of gentlemen belonging to the Treasury Department at Washington, from which it appears that Lo, the poor Indian, is not so poor as is generally believed. His wealth foots up as follows: Amount of bonds on hand, $5,107,516.83; amount of coupons, $1,329,343; amount of certificates of interest, $11,636. Total, $6,448,495.83. In addition to the funds held in trust by the Secretary of the Interior, there are now funds in the Treasury belonging to various Indian tribes amounting in the aggregate to $7,816,016.27, upon which the Government pays an annuity of 5 per cent. per annum.

THE Postmaster-General dares to say of the ladies in his department: "None of them ever marry, or die, or resign. In fact, the Dead Letter division is a sort of mausoleum of buried affections—a place not governed by natural laws—for those who enter its charmed portals seem to lose all the motives and hopes and aspirations which sway and govern the denizens of the outside world. I regret that it is so, but so it is." The fact probably is that it is demoralizing to read other's letters—especially such letters as would be likely to find their way to our official epistolary Greenwood.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

JOHN CLARK was hung at Rochester, N. Y., on the 19th inst., for the murder of a policeman in that city some months ago....At Erie, Pa., a few days ago, Jacob Wabagoans, a German 60 years old, in a fit of anger shot and mortally wounded his daughter Anna, and then committed suicide by blowing his brains out.

THREE miners were killed at Locustdale, Pa., last week, by the accidental explosion of a box of powder....Moody and Sankey held their last meeting in Brooklyn on Friday, Nov. 19, and opened in Philadelphia to an immense audience on Sunday, the 21st....Lodicia and Albert Fredenburg, mother and son, have been sentenced to death at Herkimer, N. Y., for the murder of Orlo Davis, in June last....Hon. Orrin S. Ferry, United States Senator from Connecticut, died at his home in Norwalk, in that State, on the 21st of November. His disease was paralysis.

A "GRAND" fox-hunt, which had been extensively advertised, came off in the vicinity of New York city the other day, and proved a grand failure. The riding was a success, but the "run" proved a failure. The dogs lost the fox, the huntsmen lost the dogs, the wagon-drivers lost the huntsmen, and the huntsmen lost their tempers....The brewery and malt house of David Jones, in New York, was burned last week. Loss, $370,000.

WILLIAM B. ASTOR, one of the richest men in the United States, died in New York last week. He was the oldest son of John Jacob Astor, who died in 1848, and who left the bulk of his immense fortune to him. The father accumulated his fortune in the fur business, and the son has increased the portion left to him by rentals from improved real estate in New York city. The deceased owned 3,000 houses in the city of New York, and his fortune is estimated at $50,000,000 to $75,000,000. He leaves two sons, who are in active business in New York....Another heavy New York tea house—that of Bass & Clark—has gone to the wall....Mrs. Charlotte Chew and her daughter Laura were burned to death at Camden, N. J., the other day, by the explosion of a kerosene lamp....A shocking murder is reported from Pittsburgh. A woman employed in a public hospital went into the room of a lunatic named Hile, to clean it. He seized and choked her until she was insensible, and then drove the small end of a broomstick into her brain.

THE WEST.

THE great walking-match between Edward Payson Weston, of New York, and Daniel O'Leary, of Chicago, was concluded at the Exposition building, in Chicago, on Saturday evening, Nov. 20, and resulted in a victory for the Western man. The distance walked was 500 miles, O'Leary completing his 500th mile in 142 hours and 13 minutes, Weston in the same time having scored 451 miles. This is the greatest pedestrian feat ever accomplished by man, and justly entitles O'Leary to be classed as the champion pedestrian of the world....Capt. A. H. Bogardus, the famous pigeon shot, was tried in the Criminal Court of St. Louis, last week, for a violation of the law against cruelty to animals, the offense charged being that he shot certain pigeons in a match. He was convicted and fined $50....It is said that the whisky ring at Chicago is quite as extensive as that at St. Louis, and that the trials will make similar disclosures.

THE trial of Gen. John McDonald, ex-Supervisor of Revenue, at St. Louis, has resulted in his conviction, the jury returning a verdict of guilty upon each of the eight counts of the indictment.

THE First National Bank of Monroe, Mich., was entered by burglars recently, and relieved of the $15,000 in money....An old man named Frederick Happel, living near Fort Wayne, Ind., recently murdered his wife by shooting her with a rifle. He then reloaded the weapon and ended his own life by putting a bullet through his head....A youthful trapeze performer was fatally injured while performing in a Cleveland theater, a few days ago, by falling from the trapeze to the stage....Chicago was the scene of a cold-blooded and unprovoked murder on Thanksgiving Day. The victim was Mr. Chas. Whyland, one of the best-known restaurateurs in the city, and one of the proprietors of the St. Elmo Restaurant, attached to Kuhn's Hotel. The murderer is a notorious gambler named Henry Davis. There is much indignation in Chicago over the dastardly deed, and there are threats of cleaning out the whole gambling fraternity.

THE SOUTH.

HENRY NICHOLSON was executed at Coushatta, La., on Friday, the 19th inst., for the murder of Marcus Young, a peddler....It is said efforts are being made in the South to induce Secretary Bristow to supplement his raid on the whisky ring by a vigorous war on the cotton ring. It is well known that the Government, during the three or four years following the close of the war, was swindled out of millions of dollars by cotton frauds in the South....A convention in the interest of the Southern Pacific Railroad was held at Memphis last week. About 150 delegates were present.

A ROW occurred at Richmond, Va., the other day, between two noted ex-rebel Generals—Bradley T. Johnson and John D. Imboden. Johnson assaulted Imboden with a cowhide, administering sundry blows, and afterward drew a pistol, but before he could use it the parties were separated and placed under arrest....Wallace & Co., wholesale dry goods dealers of New Orleans, have suspended. Liabilities, $750,000; assets, $500,000.

A NEGRO named John Brown was hung by a mob at Fort Valley, Ga., last week, for having assaulted a white lady.

GENERAL.

A DISPATCH from San Antonio, Tex., dated Nov. 19, reports that a body of Texas militia had followed a band of Mexican cattle thieves across the Rio Grande and engaged them in battle, killing four of them. The greatest excitement prevailed in consequence on both sides of the river, and a general war along the Rio Grande is among the probabilities.

THE banks of Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia have issued a circular urging other banks to secure signatures to a petition for Congress to repeal the law requiring the affixing of two-cent stamps on checks.

THE news of Vice-President Wilson's death created a general feeling of sorrow throughout the entire country....A National Railroad Convention, called in the interest of the Southern Pacific road, was held in St. Louis last week, and was largely attended. Judge Stanley Matthews, of Cincinnati, presided....The National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry has just concluded an interesting session at Louisville, Ky. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Master, John T. Jones, of Arkansas; Overseer, J. L. Woodman, of Michigan; Lecturer, A. B. Smedley, of Iowa; Steward, A. J. Vaughn, of Mississippi; Assistant Steward, Mortimer Whitehead, of New Jersey; Chaplain, S. H. Ellis, of Ohio; Treasurer, F. M. McDowell; Secretary, O. H. Kelley, of Kentucky; Gatekeeper, O. Dinwiddie, of Indiana; Ceres, Mrs. J. T. Jones, of Arkansas.

A WASHINGTON correspondent says there is much strong comment there over the manner in which the body of the late Vice-President Wilson was cut up by various surgeons who rushed to the Capitol upon hearing of his death. He was scarcely cold before they had taken out his brain and weighed it, and had other parts of the body pretty generally distributed around the Vice-President's chamber. Now there are many questionings as to the authority by which this carving up of the second officer of the nation was done....It is stated that Vice-President Wilson was engaged to be married to Mrs. John A. Jackson, of Williamson county, Tenn. The vows were to be consummated on the recovery of his health. It was his object mainly to see her that he visited Nashville last spring. They met first at Washington, and had kept up a constant correspondence since. Mrs. Jackson is one of the most distinguished and highly-cultured ladies in the South....A reunion of Federal and Confederate soldiers is proposed at Philadelphia next year.

WASHINGTON.

SECRETARY BRISTOW has directed that the expenses of the Custom Houses in Chicago, Milwaukee, and other places shall be cut down 15 per cent....The work of reorganizing the navy is now going on, and there is unusual activity in all the yards of the country....Hon. Bluford Wilson, Solicitor for the Treasury Department, who has had the general supervision of the prosecutions against the whisky ring, says the country yet has no idea of the vastness and the wide ramifications of the combinations against the revenue. He has no doubt of the complete final success of the Government and the utter rout of the ring, but thinks that considerable time may be required to knock the bottom all out of it so that it can never be built up again....It is said in naval circles, a Washington correspondent telegraphs, that the repair and preparation of vessels have no more reference to Spanish affairs than to those of any other country. There is no excitement concerning Spain and Cuba. The President, some time ago, while conversing on Cuban affairs, merely referred to what he had heretofore said in his annual messages, but gave no intimation as to what he should say on the same subject in his next message to Congress....The President has issued an order consolidating various collection districts throughout the country, and dismissing the Collectors, with their working force, in all the districts consolidated. Forty-four Collectors, with their subordinates, have been dropped. The following are the numbers from each State:

Maine	3	South Carolina	1
New Hampshire	2	Kentucky	1
Vermont	1	Tennessee	2
New York	9	Ohio	7
New Jersey	2	Indiana	3
Pennsylvania	4	Illinois	4
Maryland	1	Michigan	1
North Carolina	1	Arkansas	1

It is estimated that the cutting down will result in a saving of upward of half a million dollars.

WILLIAM BURNETT, Supervising Inspector-General of Steam Vessels, in his annual report, states that the number of lives lost by accidents to steam vessels during the year was 405, namely: From explosion, 51; fire, 273; snags, wrecks and sinking, 64....Postmaster-General Jewell, in his forthcoming annual report, will recommend a reduction of the rate of postage for transient newspapers....The report of the Chief of the Secret Service will show a greater capture of counterfeits and counterfeiters than in any previous year....The annual report of Dr. Linderman, Director of the Mint, shows the coinage of gold for the fiscal year to have been $33,553,965; silver, $10,070,368; minor pieces, $230,375; total, $43,854,708. The deposits were: gold, $38,556,293; silver, $16,070,626. Dr. Linderman thinks that two years' yield of the mines will furnish sufficient silver to manufacture all the fractional currency coin that can be advantageously used in the country after the redemption of the fractional notes. He thinks the trade dollar should be continued, if for no other purpose than to make a local market for silver. The Director speaks at length of the course of gold and silver during the last three years, saying that the monetary troubles have not been caused by insufficient supplies of gold, but by its having been withheld in large sums from circulation, and the diminished use of silver as money.

HON. HENRY WILSON, the Vice President of the United States, died at Washington at half past 7 o'clock on the morning of the 22d of November. The sad event was quite unexpected, his improved condition and general symptoms being regarded as favorable to the recovery of his health. Mr. Wilson was 63 years of age.

THE annual report of Gen. Sherman to the Secretary of War states that the aggregate strength of the line of the army, according to the last reports received, is 1,540 officers and 24,031 enlisted men, made up as follows: Five regiments of artillery, 780 officers, 2,504 men; ten regiments of cavalry, 422 officers, 7,206 men; twenty-five regiments of infantry, 848 officers, 11,000 men; available recruits, hospital stewards, ordnance sergeants, etc., etc., 3,321. Gen. Sherman, referring to Indian depredations on the frontier, says the damage to life and property by Indians has been less during the past year than in any former year, and the prospect is that, as the country settles up, it will be less and less each year, until all the Indians are established on small reservations; but until they acquire habits of industry in farming or in stock-raising they will need food from the General Government, because the game on which they have hitherto subsisted has diminished very rapidly.

ORDERS have been issued at the Navy Department for the fitting up of five more iron-clads. This makes a total of twelve iron-clads which, within less than four weeks have made ready for active service....The contested election cases in the House will exceed in number those of any previous session. Papers in fifteen cases have already been filed. In one—that of the Fourth Massachusetts District—the papers are so voluminous that the Election Committee can never hope to read them all. They weigh over half a ton, and it required six men to carry the box containing them into the Capitol....Gen. Benet, Chief of the Ordnance Bureau, in his annual report, urges an increase of the annual appropriation for arming and equipping the militia. The sum expended for this purpose is to-day no larger than it was in 1808, when the population was only 8,000,000. He gives the following as the aggregate strength of the militia of the United States: Organized, 84,524; unorganized, 3,701,977. Gen. Benet makes a plea for improved small arms, and more of them. He thinks our arsenals should be well stocked with a large reserve supply of the best rifles and carbines. He also refers to our inferior artillery, and says "rifle guns of a size, endurance, and power to enable us to meet on fair and equal terms a foreign foe must be provided while we have the time, and it is certainly not the part of wisdom to delay making such provision until the enemy invades our shores."....The report of Secretary Bristow, it is said, will be very pronounced in favor of hard money. The Secretary will sustain the policy of the act of last January, providing for the redemption of United States notes in gold in 1879, and urge its retention. The Secretary is of the opinion that additional legislation will be necessary to render other portions of the law practicable, and he will probably recommend a bill for the funding of greenbacks immediately into gold bonds bearing 4 or 4½ per cent. interest, and having a long time to run. The Secretary thinks that the Resumption law is entirely reasonable, and that it can be carried out with entire safety to the Government and the business of the country.

IT is said that a new bill will be introduced early in the session of Congress, providing some more efficient way of guarding against the offices of President and Vice-President being made vacant by death....The expenses of the Postoffice Department the last fiscal year were $35,000,000, and the receipts $27,000,000....The Postmaster-General had a conference last week with several publishers, and informally discussed the question of the repeal of the law imposing a double rate of postage on third-class matter. He told them he would consider the matter, and give his opinion respecting it in a communication which he was preparing for Congress....A Washington telegram of Nov. 26 says: "The mysterious naval activity continues. Three more officers were to-day ordered to one of the ironclads that are at the rendezvous at Norfolk. Their orders direct them to report there Dec. 4. The curious thing about all these orders is, that while a large number of vessels have been ordered into commission and furnished with a complement of officers, no naval stores or stores of any kind have been sent to the vessels, nor have orders for the supply of any stores been made."

POLITICAL.

THE official returns of the New York election give Bigelow (Democrat), for Secretary of State, a majority of 14,598, over Seward, Republican. There were 755,614 votes cast in the State.

THE President pro tempore of the Senate, Hon. Thomas W. Ferry, of Michigan, becomes Acting Vice-President of the United States through the death of Vice-President Wilson. Mr. Ferry is a native of Michigan, is fifty years of age, and has served in Congress a number of years....The Republican State Central Committee of Indiana have issued a call for a State Convention of the party at Indianapolis, on the 22d of February next, to nominate a candidate for Governor and other State officers.

FOREIGN.

THE Prince of Wales has been very coolly received in India by the native Princes. Not a single reception has been proffered by any one of these in the Madras and Bengal Presidencies. All the entertainments thus far have been given by the English....Madrid dispatches represent that the Carlists are demoralized and exhausted, and an early close of the war is predicted....The Italian Government has purchased all the railways in Upper Italy, paying therefor about $160,000,000....A grand fete was given in Paris the other day by the Franco-American Union, the object being to give greater publicity to and extend the subscriptions for the scheme for a monument to Liberty in New York harbor. About 6,000 people, including many distinguished persons, were present, and great interest was manifested in the project. The subscriptions, it is said, are progressing favorably....The London Times, discussing the Turkish troubles, says: "The Sultan cannot save Herzegovina. It is as fairly out of his grasp as if destiny had settled it by a conference between the powers. Peace can be brought about only by the extinction of Turkish authority."

THE coast of England has been visited by another destructive gale. Fifteen or twenty vessels were wrecked, and fifty or sixty lives lost....The Spanish Government has determined that all foreigners who are to be tried in Cuba for participating in the insurrection, shall be allowed to have counsel....Francis V., Duke of Modena, who was dispossessed in 1860, is dead....A Berlin telegram says that in the negotiations now proceeding for the settlement of the troubles in the Turkish Provinces, the programme put forward by Austria includes a comparatively high degree of self-government for the Christian communities in Turkey. Russia seems to demand only more faithful adhesion to the promises of reform already made by the Porte.

THE Russians have had a great battle with the Kiptschaks in Khokand, Asia, achieving a victory, the enemy fleeing and leaving 3,800 of their dead on the field....Advices from the seat of war in Bosnia represent that the insurgents have resolved to continue operations energetically all through the winter. They have recently gained several important advantages. A convention of the people will shortly be called to proclaim a National Government....The London organ of the Carlists bombastically proclaims that Don Carlos has saved Cuba and the honor of Spain, his recent offer of truce having caused the Americans to modify their attitude.

MUCH distress has been caused in Liberia on account of the war with the natives....It is reported that England has bought a $20,000,000 interest in the Suez Canal....Spain continues to send reinforcements of troops to Cuba....The French Government warns newspapers against reproducing Paul de Cassagnac's recent Bonapartist speech. Le Pays, one of the leading journals of Paris, has already been seized for this offense.

VICE-PRESIDENT WILSON.

His Sudden Death at Washington—Particulars of the Sad Event.

A Washington dispatch of Nov. 22 gives the following particulars of the death of Henry Wilson, Vice-President of the United States:

Mr. Wilson rested well last night, awoke at 7 o'clock this morning, and expressed himself as feeling brighter and better. He sat up in bed to take his medicine, lay down on his left side, and expired in a few moments, without a struggle.

It having been represented last night that the Vice-President had so much improved that he would be able to leave for the North this week, the intelligence of his sudden death this morning fell with startling force and suddenness on the community. The Vice-President seemed on Saturday to be a great deal better than at any time during his late sickness, but yesterday he was not quite so well.

Postmaster Burt, of Boston, called in the morning, and had a pleasant conversation with him. Mr. Crossman, of New York, a literary friend, also visited the Vice-President on business concerning his (Mr. Wilson's) unfinished volume on the subject of slavery. The Vice-President being in a condition requiring rest, Mr. Crossman retired. The Vice-President then slept from 1 to 3 o'clock, when he rose. Mr. Crossman returned in the afternoon, at the Vice-President's request, and remained until evening.

The Vice-President went to bed at an early hour, and slept tolerably well during the night. In his waking intervals he asked for water. About midnight he got up and walked around his room. Then, going to his table, he took up a little book of poems, entitled, "The Changed Cross," with the motto, "Not as I will, but as Thou wilt," and read three verses from it, one of which is as follows:

Help us, O Lord, with patient love, to bear
Each other's faults, to suffer with true meekness;
Help us each other's joys and griefs to share,
But let us turn to Thee alone in meekness.

Other verses had been marked in the book, among them the following:

What if poor sinners count thy grief the signal of an unchastened will;
He who can give thy soul rest knows that thou art submissive still.

This volume belonged to his wife, and contained a photograph of her and their son, both deceased. He treasured it beyond value, and always made it his companion, from whence he seemed to derive much comfort.

After reading the verses, he spoke with gratitude of the kindness of his friends during his sickness, and of the widespread sympathy in his behalf.

He then returned to bed, in a happy mood, and slept.

At 3 o'clock this morning he awoke, complaining of pain in his stomach. One of his attendants rubbed it, and being thus relieved, he again fell asleep.

At 7 o'clock he awoke, remarking that he felt brighter and better than at any time previous. He said that he was going to ride out to-day, as his physician, Dr. Baxter, advised him to do so, if the weather was fair.

At twenty-nine minutes past 7 o'clock, he said he would get up and take breakfast. He then called for "bitter water," which had heretofore been prescribed, and having drank it, he laid down, with his left cheek on the pillow, as if with sudden exhaustion, breathing heavily, but uttering no words, and in a few moments he died, without a struggle.

The following order announcing the death of Vice-President Wilson was issued by the President:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 22, 1875.—It is with profound sorrow that the President has to announce to the people of the United States the death of Vice-President Henry Wilson, who died in the Capital of the nation this morning. The eminent station of the deceased, his high character, his long career in the service of his State and of the Union, his devotion to the cause of freedom, and the ability which he brought to the discharge of every duty, stand conspicuous, and are indelibly impressed in the hearts and affections of the American people. In testimony of respect for this distinguished citizen and faithful public servant, the various departments of the Government will be closed on the day of the funeral, and the Executive Mansion and all the Executive Departments in Washington will be draped with badges of mourning for thirty days. The Secretaries of War and of the Navy will issue orders that appropriate military and naval honors be rendered to the memory of one whose virtues and services will long be borne in recollection by a grateful nation. (Signed) U. S. GRANT.

THE FISCAL YEAR.

Annual Summing Up of the Work of the National Departments and Bureaus.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

The report of the Internal Revenue Commissioner for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, is a rather voluminous document, and we can find room for only a brief synopsis of it. Commissioner Pratt says it may be some consolation to know that grievous as are our burdens, laid upon such of our population, forty-two millions or more, as consume the articles taxed by our Internal Revenue laws, the British public, numbering less by one-fourth than our people, paid under their excise laws during the year ending March 31, 1875, taxes measured in gold to the amount of $183,962,756, against $110,545,154 paid in currency by the people of this country during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1875.

The report shows that the actual amount of receipts in the Treasury from all sources from and after June 30, 1861, to June 31, 1874, exclusive of loans and Treasury notes, was as follows:

Customs	$1,973,749,367
Internal revenue	1,866,098,725
Direct tax	14,810,189
Public lands	22,151,958
Miscellaneous	286,084,982
Premiums on loans and sales of gold coin	193,587,117
Total	$4,395,638,341

The net amount received from all sources of internal revenue during the last fiscal year in the several States is given as follows:

Alabama	$111,816	Missouri	4,501,856
Arizona	10,262	Montana	24,696
Arkansas	71,828	Nebraska	292,472
California	2,963,595	Nevada	53,147
Colorado	70,351	N. Hampshire	298,812
Connecticut	622,225	New Jersey	2,362,470
Dakota	10,040	New Mexico	21,965
Delaware	360,331	New York	15,200,896
Dist. Columbia	111,027	North Carolina	1,629,904
Florida	184,547	Ohio	14,656,293
Georgia	387,154	Oregon	47,939
Idaho	19,136	Pennsylvania	6,149,954
Illinois	17,627,698	Rhode Island	231,767
Indiana	4,650,883	South Carolina	120,818
Iowa	1,040,064	Tennessee	858,910
Kansas	133,535	Texas	257,446
Kentucky	9,022,636	Utah	31,545
Louisiana	583,151	Vermont	58,251
Maine	107,261	Virginia	7,059,639
Maryland	2,755,848	Washington	21,246
Massachusetts	2,670,491	West Virginia	508,694
Michigan	1,930,506	Wisconsin	2,730,868
Minnesota	228,362	Wyoming	11,942
Mississippi	96,085

The Commissioner says public attention has been often called within the past few months to the extensive frauds committed in certain localities upon the revenue by distillers and rectifiers of distilled spirits. He gives an account, first, of the checks, guards, and protections against frauds established by law; second, of the manner in which the whisky frauds, so-called, lately exposed, were perpetrated upon the Government; third, the extent of these frauds; fourth, the checks recently established to prevent a recurrence of the same; and, fifth, suggests legislation which, in his opinion, is necessary to insure a fuller collection in future of the taxes upon distilled spirits.

Mr. Pratt is of the opinion that, with additional legislation to enforce the honest collection of the tax on distilled spirits, the revenue can be collected with little loss.

THE PENSION OFFICE.

Pension Commissioner Atkinson, in his annual report, states that the number of pensioners added to the rolls during the last fiscal year was 11,557, and the number dropped by reason of death, re-enlistment, remarriage, expiration of minors' pensions, failure to apply within three years, or the discovery of fraud, was 12,977, making a net decrease of 1,420. The number of pensions increased was 15,561. The total number of pensioners borne upon the rolls June 30, 1875, was 234,821, by classes as follows:

Army invalids	105,478
Army widows and dependent relatives	104,885
Survivors of the War of 1812	15,875
Widows of soldiers of the War of 1812	5,163
Navy invalids	1,636
Navy widows and dependent relatives	1,784
Total	234,821

The invalid roll continues to increase, and, notwithstanding its losses, numbered 3,021 more on the 30th of June, 1875, than at the close of the preceding year, and for the first time since 1863 exceeded the roll of widows and dependent relatives. Its increase largely counterbalances the losses to the other rolls, and makes the decrease of the aggregate roll comparatively small. Its annual rates are also steadily increasing. In 1871, the average rate of pension paid to the army invalid pensioners annually was $89.18; in 1872, $90.26; in 1873, $96.46; in 1874, $98.14; and 1875, $103.91, or $8.65 per month. The rates vary from $1 to $50 per month.

The total disbursements of the Pension Bureau during the last fiscal year were $29,683,116.63, leaving a balance from the appropriations of $371,883.31, which has been covered into the Treasury.

The appropriations for the current fiscal year were: For army pensions, $29,500,000; for navy pensions, $500,000; total, $30,000,000.

During the past fiscal year 12,236 original applications for army and navy invalid pensions and 17,111 claims for increase of the same class were received, and 933 claims have been withdrawn from the rejected files and reopened upon additional evidence. At the close of the year there remained upon the pending files 32,228 original and 6,722 increase claims of this class.

SECRETARY BRISTOW'S REPORT.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury will this year be of great length. It will be as earnest in favor of resumption and hard money as it was last year. The report will show a falling off in customs receipts for the first six months of the present fiscal year as compared with the corresponding period of last year, but an increase in the internal revenue receipts as shown by the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. In the absence of the additional legislation increasing the tax on distilled spirits from 70 to 90 cents a gallon, the Secretary estimates the receipts from the excise at $106,000,000 for the present fiscal year, but the increased rates will add to his estimate, according to the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, some $16,000,000, making $122,000,000 in all.

THE ENGINEER SERVICE.

Gen. Humphreys, Chief Engineer of the U. S. Army, has completed his annual report, detailing the work on fortifications, and giving estimates of additional proposed improvements. Experiments with torpedoes in the many harbors along the coast have enabled the Engineer Department to determine the size and buoyancy of these destructive agents applicable to the different channels, and so complete are the details in this connection that, in case of emergency, the ship-channel of any harbor threatened by a foreign foe could be so obstructed with these explosive machines within a very few hours that a fleet of war vessels venturing to enter would be blown to atoms. The importance of torpedoes was well illustrated in the Franco-Prussian war, wherein France with her immense navy was rendered entirely powerless as against the thorough subaqueous system of batteries adopted by the German Government. Gen. Humphreys says it is requisite that the battalion of engineers be increased to a minimum peace organization of 520 men, that number being requisite for the efficient condition of the torpedo defenses of the United States, stretching as they do along a sea-coast frontier of 12,000 miles. For continuing the purchases of such parts of the torpedo apparatus and material as cannot be suddenly obtained in time of war, the amount of $150,000 is asked.

Gen. Humphreys devotes a large portion of his report to a description of the jetty system, and the survey of water-lines to the seaboard. He corrects an erroneous impression that seems to prevail concerning the use of jetties in this country, and shows how more than forty harbors on the great lakes have been improved for the benefit of commerce, without which that commerce could not exist.

THE BUREAU OF EDUCATION.

Commissioner Eaton, of the Bureau of Education, in his fifth annual report, presents some interesting statistics. The following is a summary of a number of tables that are presented showing the most important school statistics:

	States.	Territories.	Total.
School population	13,786,972	186,976	13,973,948
Enrolled in public schools	8,030,772	69,309	8,099,982
Average daily attendance	4,488,075	33,489	4,521,564
Number of children between 6 and 18 years old			10,636,674
Number of teachers employed			241,389
Total income, public schools (States)			$81,277,686
Total income, public schools (Territories)			881,219
Total			$82,158,905
Total expenditures (sites, buildings, furniture) States			$14,852,259
Total expenditures (sites, buildings, furniture), Territories			193,649
Total			$15,043,908
Salaries of superintendents			$923,783
Salaries of teachers (States)			46,201,609
Salaries of teachers (Territories)			503,296

Total			$165,753,447

Every State reports one or more Schools of Science: twenty-seven States report Schools of Theology; twenty States report Law Schools; twenty-three States report regular Schools of Medicine.

THE CENSUS BUREAU.

Gen. F. A. Walker, Superintendent of the Ninth Census, has submitted his annual report to the Secretary of the Interior. He states that the work of the office, which consists of correspondence arising out of the publication of the United States census of 1870, or having reference to the projected State census in 1875, or to the International Statistical Congress, has been done by himself, without expense to the Government, except that of postage. He regrets the paucity of results in the State census of 1875, and says that in a country as young as the United States, statistical information is of special importance in guiding its social and industrial development, and that the indifference of our people to the advantages of such information is certainly not proof of a wisdom superior to the need. After naming a few States in which the census has been taken the present year, Gen. Walker closes by saying that enough is already known of the result to indicate quite clearly that the progress of our population has received a temporary check.

Immense Wire Ropes.

Commodore Shufeldt has ordered the proper authorities of the Boston Navy Yard to make several seven-inch steel-wire hawsers. These will probably be the largest wire ropes ever made. The Navy Department has use for immense hawsers to tow monitors and vessels in distress. They are put on board the men-of-war for use when required. The usual appliance is a twelve-inch hemp rope, but it swells when wet, and gets very heavy by absorption of water. The steel-wire hawsers will be seven inches less in diameter, much lighter, non-absorbent, more pliable and durable, and in every respect better. This is a curious and, in fact, wonderful advance in the application of iron and steel to commercial uses. A hemp hawser twelve inches thick is a wonderful thing in itself, but a steel-wire hawser five inches in thickness, better answering the same purpose, is something fruitful of thought to the student in ship-building and rigging.—New York Bulletin.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Around the Farm.

DO NOT let fowls eat pumpkin seeds unless you are anxious to get rid of the fowls.

THE grindstone is a self-sharpening tool; and after having been turned in one direction for some time (if a hard stone), the motion should be reversed. Sand of the right grit applied occasionally to a hard stone will improve it.

THOSE wanting soft maple seed must not let the opportunity pass unimproved. The seed ripens in two or three weeks after the leaves on the trees are fully developed. The seed soon perishes or is destroyed if not obtained just as it falls.

A WRITER in the Fine Stock Gazette, in an able article on "stuffing" fine stock, comes to the following conclusion: "That our State and county fairs shall exclude fat bulls, boars, stallions, etc., from their expositions, but that such stock shall be in what is termed ordinary condition."

BEES consume large quantities of water when building comb and raising brood. Want of water is one of the causes of dysentery among bees. Knowing the great importance of water for bees, we again call attention to it. A bucket, tin pail or trough filled with water, with a few pieces of old combs or sticks for floats, for the bees to alight upon and drink in safety, should be kept near the hives, unless some stream of water is near.

SOME farmers have reported favorably on salted hay, and others think it an injury to stock, and that it does not assist much in keeping. If only two or three quarts per ton are used, it would not hurt the cattle, nor would it assist much in preserving it; and if enough is used to preserve it, injury would result to stock. We think it of doubtful utility to salt hay. First, nature has salted it sufficiently, and any attempt to salt it in the mow, usually results in a very unequal distribution, some portions having too much, and some not any. The best way, where hay is to be stacked, is to cure it well in the cock, and then stack. It will come out a bright color.

PNEUMONIA IN SHEEP.—This recipe for the treatment of pneumonia in rams and cattle is given by the Country Gentleman: Solution of acetate of ammonia, ½ ounce; tincture of aconite, 5 drops; water, ½ ounce. Repeat in four hours, using only three drops of aconite, and again in four hours with two drops. This will allay the fever, probably, after which any good cough medicine will cure the disease. Clater advises mixing one-half drachm of tincture of perchloride of iron in the food, morning and evening, after the animal again begins to eat.

"SOWED" CORN FOR FODDER.—Mr. Webb, a large milk farmer near New Haven, had, this year, in sowed corn, five and a half acres, that yielded twenty-two tons of green fodder to the acre. It is cultivated in rows two feet apart, and all the cultivation is done with the smoothing harrow. The variety of corn used for this purpose is the Norfolk white. It makes a large growth of stalk. When cut up by the roots, it is tied in small bundles with straw after wilting, and is then put in shocks and tied with stout yarn, and left to cure in the field. If perfectly cured, it keeps well in the barn, and makes an excellent fodder for cows in milk. It is hardly possible to produce so large a bulk of good food, at so small a cost, in any other crop.

POTATOES FOR HORSES.—I once came near losing a very valuable horse from feeding him dry hay and oats with nothing loosening. I have never believed in dosing a horse with medicine, but something is actually necessary to keep a horse in the right condition. Many use powders, but potatoes are better, and safer, and cheaper, if fed judiciously. If those who are not in the habit of feeding potatoes to horses will try them, they will be astonished at the result. I have known a horse changed from a lazy, dumpish one to a quick, active, headstrong animal, in five days, by simply adding two quarts of potatoes to his feed daily. If very much clear cornmeal is fed, they do not need so many potatoes. Too many potatoes are weakening, and so are too many apples. When I was a lad, I was away from home at school one winter, and had the care of one horse, one yoke of oxen, and one cow, every one of which I had to card or curry every day. The horse had three pails of water, four quarts of oats, two quarts of small potatoes, and two quarts of corn extra every day he worked, with what hay he wanted, and a stronger and more active horse of his inches I have never yet seen.—Country Gentleman.

About the House.

NEW linen may be embroidered more easily by rubbing it over with a fine white soap. It prevents the threads from cracking.

A SCREEN or blower of wire gauze, from thirty-six to forty wires to the inch, placed in front of range or stove fires, will prevent, it is said, smoke coming into the room when the chimney fails to draw well.

LIGHT PUDDING.—Put two tablespoonfuls of sago, tapioca, or rice in a pie dish, pour over a pint or a pint and a half of milk; add one and a half tablespoonfuls of sugar, a little grated nutmeg if liked; bake two hours in a slow oven; if rice is used, bake three hours.

FOR WASHING STRIPED STOCKINGS.—Make a jelly, the night before it is wanted, of the best yellow soap; wash the stockings in warm water, with a little salt in it, using the jelly instead of soap; rinse in clear water, also with a little salt in it; wring as dry as possible, and dry quickly.

THERE are many receipts given for boiling coffee. If the ground coffee is placed in a tin biggin, and absolutely boiling water poured upon it, it will take less coffee, less time and less trouble, and make better coffee, as well as a more wholesome beverage. Physicians in this country and in England tell us that the injurious quality in coffee is extracted by boiling.

MEAT boiled for table use should be plunged at once into boiling water, as the heat contracts the outer surfaces, and coagulates the albumen, thus preventing the escape of the juices. Prepared for stock or broth it should be placed on the fire in cold water, as then the unconfined juices are free to pass into the liquor surrounding it.

UNTIL the kitchen becomes thoroughly and systematically organized, and is regarded as one of the most—if not the most—important of household departments, there can be no such thing as habitual health in the family. Bad cooking poisons more persons than all the nauseous drugs ever administered to poor humanity, and it affords the remote cause for the employment of two-thirds of all the divorce lawyers in existence.

WITHOUT a doubt, the old senseless fashion of dressing babies in garments with low necks and short sleeves is now quite passed away. Pretty as the bare, plump necks and arms were, common sense told us they were a fruitful source of cramps and colds and other complaints of the little ones, swelling to fearful proportions the list of infant mortality. It may well be a source of rejoicing that the absurd and really wicked custom is abjured, and the entire limbs and bodies of our precious little ones incased in comfortable clothing.

COLORADO JUSTICE.

Jim Barker's First Court—A Judge Who Tempered Justice With a Wonderful Amount of Mercy.

Jim Barker, a well-known character of the mountains, whose latch-string hangs out at the head of Blue Lizzard Gulch, was duly elected a Justice of the Peace, for that section of El Paso county, at the September election, and Mike Irving, a comrade of Jim's, was empowered to officiate as the executive officer of his court. Last week Jim convened his first court, to hear the complaint of Elder Slater, a traveling missionary, who had caused the arrest of Zimri Bowles, a resident of the foot-hills, upon a charge of stealing the Elder's one-eyed mule. Zimri had been arrested by Irving, the Constable, while in the act of easing the descent of the mule down Mad Gun Mountain, with his lariat fastened to the tail of the animal. The proof against Zimri was conclusive. Accordingly, the Justice, after much legal perplexity of mind, proceeded to sentence Zimri to one year's confinement in the Territorial Penitentiary, which sentence he concluded as follows: "An' now, Zim, seein' as I'm about out of things to eat, an' as you will have the costs to pay, I reckon you'd better take a turn among the foot-hills with your rifle, an' see if you can't pick up some meat before night, as you can't start for the Big Can you before mornin'." Which marketing duty was performed by Zim bringing in one black-tail fawn and a rabbit within the time prescribed as a postscript to the sentence. On the following morning the Constable, mounted upon his broncho, accompanied by the prisoner astride of the mule which the elder had kindly loaned him, started through the mountains for the penitentiary, where they arrived the second day out, their animals loaded with a deer, two antelope and a small cinnamon bear, which they sold to the Warden of the prison. After dividing the money, the Constable proceeded to hand over Zimri on the following mittimus, which is carefully preserved and may be seen in the possession of the Warden:

> To the hed man of the Colorado prison, down at the foot of the Big Canyon on the Arkansas—Take notice: Zimri Bouls, who come with this here, stole Elder Slater's one-eyed mule, an it was all the mule the Elder had, an I sentenced Zim officially to one year in the Colorado prison, and hated to do it, seein as Zim once stood by me like a man when the Injuns had me in a tight place, an arter I sentenced Zim to one year for stealin the Elder's mule, my wife, Lizzie, who is a kind of tender hearted critter, come and leaned her arm on my shoulder, an says she, "Father, don't forget the time when Zim, with his rifle, covered our cabin from Granite Mountain, and saved us from the Arapahoes, an Father I have heard you tell that after you was wounded at Sandy Creek, an helpless, it was Zimri's rifle that halted the Indian that was creeping in the grass to scalp you." An then there was a tear splash fell upon the sentence an I changed my mind suddently as follows: Seeing as the mule had but one eye, and weren't more'n half a mule at that, you can let Zim go at about six months, an sooner if the Injuns shud get ugly; an, furthermore, if the Elder shud quiet down an give in any times, I will pardon Zim out instanter.

The Warden, after informing the Constable that he could not receive the prisoner upon the commitment offered, proceeded to explain that he should have given a bond in the sum of about $300 to appear at the District Court. Accordingly the Constable withdrew with his prisoner, when it was agreed between them that Zimri should give the Constable his bond for the amount mentioned by the Warden. This was accomplished by Zimri subscribing his name to an old replevin bond calling for $300, found among the papers transmitted to the Constable by his predecessor. Then, as the Constable intended returning by way of Pinon Mountain to examine a bear den where he had seen a couple of cubs playing last spring, he gave the bond to Zimri to take back to the Justice. But Zimri, while on his return, traded the $300 bond to a mountain squatter, just in from Missouri, for a horse, saddle and bridle, and the prisoner is believed to be at this time a dashing hunter on the plains.—Denver News.

Got No Pay.

A Washington dispatch says: "When the Indian Bureau came to pay the bills incurred by the Red Cloud Investigating Committee and the salaries of the Commissioners, it was discovered that Senator Howe and Representative Harris, of Massachusetts, and Faulkner, of West Virginia, were debarred from receiving the $8 per day, the salary allowed the members of the Commission, on account of being members of Congress, and that they could not, under existing law, receive anything except their actual expenses. As these gentlemen devoted about ninety days each to the investigation intrusted to them, during which time they entirely neglected their private law practice, they felt that they were the victims of a peculiar hardship. There was no appeal, however, and these three gentlemen were sent to their homes without a cent of compensation. The entire expenses of the Red Cloud investigation amounted to about $17,000.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.

Meeting of the National Grange at Louisville.

The National Grange of Patrons of Husbandry began its ninth annual session at Louisville, Ky., on the 17th of November, a large number of delegates being in attendance. From the official reports we gather the following interesting figures showing the progress of the order. At present there are a trifle over 24,000 granges, with a membership estimated at 1,500,000, the estimate of 61 members to each grange being a moderate one, as, though in new territory, or in places where the grange has been too much organized, some granges are numerically weak, but few have been organized for the past two years with less than the full complement of charter members—first 30, recently 40—and there are granges by scores, notably in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Pennsylvania, which count from 80 to 150 members. Of these about 700,000 are women. The minimum age is 18, but a proposition has recently been made to establish a subordinate degree or order—the Cadets of Husbandry—so as to let in young people, say down to 14. The latest official statement of the strength of the order, as compared with the showing of 1864, is appended:

State Grange.	No. of Sub-Granges. 1874.	1875.
Alabama	641	673
Arkansas	523	636
California	231	262
Colorado	65	69
Connecticut	4	16
Dakota	55	56
Delaware	15	22
Florida	108	147
Georgia	668	705
Idaho	15	16
Illinois	1,522	1,589
Indiana	1,999	2,033
Indian Territory	6	14
Iowa	2,000	2,004
Kansas	1,354	1,391
Kentucky	1,463	1,608
Louisiana	209	314
Maine	46	183
Maryland	120	157
Massachusetts	64	99
Michigan	533	604
Minnesota	560	546
Mississippi	631	666
Missouri	2,002	2,032
Montana	25	26
Nebraska	597	620
Nevada	5	15
New Hampshire	30	64
New Jersey	81	93
New York	254	348
North Carolina	463	535
Ohio	1,052	1,205
Oregon	175	185
Pennsylvania	367	591
South Carolina	317	350
Tennessee	1,020	1,991
Texas	765	1,196
Vermont	130	207
Virginia	391	665
Washington Territory	57	66
West Virginia	125	293
Wisconsin	505	513
Total	21,183	23,925

From this it will be seen that in the South and in the States of Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota the grange is practically identical with the agricultural population. In the East, where farming is on a larger scale, and the agriculturists feel less powerfully the need for combination and co-operation, the order is not so strong numerically, though it is possessed of a powerful influence.

The following table exhibits the financial standing of the order for 1874:

Balance January 1, 1874	$13,152.70
Dues from State Granges	26,836.84
Interest	4,701.92
Fees for charters	179,365.00
Miscellaneous, as sale of song books, constitutions, etc	5,451.26
Total	$229,533.72

United States bonds of the value of $70,650, and $21,703.95 in cash, were then in the possession of the order. The dues from State Granges were largely in arrears, and the receipts from the interest account were not as large as they should have been. The income for 1875 will be materially below that of the year previous. The dues from State Granges have been from ten per cent. to five per cent. per capita, and the charter fees will probably not exceed $30,000. If all dues were promptly paid they would amount to $70,000 per year.

The expenditures of the National Grange in 1874 were as follows:

Salaries, including $3,500 for 1873	$23,464.90
Expense accounts, including $2,892.07 for 1873	7,106.93
Expense of annual session	12,395.41
Printing and binding	67,838.76
Regalia, tools, &c	34,996.70
Rent, gas, fuel, postage, telegrams, insurance, stationery, furniture, repairs, etc.	16,558.29
Loans and donations	18,614.33
Total	$180,995.32

The grange business, in certain localities, is of almost incredible magnitude, as, for instance, at Indianapolis. There the purchases average over $12,000 per week. Ohio and Pennsylvania buy, on an average, $500,000 worth of goods annually, and in New Jersey the annual purchases exceed $208,000.

In addition to the regular State agenst there are hundreds of county agencies and associations. In counties where there is a large grange the members of the order often unite, build a warehouse for receiving and storing goods, hire an agent and raise capital in amounts from $1,000 to $10,000 for transacting business. Grange stores are quite common, and oftentimes an immense business is transacted by them. The co-operative plan is generally adopted, and a consequent saving of about 10 per cent. on dry goods, clothing, groceries, etc., and 25 per cent. on machinery, agricultural implements, etc., used by farmers is effected thereby.

There are 700,000 families in the order. Allowing $1,000 worth of necessary articles for home consumption for each family, a saving of $175 to each would be made, or a total of $122,500,000. As there are many States in which the full benefits of co-operation are not attained, owing to imperfect organization, this estimate is excessive; but that an annual saving of $25,000,000 is made cannot be considered a high estimate. The saving to the Patrons of Husbandry in the single item of grain sacks alone this year exceeds $1,100,000, while the Southern Patrons have saved $800,000 this year by reducing the cost of cotton ties.

A Russian Dance.

They have a singular kind of a dance, conducted on the greens of country villages, in Russia. The dancers stand apart, a knot of young men here, a knot of maidens there; each sex by itself, and as silent as a crowd of mutes. A piper breaks into a tune; a youth pulls off his cap, and challenges his girl with a wave and a bow. If the girl is willing she waves her handkerchief in token of assent. The youth advances; takes a corner of the handkerchief in his hand, and leads his lassie around and around. No word is spoken, and no laugh is heard. Stiff with braids, the girl moves heavily by herself, goes around and around, and never allowing her partner to touch her hand. The pipe goes droning on for hours in the same sad key and measure, and the prize of merit in this "circling," as the dance is called, is given by the spectators to the lassie who, in all that summer revelry, has never spoken and never smiled.

INDIANA ITEMS.

EIGHT car-loads of Limberger cheese were shipped from Richmond recently.

DURING the year the Treasurer of Marshall County has paid out $570.60 for sheep killed by dogs.

THE New York Railroad Construction Company is to take hold of the Lake Erie, Evansville and Southwestern Railroad.

JOHN D. THAYER, formerly of Chicago, and a book-keeper, was found dead in his bed at South Bend, one day last week. He was a consumptive.

THOMAS COTTRELL, of South Bend, has been convicted of assault with intent to kill Carl Sherman, and sentenced to two years in the Penitentiary.

CHAS. KROUT was found guilty of murder in the first degree at Fort Wayne, last week, and sentenced to the Penitentiary for twenty-one years.

THE Supreme Court holds that the stockholders in private manufacturing corporations are not individually liable for the debts of the corporation.

THE original Cardiff giant is in the possession of Wm. Enyart, of Jacksonburg. He bought it for $100 when it was sold at Cambridge City for freight dues.

REV. MARTIN HOUSER died at the residence of George Fry, in Hope, Bartholomew county, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. He was the founder of that village and of the Moravian congregation there.

THE Brazil, Worthington and Bloomfield (narrow-gauge) Railway Company has filed articles of association at Indianapolis. The length of the contemplated line is forty-five miles, and capital stock $1,000,000.

THE Muncie Times tells the story and vouches for it, that a pony, belonging to Dr. Winters, finding no water in the trough, seized the pump-handle in its teeth and pumped itself enough water for a square drink.

LAST Saturday an old man named Isaac Gillett, from Grand Rapids, was run over by a switch-engine on the Toledo, Wabash and Western Railway, in the yard at Fort Wayne, cutting off an arm and leg. The unfortunate man was removed to St. Joseph Hospital, where he died during the night, after excruciating agony.

ABRAHAM HUTSON, of Clay County, was a hard drinker, and a few days ago he broke down and took to his bed. One night a neighbor was sitting up with him, when Hutson suddenly grasped his arm and asked: "If you were sick, how would you like to have some sneak slip up and blow out the light." The watcher gave a hurried glance around the room, and when his gaze returned to the bed the sick man was dead.

NEAR Jonesville, Bartholomew County, one night recently, some one thought it would be very funny to blockade the road by which a wedding party were returning from church. The party was, consequently, obliged to turn out of the road to pass the obstruction, and in doing so the carriage containing the newly-wedded pair was overturned. The bridegroom had an arm broken, and the bride was so badly injured it is thought she cannot recover.

PHILO TUCKER, a young man of Spartanburg, left Union City for his home the other night, and when passing through dense woods a few miles north of the latter place, about 9 o'clock at night, a masked robber, armed with a heavy club and knife, sprang from the bush. Attacking first with the club, he knocked Tucker from his horse, and then used the knife, inflicting a fatal wound. Tucker, however, freed himself, regained his saddle, and was carried home by his horse, escaping robbery.

SIX persons escaped from the County Jail at Fort Wayne one night last week, by sawing the bars off their cell window. Mrs. Albertson, whose husband was confined in jail, visited him about three weeks ago with a saw concealed in the soles of a pair of boots which she exchanged with him. This was repeated a week afterward. After sawing the bars off the prisoners crawled through a space of seven inches, and made their way into the yard and used their blankets to scale the walls. Their names are Gus Iter and William Welsh, held as witnesses in the dollar-bill murder case; Aaron Smith and William Albertson, thieves; Emanuel Fox, vagrant; and Mike Kelly, a housebreaker.

AT South Bend, on Friday evening of last week, a female printer named Bayless, who had been discharged from the Herald office, waylaid Charles T. Murray, the editor, and demanded of him satisfaction for calling her "a loose female tramp," and Murray, having been warned, grabbed her and flung her on the sidewalk. She had a rawhide, and had standing near several who are said to have been invited to witness the cowhiding. Among them was William A. Palmer, a Justice. On Saturday and Sunday, Murray published accounts of the affair, coupling with Mrs. Bayless the name of Justice Palmer, accusing them of being improperly intimate, which aroused the wrath of Palmer, and on Monday he waylaid Murray on the stairs leading to the Herald office, and while Murray was ascending, shot him through the right lung, the ball passing through the body and lodging on the sidewalk. Murray's condition is critical, but he will probably recover, as he is a man of strong nerve and will. His age is 35 years.

JOHN HODGE, a laborer employed at a sugar refinery at Brecknock, in Scotland, met with a fearful death on Saturday morning, Oct. 23, through falling into one of the caldrons through which the hot liquor was passing. He was literally boiled to death, and his body was not recovered for about two hours after the occurrence.

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

Full List of Senators, Representatives, and Delegates.

The regular session of the National Legislature will begin on Monday, Dec. 6, and the following list of Senators and Representatives will be convenient for reference.

All the elections to the Senate have been made, and the list published, and all seats, except one (Pinchback's) for Louisiana, disposed of. In the House there is a vacancy in the Fourth Tennessee District, caused by the death of Hon. John W. Head. Hon. Samuel M. Fite, who was then elected to the seat, died at Little Rock, Ark., a few weeks since, and there is still a vacancy; but as there is no lack of candidates it is expected the seat will be occupied early in the session.

The Revenue Frauds.

The revelations in the St. Louis whisky cases, so far as they expose official depravity, are appalling. They show how wide-spread was the corruption of the public officers. The Supervisor of Internal Revenue, the Inspector of Internal Revenue, the Collector, the Gaugers, the Storekeepers, and the Chief Clerk of the Revenue Office at Washington, and the successive Special Agents sent to investigate—all, from 1871 to 1875, deliberately combined to appropriate to themselves the revenue of the Government. One of the parties states that he has no record of his share of the plunder, but it was not less than $50,000 during the fourteen months in which he participated. He received one-fifth. The business began in September, 1871, and was brought to a sudden stop in September, 1875. At first, and during the fourteen months covered by the testimony of the witness only a few distillers were included; but the demand for money and the number of the officials to be bribed increased, and so all the manufacturers were gradually drawn in. The tax on spirits during this time was fifty cents on the gallon, and the average sum paid by the distillers to the Government officers was thirty cents per gallon. The division, therefore, of the taxes was twenty cents retained by the distillers and thirty cents by the dishonest officers. If the share of one of these officers during fourteen months was $50,000, and he received one-fifth of the thirty cents, then we have, as the total revenue taken during that term, $250,000 by the revenue officers and $167,000 by the distillers, which was equal to the tax on 380,000 gallons. Subsequently, the tax was increased to seventy cents, and since then to ninety cents. We have not yet had the revelations covering the later period, but the practice was continued on even a larger scale—that is to say, there was more manufacturers, and of course, a larger amount of whisky made and sold free of tax. Occasionally, in addition to the thirty cents per gallon paid to the revenue officers, there were special levies for round sums to silence visiting officers, and a levy of $300 per week was made to quiet a complaining officer in the Revenue Bureau at Washington. One special official demanded and received $10,000 for silence, and sums of various amounts were demanded in the names of eminent men.—Chicago Tribune.

A Prudent Farmer.

A citizen who has an office on Griswold street purchased some potatoes of a farmer the other day, and told him where to deliver them, and where to come for his pay. The farmer entered the office in about an hour, and the citizen said:

"I'm very sorry, but I had to meet a draft at the bank, and can't ——"

"That's all right," interrupted the farmer. "I found your landlord setting your household goods out on the sidewalk, and so I sold the vegetables to another man."—Detroit Free Press.

HUNGRY mice have spoiled eighteen keys in the Bangor Baptist Church organ.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN INDIANA, DEC., 2nd, 1875

—The State Auditor, in response to an inquirer, has given his opinion that county Auditors are entitled to one per cent. only on the school fund, which is acquired by State levy and distributed by the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Sam Tilden has another chance for a Presidential nomination. He has abandoned the Erie Canal route. This time he proposes to make it by reforming the Capitol building in Albany. But Sammy you will be able to prove "an alleybi," in case any President is ever indicted for murder or accused fo petty larceny.

The Central Committee of the State Soldiers and Sailors monument Association request that public meetings be held in every county in the State, on December the 4th, for the purpose of devising ways and means to farther the plans inaugurated. A State meeting will be held at Indianapolis on December 7th. This is a matter that justly ought to receive the attention of all the people of Dekalb County and the whole State.

Plymouth church in consequence of its irregular action in dismissing Mrs. Moulton from church membership is strongly condemned by other Congregational churches and there is talk of putting it in disfellowship at the session of the council. Beecher will offer on explanation of the fact to the church and the prominent ministers of New York censure him for silence that is hurtful to himself and others Beecher is certainly weak and cowardly in the matter of frank statements.

People who have faith to believe that the Republican party can and will reform itself within itself should carefully read all the news about the gigantic whisky frauds lately being unearthed. These frauds have been known to exist for years, and have nearly all been perpetrated by leading men in the Republican party. Of course all the officials who have feathered their nests, are the most blatant Republican and they belong to a class who will never be reformed until turned out of office, and they will never be turned out of office until there is a change in party rulers.

The cuban agitation is revived a little sooner then we expected, though it will be remembered that we predicted it would come up from time to time until Mr. Grant is renominated by the republican party. Just now it is an order from Valmaseda, the brutal captain general of Cuba, in which he makes some rule for the customs' examination of foreign uessels that are entirely at variance with commercial law; but this is not the first time that the captain general of Cuba has done the same sort of thing. Yet we may be sure that, hereafter, every utterance from Cuba or Spain will be made the most of by the administration. Mr. Grant is so to speak, "obleeged" to do it being nearly out of meat.

BUTLER ITEMS.

BUTLER, Nov. 30, 1875.

Masquerade Ball in progress for New Years eve.

—School commenced yesterday with a pretty good attendance.

—Mrs. John A Campbell who has been sick with Typhoid Fever is getting better.

—Mrs. T. W. Elton broke her arm last week. Have been unable to learn the particulars.

—Butler, being the last station on the road, stood no chance at all of getting a free ride on Thursday.

—The Theater Friday and Saturday nights was a complete success. Noticed a few young people from Auburn among others Misses Stelly and Ola Yandes. Some were down from Edgerton also.

Masonic social to-night. Three ladies and three gentlemen are on the committee for entertainments, as this is double the usual number for committee we may expect an uncommonly pleasant time.

—Mr. George Matheny lost his youngest child, a boy about fourteen years old, Friday night. The boy had hurt himself while practicing gymnastics a few days ago, was taken sick immediately and died from the effects of his injuries.

"LENA."

The Paw-Paw Courier has nominated Zach Chandler for the presidency. With such powerful backing as the Paw-Paw paper, old Zach will make a formidable candidate.

From Angola.

ANGOLA, Nov., 29th, 1875.

—Court in session, Judge Best presiding.

—To-morrow is the time agreed upon to commence the trial of one Pierce, of Fremont, for murder in the second degree, or in other words, for the killing of Andrew Myers some time last August. The trial will probably occupy the balance of the week.

GRANGER IDEAS.

—In conversation with one a few days ago, said the object was to drive all middlemen and mechanics to tilling the soil. Now then, I am some granger, but that idea is wrong. Suppose you drive all those into farming that is out of it now; recollect not one half are farmers. Who would want to buy your products, everybody would have enough of their own and the fact is the more buyers the more competition, consequently you get a half often more than your produce is worth. You should encourage home mechanics of every discription and kind it is the large manufacturing establishments that is driving our home mechanics and others to farming, and as it increases your farming, it decreases the demand, also the prices to a certain extent. I like some of the features of the institution very much. Now Gerome, how does that granger wood burn.

—In the summer of 1623 the Plymouth colony came near starving from threatening of total failure of their crops.—They set a part of a day for humiliation and prayer. We are told their pious prayers was answered, and the colony saved from starvation, but why should be observed at the present time.—Surely we are not likely to starve when we have pleanty to eat and drink. The probability is that it is on account of our national debt being paid off in so short a time. Any person can tell why it should be continued every year, I would like to hear from them.

—It would be a fine thing if our Marshal would fine the young roosters of this place for getting drunk and howling around the streets at nights, as they do in Butler.

HOME REMEDY.

Is warrented not to contain a single particle of Mercury, or any injurious mineral substance, but is containing those Southern Roots and Herbs, which an all-wise providence has placed in countries where Liver Diseases most prevail. It will cure any diseases caused by derangement of the liver or Bowels.

PURELY VEGETABLE,

Stimulate the liver and prevent

CHILLS AND FEVER.

Simon's Liver Regulator, or Med'e

Is eminently a Family Medicine, and by being kept ready for immediate resort will save many an hour of suffering and many a dollar in time and doctors' bills.

After over forty years trial it is still receiving the most unqualified testimonials to its virtue from persons of the highest character and responsibility. Eminent physicians commend it as the most for Constipation, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders Dizziness, Sour Stomach, bad taste in the mouth bilious attacks, Palpitation of the heart, pain in the region of the kidneys, despondency, gloom and forebodings of evil, all of which are the offspring of a diseased liver.

EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, poor appetite and tongue coated you are suffering from torpid liver, or biliousness and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few, but the liver the largest organ in the body is generally the seat of the disease and if not regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and death will ensue.

Armed with this antidote, all climates and changes of water and food may be faced without fear. As a remedy in Malarious fevers, Bowel complaints, Restlessness, Jaundice, Nausea, it is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

CAUTION. Buy no powders or prepared Simons Liver Regulator unless in our engraved wrapper, with Trade Mark Stamp, and Signature unbroken. None other is genuine.

FOR CHRISTMAS & NEW YEARS!

The Holidays Will Soon be on us!

NOW IS THE TIME TO LOOK AROUND FOR YOUR

HOLIDAY GOODS!

As usual we have an immense stock for the occasion.

We have 10 cases of New Turkish Prunes at 10c per pound. This is a reduction of 5c per pound.—And 500 case of Peaches at 15c per can. Just think of that price, with all the scarcity of Peaches this season. They never sold at such prices, and the only reason we can do so is we purchased a Bankrupt stock at half price.

So on TEAS—We bought out the whole stock of McDougal's, formerly J. M. Flingers, and his $1.50 Tea we have put down to 1.10. Other qualities from 30c to 50c.

Sugars.

SUGARS! SUGARS!

We have reduced 1c per pound, and got a stock sufficient to last over the holidays. So you need not fear their advancing.

Coffee A,	10½c	N. O. Genuine,	9c
Coffee C,	9½c	Good Yellow	8c

When we first commenced selling Teas there was very little sold in this place; the reason was they were sold so high that parties clubbed together and sent to New York to get their Teas because they could save 30c to 50c on the pound. This we have all challenged, we not only sell teas and sugars as cheap as they do in New York, but cheaper. The freight is but a trifle and our immense sales of 40 to 50 chests a month enables us to undersell all competitors. No 3 or 4 profits with us. No middle men to handle our goods. We purchase of the Importers and sell direct to consumers, there saving our customers the profits of the speculator, Jobber and Wholesale Merchant, which is at least 15 to 25 per cent.

Young Hyson	50, 60, 80, $1.00, best 1 10	Oolong	30, 50; best 90

The Catholic friends of this place will hold a mission, extended from the fifth to twelfth of this month. Services every day and evening. Several Rev. gentlemen from abroad will be present and address the audience. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

J. R. Whitmore, one of the best millwrights in the State, has been repairing machinery at the lower grist mill, and now every department of this establishment is working admirably. Parties who have work of this kind to do, will never be better satisfied than to employ the above named gentleman.

The Thanksgiving gobbler has ceased to gobble. His voice is stilled in death, yet his savory form forms the center of attraction upon many a fectal board, while pious eyes look fervently upward and return thanks that the once proud and happy bird has not lived in vain.

Next year will be leap year. We make this announcement early for the benefit of our young lady readers. It is the grand centennial year of our independence and will be a favorable time for them to launch out. They should improve the opportunity.

Jno Cary, of Ligonier, has chalenged O'Leary, the winner in the walking match at Chicago, for the championship of the United States, with Weston, to walk five hundred miles for $5,000 a side. John Cary had better let somebody have his money that will promise to watch over him because there's certainly something ails his brain.

Our friends a Waterloo have organized a Literary and Library Associaton. The first meeting to be on next Wednesday evening, Dec. 8th. Prof. Perkins, will be present, taking for his subject "The Perkins family," The above gentleman has been engaged through the enterprise of several citizens there, and we hope all will appreciate their arrangements and turn out a good house.

"Dead Broke."

An old lady and gentleman named Graff, from Harrisburg Penn., has been in the city for several days, having to stop off here on account of lack of money. They were on their way to Chicago and claimed to have relations there who would assist them. Two of our gentlemen went with the old couple to our places of business, and raised 10 or $12. for them. They left for Chicago Wednesday.

A Man Laid in Baker's Field all Night.

Last Saturday night a man, traveling through the country repairing watches, &c., was crossing one of Mr. Baker's fields and fell in a fit. It was nearly dark and consequently was not discovered by anyone and laid out all night, freezing his feet, hands and ears badly. The next morning Mr. B. found him and arrangements were immediately made and he was taken to the poor-house.

HELLO.

We took a ride to the Eel River depot the other day, and among the crowd of passengers we noticed two Germans at the end of the platform talking to each other in a very solemn tone. The one who was contemplating a journey was a man of about seventy years, and from all appearances was going some distance The young German stepped out to the track and saw the train coming at a distance. He turned to the old man and the following conversation began:

"Fadder she vas going dhis vay, about dwo milles beck."

The old man braced up, and walked out to convince himself that she was coming.

"Yous, mine schild, dot vas zo."

"Hav you made yourzelf by dot ticket office."

"Correct; sthand down," says the old man, as he brought the ticket from his hip pocket.

The train had signaled and the passengers busy getting their baggage to the end of the platform. She whistled for breaks and the train stopped.

All of the passengers got aboard but the two Germans. The old man got on the first step of the car, took out his handkerchief and raising it to his eyes faintly said:

"Vell, Shon, here goes, und off I don't zee you zome more, Hello!"

"The Bells go Ringing for Sarah."

There was three of them, two boys and a girl, and after the 'bus brought the bride and groom, they prepared to bell them. In a few minutes the band was in readiness, and on the stilly air could be heard the echo of a jewsharp, pair of bones and the bottom of a tincup coming against a No. 2 led-pencil. The music was grand as those who heard it will testify. Well, judge for yourselves. It busted up the Presbyterian prayer meeting and excited some of the members so they cried fire and rushed to the scene in great haste. We dont know what become of the band, as our reported got scared out before it ended. He took a fresh chew of tobacco and rushed after the night police and when he returned to the scene the band had disappeared. For small bills and funeral notices apply to the leader.

A CARD.

A Candid Word to All.

I mean what I say, when I say I will sell books at a discount I will do it. When I say I will sell wall paper at cost I will sell it at cost.

On account of the destruction of books by the fire I make a deduction, not simply to draw custom or to sell the books, but to lessen expenses of those who are obliged to buy. There is no wall paper in town any newer or better than mine, nor any bought for less money. You can satisfy yourselves by examining before purchasing. I will sell at cost until Jan. 1st On account of the heavy draw on books my supply of covers has been exhausted and many books were not covered but will have covers in a few days when those whose books were not covered can get them free. I make books and wall paper a specialty therefore will not be undersold by anyone who makes it a secondary business. When you want anything in my line it will pay you to give me a call. Many thanks for your liberal patronage.

Kahn, the Clothier.

There are parties who claim they do not put names of those who buy overcoats in the "Courier" because it is not large enough to contain them. There are two better reasons. One is that they cant muster names enough to make a list and the other is that the very few who bought over-coats of them have seen their mistake and are ashamed to have it made public. We undertake to say that every man has bought an overcoat of us is proud of having done so, and will cheerfully testify to the extremely low prices and excellent quality of the same. The readers of the "Courier" are doubtless acquainted with many of the names on our list and we only ask them to inquire of such parties, the reason why they bought their overcoats of Kahn. The reply will invariably be, "Because they have the largest stock, best assortment and lowest prices of any house in Auburn. Look at the following:

STABBING AT GARRETT!

Three Rounds Before the Fight Ended!

We learn that a fight took place at Garrett, last Thursday, wherein the knife was used in a careless manner by one of the parties. The smallest of the two was handled in the first round, and after being stabbed in the side and a piece of the blade broken off and remaining therein, fought two rounds, coming out high-boy.

"Is there any letter here for my pa?" inquired a six year old at the postoffice yesterday.

"Who is your father," asked the clerk

"Mr. Haynes."

"Haynes, Haynes, muttered the clerk.

"Yes, Haynes, John Haynes."

"Nothing here, sir."

"Any papers?" said the lad.

The clerk shuffled over the papers.

"No paper."

"That's what I thought," said the boy "He's been dead two years."

It's lucky for the boy that Lee was at dinner.

It has been nearly one whole week since a book fiend or a map peddler has wrecked our happiness for a day by calling on us to subscribe for some twaddle in gaudy covers or to solicit us to pay from $25 to $100 for having our likeness engraved on basswood, printed in an atlas and sent forth to be admired by the gaping world who delight to gaze upon men of distinguished local prominence. For twenty-five dollars any man can be made "a prominent man" by a map artist and it is the cheapest and only way many men can ever reach sufficient degree of prominence to attract the slightest attention, and we may add, it's the only way any man ever reaches prominence in an atlas.

STRUCK BY A B & O. TRAIN

A Narrow Escape from a Sudden Death

Last Tuesday morning as Mr. Eckenberger was on his way to work, he was on Little Cedar Creek bridge, when a Baltimore freight train, running about twelve miles an hour, struck him and threw him several feet. It was impossible for him to reach the end in safety, although by a strong effort he succeeded in getting to the end of the bridge, thereby saving himself from being thrown into the water some ten or fifteen feet below. The engine struck him obliquely, making severe and painful wounds on the left side. The hip bone was broken and other injuries received inwardly. He is a poor man and lives alone in the world being lately divorced from his wife. The Baltimore Company have secured a man to take care of him, but our physicians have but little hopes of him living Several bones have been extracted since he was brought home, and he suffers the pain and agony of any operation that may be performed on him, without chloraform.

The Institute at A. J. Little's office last Monday evening was well attended. The recitation by Miss Hattie Griswold, was a splended effort, and has placed her before the community as a young lady of culture and refinement.

The lecture by W. L. Penfield, Esq., English Literature was an effort worthy of the man and the occasion, and solicited the highest encomiums of an appreciated audience.

We have home talent of the highest order and all those desirous of a literary treat should attend the Institute on Monday evening. Prof. McIntosh is on the list for a lecture, to be followed by Rev Mr. Johnson, Elder Shear, Dr. Spooner and others.

OUR THANKSGIVING.

BY FANNY PERCIVAL.

We cannot show a grand array
Of toothsome things Thanksgiving Day—
The day so very near;
Our little pantry will not boast
Delicious viands by the host
To every palate dear.

'Neath weight of all the good things known
Our little table will not groan,
No, not the very least;
Our little home will not be blest
With many a welcome joyous guest
To help us at the feast.

Yet, notwithstanding what we lack,
We'll not regretfully look back
And sigh for better days,
But we will fill in every part
The spacious store-room of our heart
With gratitude and praise.

We'll count our present blessings o'er,
And we shall find they number more
Than all our trials do;
Our happy, thankful thoughts shall be Delightful guests—right royally
They will reward us, too.

To seats we once did occupy
We'll not look up with wistful eye
And covetous unrest,
But bending lower down our gaze
To poorer homes, to sadder ways,
Thank God we are so blest.

Thank God that though our home is small
It still contains the dear ones all,
Rich in affection's wealth;
Thank God we have enough to eat,
Thank God for clothing warm and neat,
Thank God for perfect health.

Thank God we feel the fire's warm glow,
While many cold and fireless go
In many a cheerless home.
Oh, yes, most gratefully we'll lift
Our souls to God for every gift,
And trust for all to come.

Thus 'round our frugal little board,
With cheerful hearts we'll praise the Lord
And keep the jubilee;
Nor shall there anywhere be found,
Within this nation's utmost bound,
A happier family.

IN A TRUMPET.

A Story of Thanksgiving.

"I know it," said Miss Pamphylia, answering a rueful glance from Miss Mehitable's brother; "still it's a great comfort to reflect that she could have the trumpet."

Miss Pamphylia certainly had a very peculiar way of looking at human griefs. She would stand for one moment of dismay, and then suddenly illuminate with some comforting "reflection" about something that had been, or hadn't been, or could be, after all. It always reminded Miss Mehitable's brother of a cluster of ripe grapes he had noticed one October day when the skies were fitful. For one instant, while a cloud crept over the sun, they hung heavy and dark as the leaden shadow behind them; then, as a quick, strong ray of sunlight pierced the cloud, the red wine that was in them took fire, and gleamed and blazed, until his very pulses warmed as he looked.

He felt them suddenly warming again in just the same way, as Miss Pamphylia uttered the words, "she could have the trumpet." What a thing it would make of life if that "could" only began with a "w" instead of a "c!" But as it did not, and there wasn't the least prospect that it ever would, Miss Mehitable's brother patiently took it with the "c," much as he would have hugged a warm soap-stone, if wandering in the dark among the glaciers of the Alps.

Miss Mehitable, meanwhile, peacefully unconscious that either of them had said anything, sat gazing into the glowing hearth of coals, with a satisfied little smile on her face, and a fresh-folded handkerchief in her lap. She always did have a fresh handkerchief in her lap—it was so tidy just where the hands lay; and as for her smile, her very features were as likely to disappear. That was because she found life always so pleasant; indeed it contained but two regrets for Miss Mehitable, and it would have been foolish to let such a minority disturb all the rest. One of these regrets was that Pamphylia did not feel quite inclined to marry Phenix. He had asked her every Thanksgiving Day for ten years in succession—though never until after dinner, for he liked everything hot, and the faintest hope is a warmer sauce than disappointment—but it was of no use. Miss Pamphylia's inclinations did not quite agree, and the trial was put over till another term, leaving the first part of the evening a little downish, until Miss Pamphylia regularly brightened with a consoling thought.

"After all," she said, "it is a great comfort to reflect that he needn't ask me if he didn't choose."

"Don't be a goose, Phenix," Miss Mehitable always said gently, the next morning, to comfort him; and though perhaps he had seemed a little like one, pluming himself and picking up his crumbs so many months, only to be slain on this fatal day; still, when Hetty said this, he remembered what he really was, and rose from his ashes to begin another year.

But it seemed such a pity about spoiling the evenings, particularly as Miss Pamphylia only came once a year, that she at last insisted upon a different arrangement.

"Don't ask me again until I am ready to say yes," she said, with the firmest air.

"And when will that be?" asked Phenix.

Miss Pamphylia hesitated a moment, and then looked with a sudden gleam of mischief in her eyes.

"Whenever Hetty asks for the trumpet," she said.

That was coming very near the second of Miss Mehitable's regrets in life, which was simply the miserably indistinct way in which people were allowing themselves to speak the last few years. It was growing upon them, too, instead of improving, until she had really given up expecting to hear anybody unless they came and spoke directly to her. Then, of course, they took care to enunciate properly, knowing how much she disapproved the modern carelessness; but the moment she turned away it was all forgotten, and even Phenix and Pamphylia, who were as well brought up as herself, did no better. One said "M-m-m-m," and the other answered "M-m-m-m," and it was only a miracle that they ever made head or tail of each other's remarks. But Miss Mehitable always preferred her friends should please themselves rather than her; so she sat peacefully by, heard what she could, and let the rest go.

It was not till the circle of those who attempted proper enunciation had thinned down to the very strong-winded ones, and Miss Mehitable's replies to even their remarks sometimes fitted about as well as if she had put her own bonnet on Phenix's head by mistake, that one of the bravest of them ventured a suggestion.

Would it not be a little strange if all her friends had lost their voices at once? Might it not be possible that her hearing had lost a trifle of its acuteness?

The suggestion was repudiated with only the least perceptible sharpening of Miss Mehitable's usual gentleness; but when Phenix brought home from the city one day, as a delicate offering, an ear-trumpet, new in design, graceful and light, she rose to her feet and flamed into such a blaze of indignation as all the rest of her gentle life could hardly sum up.

"An ear-trumpet! Was she to be the scape-goat for everybody's carelessness, and wear this crooked horn as a badge of it? Deaf? How could she be deaf any more than he was, when their birthdays were the same? Would he have the great kindness to carry that instrument into his own room and keep it there, since waste was sinful, until she should ask for it?"

It did not seem to Phenix that Pamphylia could say anything this time, but as he passed between her and Miss Mehitable, her face brightened. "Still," she whispered, "it's a comfort to think you've increased the regular sale."

The grapes had purpled and been gathered five times since then; to-morrow would be Thanksgiving Day once more, and the ear-trumpet lay on the piano in Phenix's room, shining and bright as on the first day it had been banished there.

"Turkey, of course," said Phenix, as they sat round the fire after tea, letting the lights and shadows give lessons in blind man's buff in advance. "Couldn't there be anything else for a change? This will be my fifty-fifth in annual regularity."

"And my fiftieth; a real old maid," laughed Miss Pamphylia, softly.

"Nonsense," began Phenix, with a glance at her bright brown eyes and chestnut hair; but Miss Mehitable turned gently from the fire.

"Oh, yes, dear; they often live to a great age. I remember one allowed to wander in your father's field that was over a hundred. At least the inscription on its back said so. I suppose it is because they are so slow about everything."

"Not turtles—turkeys," shouted Phenix. "Dindons for dinner to-morrow."

"But please don't speak so loud, brother," said Miss Mehitable. "I like distinctness, that is all. Though I am surprised at your thinking of dandelions, so altogether out of season; and, besides, cranberry sauce is Latin for roast turkey always." And Miss Mehitable laid her hands on the folded handkerchief, with a peaceful smile.

This was what drew the despairing look from Phenix, and sent Miss Pamphylia to take refuge in reflecting that Hetty "could have the trumpet." Not that they cared in the least on their own account; it was only the thought of to-morrow, when there would be company. They were so proud of Hetty, and couldn't bear to have her make herself ridiculous.

Nothing seemed less probably, as Miss Mehitable took her seat at the table the next day, faultlessly dressed, and smiling benignly upon every one, with Cousin John, a clergyman of the Methodist persuasion, on her right hand, and a distinguished professor of elocution on her left.

"Pretty strong outposts, and Hetty always does look well," thought Phenix, with a sigh of relief, as he took up the ball she had gracefully set rolling, and croqueted it among his neighbors. It flitted about for a while in a velvety way most soothing to his fears, when suddenly, just as his anxiety began to subside, there was a crash at Miss Mehitable's end of the table, reverberating like a clap of thunder. She had set out on a series of reminiscences with Cousin John, who had just returned after a twenty years' absence, and he was inquiring at the extreme of his pulpit tones:

"Where is the Judge now?"

Miss Mehitable nodded and smiled, as she always did when she felt pretty sure, but not quite, that "Oh, yes," was the right answer. This wouldn't do, for every one had started at the crash and was listening; so Cousin John tried again:

"The Judge; where is the Judge now?"

"Oh, standing on the very same spot," said Miss Mehitable; "just on the crown of the hill. Very windy on a cold day, and a little conspicuous; but local attachments are strong, you know, and we have worshiped there a great many years."

"Ah," said Cousin John, looking suddenly into his plate, and Phenix told him it would not be New England Thanksgiving if he did not send it up for more turkey; and then every one began to say what a terrible thinning there was in the rank and file of the poultry yards to-day. Miss Mehitable nodded and smiled so appreciatingly, that the Professor wondered how Cousin John managed to get into such trouble.

"A terrible sacrifice among the feathered tribes," he said, addressing her.

"Oh, very sad!" said Miss Mehitable, with a sudden shadowing of her face. "I'm afraid very few of them will ever come back. And to think the only return we can make is to decorate their graves! We did a great many last year, and there will be more than ever, I'm afraid, when this campaign is over."

After this it struck Miss Mehitable that the conversation became very general; so much so that she could not catch the opportunity to ask Cousin John as many questions as she would like, or to be particularly polite to the Professor. However, everything seemed going on delightfully, though, she noticed the same general carelessness of enunciation; still, she was used to that, and she would catch Cousin John after they returned to the parlor.

But Cousin John wasn't to be caught; he was very busily engaged with some one else whenever she passed near him; and, indeed, every one grew very talkative, and even the candles and fire light seemed to Miss Mehitable gayer than on other nights.

"Strange ways New England people are falling into," said Cousin John's nearest neighbor. "Thanksgiving dinner at 'early candle light' is something equally new and nice."

"Is it new or old?" asked Phenix, and then came a free discussion of dinner hours in times past, present, and to come.

"I wonder what time Abraham dined?" said Miss Pamphylia, suddenly.

Cousin John said that was a tentative question; it would be easier to say what he dined upon; and some one answered: "Oh, yes, that was on a Mess-o-pot-a-mian plain."

Miss Mehitable nodded and smiled, but the Professor thought he would make it a little more distinct for her.

"We are wondering at what time Abraham dined," he enunciated, coming very close, on pretense of picking up the handkerchief which had slipped from her lap.

"Oh, he dined at 4 o'clock; I was intimately acquainted with him," said Miss Mehitable, a glow of pleasant recollection suffusing her gentle face. But, at the same moment, she caught a very peculiar one on the Professor's. She glanced at Cousin John's. Was it possible the turkey had not agreed with him that he was looking so very red? She looked at Phenix—he was white! Pamphylia was blue, and the rest were all looking the other way. A sudden and dreadful suspicion seized Miss Mehitable. A professor of elocution must enunciate well; if she had misunderstood him whose fault must it be?

"Cousin John," she said, turning toward the white necktie that had eluded her so many times that evening, "who did you understand the Professor to speak of?"

"Abraham," replied Cousin John, with truth and distinctness united in tremendous force.

"Did you, Pamphylia?"

Miss Pamphylia, and, one after another, Phenix and all the rest, nodded assent.

Two round red spots came into Miss Mehitable's cheeks, and she dropped her hands on the handkerchief with a gesture of surprise. Then she looked up with the unfailing smile.

"Then, Phenix, will you have the kindness to bring that instrument you have been keeping in your room for me?"

Phenix cast one look at Miss Pamphylia. She stood petrified, and her brown eyes seemed leaping after him as he left the room. Hetty had asked for the trumpet!

But by the time he came back, Miss Pamphylia had vibrated to a "reflection," and found her balance again.

"Still," she was saying to herself, "it is a great comfort to feel that it will be keeping a promise; and I've got on my new black silk, and Phenix is a great deal too good for me—that is the only trouble."

"Now, Phenix," said Miss Mehitable, inserting the trumpet in her ear, "let me hear something pleasant through this, if you can."

He looked once more at Miss Pamphylia. Her eyes shone this time, and he went across to her with the tread of a conqueror. With his right hand he led her to Miss Mehitable, and with the left he raised the mouth of the trumpet to his lips.

"If you will give us your blessing, and allow Cousin John to perform the ceremony, I believe we are ready," he said.

It is strange how much less time it requires to do things than to get ready for them. It did not seem five minutes to Miss Pamphylia before it was all over, and Phenix was showing the last guest out at the front door.

Miss Mehitable sat holding the trumpet as if she would never let it go again.

"If I had only had sense enough to ask for it five years ago!" she said. "But I do hope, Pamphylia, you will find it pleasant having a husband at last!"

Miss Pamphylia grew suddenly serious.

"I don't know," she murmured, over the edge of the trumpet; but in a moment her face cleared and shone into Miss Mehitable's.

"But if I shouldn't, it will be a great comfort to me to reflect that I have lived single as long as I have!" she said.—Scribner's Monthly.

HELEN'S THANKSGIVING.

"Why don't you get ready for church?"

"Because, I'm not going mother."

Mrs. Tracy knew the peculiar disposition of her daughter, and rarely interfered when she expressed a determination, but to-day she impatiently replied:

"Well, some of us ought to go, and as you are the only one fit to be seen, and we have all worked self-sacrificingly the whole week to help you finish your suit for to-day, I cannot understand why you are not going to church."

"Don't scold mother; I have my reasons."

"Reasons be fiddled! I really do not see why your whims should set the whole congregation questioning our empty pew. Em can't go; she's always out at the heels. I never saw a girl wear out shoes as she does. Aggie's hat didn't come home last night, and Bertha is not presentable in her last winter's cloak. And there is no earthly use in sending your father; he will scandalize us by snoring all through the service, unless some of us are near enough to pinch him when he begins to nod. I certainly can't be spared from the dinner, although, Lord knows, I have much to give thanks for; very much. But that plaguey girl has got one of her lumbago days again, and everything will be burnt to a crisp unless I am here to see to things."

This good mother, who in the midst of so much care, yet had "much to be thankful for," was bending over a huge pile of clean clothes, distributing to her numerous progeny, so intently occupied with her duty and her lecture, she did not notice Helen leave the room.

The girl was not in harmony with such exceeding trivial affairs as engrossed her mother's attention. Her appetite was smothered by the weight of distress in her heart. New suits, turkeys or sacerdotal utterances, had little to do with the feeling that influenced her to remain at home. Why should she give thanks for favors that were thrust upon her with the existence that, just now, had so little value, because not shared by a certain young gentleman?

The pretty gray suit was finished with the expectation of wearing it to church—but in the company of a favored admirer. Her invitation to him, seconded and approved by her parents, to make one of the family party, was accompanied by such sweet dreams as only a young girl can dream, when tokens and signs of mutual admiration have led her to think of that young man as he appears for the first time "one of the family."

How proudly, joyfully he accepted! The evening before Thanksgiving he came hurriedly, saying: "Miss Helen, it is impossible for me to make one of your happy dinner party to-morrow, and I shall also be obliged to forego the pleasure of your company to church. Make my apologies to your kind parents, will you? Nothing but the pressing command of my employer could defraud me of the delightful gratification of your society, and I am scarcely at liberty to speak of the probable consequences. You will, however, excuse me!"

"Oh, certainly," replied Helen, with the utmost haughtiness.

"You are not angry, Helen!"

"Angry!" laughed she, indifferently; "why should I be? Mr. Scott is quite competent to select his own company, I'm sure."

"You are vexed with me, Helen, but I trust to a fair judgment when I explain the necessity that forces me from your side to-morrow."

With a freezing "good-night" she had parted from him; all the felicity of her heart was conquered by the dread of lost happiness; and she really felt as if earth could offer nothing to be grateful for.

When the family was called to dinner her father exclaimed: "Are we all here?"

Helen answered "yes," but the mother said, "No. Young Scott promised to come; he is late." Then a light seemed to enter her occupied brain, and she turned to her daughter with a questioning gaze.

"I really forgot all about it, but he called last evening to make his excuses, as he was obliged to attend Mr. Foster to-day, unexpectedly, I believe."

"Too bad," said Mr. Tracy, "but George Scott is a man that will sacrifice a good time any day for his employer's interest. He is alive to his own future at the same time. I should not be the least surprised if he became one of the firm in a few years—let us ask a blessing."

And they enjoyed their appetites and gave thanks, but Helen had a headache, and retired to her room to imagine all kinds of injudicious things, and tormented herself with the possibilities of Mr. Foster taking Mr. Scott home to dine with him. And his lovely daughter—perhaps at this very moment, while she is grieving, he is looking into the dark eyes of his employer's only child. But why waste time in reviewing all her distressing visions? There is no limit to a loving woman's imagination.

The long, dreary day came to an end, and Helen had fretted herself into a real throbbing headache, when her sister came to inform her that Mr. Scott was in the parlor.

"Oh, he has given her all the long hours of the day, and I am to be honored with the remnants! 'Thanks; I'll not go down,'" she said.

Nevertheless, she rose and smoothed her hair, rubbed a little powder on the glossy end of her nose, and thought she might as well try on her new suit, if only for pastime.

Before she was quite ready her sister returned with a little slip of paper on which was penciled:

"Helen, do not make me wretched, grant me only a moment. GEORGE."

She could not resist such an appeal, and when she entered the parlor the family kindly retired to another apartment, and George ran to meet her as if they had been parted for a year.

"My darling! my pet! you are mine, are you not?"

Helen submitted blushingly and gracefully to the rapturous embrace, feeling indeed as if she had made a dunce of herself all day, but did not restrain the inward joy it afforded her when he whispered with his lips close to her ear:

"I was so miserable to think that you were angry with me, I could not close my eyes the whole night, and as for dinner, every mouthful choked me. But it is over, I here give your father our papers of copartnership that Mr. Foster gave me making me a member of his firm. That places me in a position to offer the woman I long have loved a suitable home. Will you, precious, crown my happiness with your own sweet lips, and tell me that you are willing to share home, hopes and aspirations with me? Will you be my wife?"

Softly came the answer: "Yes."

Solemnly he clasped her hands, while an expression of rare-soul beauty lighted his honest face.

"From God I take the charge; may He deal with me as I deal with the sacred trust." And their hearts were filled with a wonderful spirit of thankfulness, quite commensurate with the requirements of a national proclamation.

A FAMILY in Marshalltown, Mo., consisted of a husband, a wife, and a daughter of the wife by a previous marriage; and there was a boarder. The husband was a druggist, the boarder was a lawyer and all were well regarded in the village. The affections of these four persons became deranged, and when a thorough understanding of their hearts' conditions could be had, it was found that the boarder and the wife loved each other, and that the husband and the daughter were similarly paired. They decided upon a rearrangement of relations, the boarder employing his knowledge of law in making a flank. The husband amicably abandoned his wife, to give her the chance to get a divorce; and, the separation being accomplished, the two couples were married according to their liking, and are now living in the same house. The villagers, however, do not approve, and one night they gathered around the house to express their sentiments by blowing horns and burning tar.

Natural Philosophy.

Yesterday, when a red-faced man, waiting at one of the depots for a train, blew his nose ten or fifteen times with a great echo, a newsboy ran out on the street and yelled:

"Come yere, Jim—here's Gineral Grant!"

Jim took a long look at the man and replied:

"He's no Gineral Grant."

"He ain't, eh?" shouted the first; "well, you just wait and hear him blow his nose again and see if he isn't some big gun or other!"—Detroit Free Press

An Aristocratic Burglar.

Peter Curley, now in Washington County Jail, Montpelier, Vt., as the supposed leader of the Barre Bank robbers, first came into public notice in Troy, N. Y. He is quite a handsome man, about 35 years old, dresses elegantly, and is in appearance what many term aristocratic. He is well educated, very intelligent, and has none of the ordinary social habits of thieves. His liking of theatres made him a liberal patron of them, the more so, he said, as he was cut off by his reputation from society that would have been congenial. He often occupied a box at the opera, too, and had considerable skill in music, being a fine pianist, tutored by the best teachers. He has for many years made a business of burglary, amassing thereby a fortune estimated at several hundred thousand dollars; and his money and adroitness have until now got him out of every trouble with the law. He lived luxuriously, but without dissipation, was always gentlemanly in demeanor, dressed in careful, good taste, and was excessively generous, often contributing to funds for laudable public uses. His accumulation of property was steady and rapid. He owned the St. Charles Hotel in Troy, and resided in it, occupying sumptuous apartments. One night the hotel was set on fire, but not badly damaged, and an investigation showed that the insurance was high, and that valuable contents included in the schedules had been removed. The general belief was that Curley had planned, if not executed, the incendiarism. His first arrest was for a burglary in West Troy, when he took $40,000 in cash and government bonds from a safe in the Roy shawl factory. He was not punished, however, and the facility with which he got out of that difficulty has since been repeated often. He is supposed to have been the leader in eleven bank robberies, planning the crimes, furnishing the money for heavy expenses and fine burglary machinery, and taking lion shares of the booty. His enterprises have invariably been planned and executed with great care and skill, often occupying months. His undertakings have invariably been of great magnitude, and, although many times arrested, he has never been brought to trial. In most instances a return of part of the spoil, through rogues among the detectives, has been his way to freedom.—Boston Herald.

Recovering a Hat Under Difficulties.

Louisville correspondence of the Chicago Tribune: "A gallery-god produced a great deal of mirth and applause, Friday evening at Macauley's, just before the curtain rose for the final act of Mr. Raymond's impersonation of Col. Mulberry Sellers. At the time, every seat, parquet, circle, balcony and gallery, was occupied, and even standing-room was hardly to be had. A young man who sat in the balcony accidentally let his hat fall into the parquet. The crowd around him was so great that he could not force his way out and down to get his hat. Right here his gigantic intelligence came to the rescue, and like the man of brains he had come to see, he evolved an idea from his inner consciousness. The idea was altogether new. He tore his handkerchief, and perhaps that of a friend, into strips, and tied them together. He next very cautiously dropped the line over the railing, and slowly lowered it in the direction of the parquet below, hoping to escape the attention of those in the gallery above. Such was not to be, however. As the odd-looking line descended to a chap in the parquet, the gallery-gods espied it, and also the hat. Loud cries of "Shoot him!" "Put him out!" "Shoot the hat!" "Pull her up!" etc., greeted the young man in the parquet as he attached the line to the hat, so that, by the time the owner began to pull upward, the entire audience was in an uproar. The curtain now rose for the last time, and so did the hat. When both were about half-way up, a gallery-god shouted, "Pull her up, boys—there's millions in it; pull her up, up, up." The audience was full of mirth before the cry was uttered. The wit of the young man above was quickly perceived and appreciated, deafening applause following his remark. Those on the stage looked on in amazement, such as is seldom seen on their faces. Their look plainly showed they feared something wrong in the play had occurred, but not until Col. Mulberry hurried on the stage did the noise cease.

Murder and Suicide.

Robert Sims was engaged to be married to Miss Willie, daughter of Capt. Gill Greer, of Bosque County. The parents of the young lady were bitterly opposed to the match, and induced her to break the engagement. Sims swore she would never marry any one else. He left, and was spending his time in Kansas. In the meantime, the young lady had become engaged to a young doctor named Trader. A friend of Sims wrote to him and explained the condition of affairs. Sims returned, and, going to the house of Capt. Greer, found the young doctor there. He asked the young lady to take a walk with him. This she refused to do, but said she would see him privately in another room. They adjourned to the other room, and soon a pistol shot was heard in that direction. The mother of the girl went as rapidly as possible to the relief of her daughter, but, by the time she arrived, Sims had shot the girl three times, and, placing the pistol to his head, blew his own brains out. He died immediately, and the young lady survived him only a few moments. Sims had some time before that killed a man, and this had probably rendered him desperate.—Waxahatchie (Tex.) Enterprise.

Dialect Rhyme.

An English paper gives the following short poem as a specimen of the dialect spoken in the county of Lancashire. As such it may be interesting to our readers, who may understand it as written, though it would probably be double Dutch to them if they heard it. The verses purport to be the description of a lost baby, by the town-crier, or bellman, who still plies his trade in out-of-the-way parts of England:

Law-st oather [either] to-day or else some toime to morn,
As pretty a babby as ever wur born;
It has cheeks like red roses, two bonny blue een,
Had it meauth daubed wi' trayele th' last toime it were seen;
It's just cuttin' it teeth, an' has very sore gums,
An' it's gettin' a habit o' suckin' it thumbs;
Thoose at foind it may keep it, there's nob'dy 'l care,
For thoose at hav lost it, hav lots moor to spare!

THANKSGIVING.

BY D. P. SHELLABER.

Many and bright are the scenes that are planned,
Many the hearts that with gladness expand,
Many the hopes with fruition at hand,
And the voice of the turkey is heard in the land;
For Thanksgiving Day
Is welcomed alway—
A heart-warming, glorious, genial season,
When the feelings, repressed
By traffic's behest,
On one day, at least, for dominion contest,
And strive, as of old, to be specially blest,
While care is a species of treason.

The city shuts up its shop for the day,
The oldest and youngest play or pray;
The churches are open in the ancient way,
For preachers to utter whatever they may,
With few to listen to what they say,
While all the chaises and carriages
Are dashing around with their merry loads
Of babies dressed in their prettiest modes,
To dump at the doors of kindred abodes,
Or filled with those still happier nodes
Who rush to try that best of codes
Which binds us up in marriages.

The horse in the stall, the dog at the door,
Are loved and caressed and kissed once more,
And smiles are joyously beaming,
And the pullets, destined for them to die,
Look on the scenes with a cheerful eye,
In sympathetic seeming.

The land is vocal with psalm and prayer,
And joy's glad note sounds everywhere
A festival oblation,
And savory steams like clouds arise,
To tickle the palate and glad the eyes
Of lovers of virtue and pumpkin pies,
Where grave and gay, and dull and wise,
Pay tribute to gustation.

Review of the Guibord Case.

The long-vexed bones of Guibord have been consigned to the grave in the Catholic cemetery in Montreal, Canada, in the lot which Guibord purchased years ago, but, although he has been dead six years, has hitherto been denied admission. Guibord was a member of the Institut Canadien, which some years ago came under the ban of the Catholic Church because in its library were works which had been placed on the Index Expurgatorius, the Church claiming the right to say what books its members may or may not read. The Institut Canadien paid little attention to this matter. About this time Mr. Guibord fell sick, and, wishing to be reconciled with the Church, renounced the Institut and received the last sacraments. But he got well, returned to the Institut, and suddenly sickened and died under the ban. He owned a lot in the Catholic cemetery, but the parish authorities denied him burial in it; the Institut brought an action to compel the Church to bury him, but was refused, as it subsequently was on appeal to the Superior Court and the Court of Appeals, from which appeal went to the Queen in Council, who decided that Guibord's friends had the right to bury in his lot in the Catholic cemetery the body which, since 1869, had lain in a vault in the Mount Royal Cemetery. So great has been the opposition to this that riots have been imminent; but now, under the protection of the military, Guibord has been interred, and his grave filled in with a solid mass of cement to prevent the removal of his remains.

Peter White and his Mother-in-Law.

There were three of them. One was a bride, the other a happy groom with red ears and maiden whiskers, and the third was the bride's mother. They were at the Grand Trunk depot yesterday morning to take the train West. The young man clasped his young wife's fat hand, rolled up his eyes, and they seemed happy, while the mother-in-law paraded up and down the sitting-room with lordly air and seemed well satisfied. Pretty soon the groom went out, and when he returned he threw five pop-corn balls and a big bar of peanut candy into the bride's lap, and handed the old lady another. She turned up her nose, raised her spectacles, and thus addressed the young man with red ears:

"See here, Peter White, you are married to Sabintha, ain't you?"

"Why, of course."

"And we are now on your bridal tower, ain't we?"

"Yes."

"Well, now, you've been squandering money all along, Peter. You took a hack; you bought oysters; you bought a jack-knife, and you've just thrown money away. I feel that it is my duty to tell you to hold up before you make a fool of yourself!"

"Whose money is this?" he asked, growing very red in the face.

"It is yours, and what is yours is Sabintha's, and it is my duty as her mother to speak out when I see you fooling your money away."

"I guess I can take care of my money!" he retorted.

"Perhaps you can, Peter White, but there are those in your family who can't!"

He struggled with his feelings as the bride shook her head at him and then asked:

"Said I marry you?"

"No, sir, you didn't, you little bow-legged apology for a man, but I have a right to speak for my daughter."

"You can speak all you want to, but I want you to understand that I can manage my own affairs, and that I don't care for your advice."

"Peter White!" she slowly responded, waving the peanut candy close to his nose, "I see we've got to have a fuss, and we might as well have it now!"

"Ma! ma!" whispered the bride, pulling at the old lady's shawl.

"You needn't ma me, Sabintha! This Peter White has deceived us both about his temper, and I'm going to tell him just what I think of him! He commenced this fuss, and we'll see who'll end it!"

"You mind your business and I'll attend to mine!" growled Peter.

"Oh! you hump-backed hypocrite!" she hissed, jabbing at his eye with the peanut-bar. "Only a month ago you called me 'Mother Hull,' and was going to give me the best room in the new house!"

"You'll never have a room in a house of mine!" he exclaimed.

"And I don't want one, you red-eared hypocrite!"

"Don't, Peter—don't, ma!" sobbed the bride.

"It's my duty, Sabintha; it's your mother's ——!"

"Don't cry, Sabby," he interrupte "don't mind what she says!"

"Try to set my daughter up agin me, will you!" hissed the old lady, as she brought the peanut bar down on his nose.

"Oh! ma!" yelled the bride.

"You old wretch!" hissed Peter, as he clawed at her.

"None of the Whites will ever run over me!" exclaimed the mother-in-law, as she got hold of his shirt collar and hauled him around.

"I'll knock your old ——!"

"You can't knock nothing!" she interrupted, backing him against the table.

"Ma! Oh-h-h! ma!" howled Sabintha.

The dozen other passengers in the room who had been interested and amused listeners, here interrupted, and Peter was released from the old lady's grasp, his collar having been torn off and his cheek scratched.

"I expected this and prepared for it!" panted the mother-in-law as she leaned against the wall. "This dosen't end it, by any means! This bridal tower will come to a stop to-morrow, and then we'll see whether I've got any business to speak up for Sabintha or not!"

As the train moved away the old lady wore a grim smile, Sabintha was weeping, and Peter was struggling with another paper collar.—Detroit Free Press.

A Child With a Bullet in Its Brain.

The Boonville (Mo.) Enquirer says: "A number of our exchanges are having a good deal to say about men going about with bullets in their brains. That may do well enough for men, but we can beat them all by a similar instance of a little boy in our midst. Three years ago, on Thanksgiving Day, a neighbor, Mrs. Gloth, stepped in to visit a Mrs. Bœttacher, and while engaged in conversation the former picked up a revolver that was near, and which had been lying about the house not supposed to be loaded, and while carelessly handling the same, the weapon was discharged, the ball striking a three-year-old boy, which was sitting on the mother's lap, on the front part of the head, passing directly through, and lodging in the brain, producing a fracture from which the brain oozed for several days. Strange as it may seem, the child never lost its consciousness, and recovered in a few weeks, and is now well and hearty, neither its mental or physical condition being impaired. These are facts of our personal knowledge, and well known to our citizens."

The Hugenots in America.

On the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685, at least 500,000 Huguenots took refuge in foreign lands. From this time, for many years, their cause was completely broken in France. In 1705 there was not a single organized congregation of Huguenots left in all France. So early as 1555, Coligni attempted, but without success, to establish a Huguenot colony in Brazil. In 1562 he sent out two ships, under the command of Jean Ribault, on a voyage of exploration to Florida, but the attempt to establish a colony was unsuccessful. Many departed for North America even before the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. Some settled in and around New Amsterdam, now New York, where their family names are frequent. Others found homes in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Virginia. But South Carolina was their favorite resting-place and a large number of the foremost families in that State are of Huguenot origin. This class of immigrants has contributed, in proportion to its numbers, a vast share to the culture and prosperity of the United States. Wherever they settled they were noted for severe morality, great charity, and politeness and elegance of manners. Of seven Presidents who directed the deliberations of the Congress of Philadelphia during the Revolution, three, Henry Laurens, John Jay, and Elias Boudinot, were of Huguenot parentage.—Appleton's American Cyclopædia.

This area is as large as New York and Pennsylvania combined, and is all meadow land raised but a few feet above the river—lakes, rivers, canals—a complete net-work of water communication; the land under the highest tilth; three crops a year harvested; population so dense that wherever you look you see men and women, in blue pants and blouse, so numerous that you fancy some fair or muster is coming off, and all hands have turned out for a holiday.

Their bearer was killed in a fight with the natives, but the letters, stained with blood, were found by a detachment of troops who afterward visited the scene of action. In this state they were forwarded to their destination.

Gained 15 Pounds of Flesh.

South Berwick, Me., Jan. 17, 1872.

H. R. Stevens, Esq.:

Dear Sir—I have had Dyspepsia in its worst form for the last ten years, and have taken hundreds of dollars' worth of medicine without obtaining any relief. In September last I commenced taking the Vegetine, since which time my health has steadily improved. My food digests well, and I have gained fifteen pounds of flesh. There are several others in this place taking the Vegetine, and all have obtained relief.

Yours truly,
THOMAS E. MOORE,
Overseer of the Card Room, Portsmouth Co.'s Mills.

DYSPEPSIA.

SYMPTOMS.—Want of appetite, rising of food and wind from the stomach, acidity of the stomach, heartburn, dryness and whiteness of the tongue in the morning, sense of distension in the stomach and bowels, sometimes rumbling and pain; costiveness, which is occasionally interrupted by diarrhea; paleness of the urine. The mouth is clammy, or has a sour or bitter taste. Other frequent symptoms are waterbrash, palpitation of the heart, headache, and disorders of the senses, as seeing double, &c. There is general debility, languor and aversion to motion, dejection of the spirits, disturbed sleep, and frightful dreams.

Feel Myself a New Man.

Natick, Mass., June 1st, 1872.

Mr. H. R. Stevens:

Dear Sir—Through the advice and earnest persuasion of Rev. E. S. Best, of this place, I have been taking VEGETINE for Dyspepsia, of which I have suffered for years. I have used only two bottles, and already feel myself a new man.

Respectfully, DR. J. W. CARTER.

A Source of Great Anxiety.

My daughter has received great benefit from the use of Vegetine. Her declining health was a source of great anxiety to all of her friends. A few bottles of the Vegetine restored her health, strength and appetite.

N. H. TILDEN,
Ins. and Real Estate Agt., 49 Sears' Building.
Boston, Mass., June 5, 1872.

WHAT I KNOW ABOUT VEGETINE.

South Boston, May 9, 1870.

H. R. Stevens:

Dear Sir—I have had considerable experience with the Vegetine. For dyspepsia, general debility and impure blood, the Vegetine is superior to anything which I have ever used. I commenced taking Vegetine about the middle of last winter, and after using a few bottles it entirely cured me of dyspepsia, and my blood never was in so good condition as at the present time. It will afford me pleasure to give any further particulars relative to what I know about this good medicine, to any one who will call or address me at my residence, 386 Athens street.

Very respectfully, MONROE PARKER,
386 Athens Street.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Two Months Free!

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

The Paper for Business Men, Farmers, Families, and all the People.

1. It publishes all the news.
2. It is candid and independent in all things; in politics it favors honest money, government reform and lower taxes; and it so fairly reflects in these respects the popular voice that every considerable State election this year has gone on the side THE TRIBUNE favored.
3. Its moral tone is unexceptionable, nothing appearing in its pages unsuited for the most refined and cultured family circle.
4. It has the best and freshest correspondence, poems, stories; in short, the cream of the current literature of the day; the best and fullest scientific, religious and literary intelligence.
5. Its Agricultural Department is the fullest, most thorough, practical and useful in any paper. It gives its readers in each number as much or more than the highest-priced monthlies.
6. Its Market Reports are the generally accepted standard for dealers and producers throughout the country.
7. Its aggregate circulation is larger than that of any other four-cent morning paper in New York.
8. Its circulation, regarding character as well as number of subscribers, is better than that of any paper in the country.
9. It is growing more vigorously, and increasing in circulation more rapidly, than any of its rivals.

TERMS OF THE TRIBUNE.

REGISTERED WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL FOR ALL LUNG DISEASES TRADE MARK.

"NATURE'S GREAT REMEDY."

This Cordial is a CERTAIN CURE for Coughs, Colds, Inflammation of the Lungs, Sore Throat and Breast, Bronchitis, and if taken in time, will arrest that fatal disease Consumption. The basis of this medicine is a preparation of Tar obtained by a peculiar process from the sap of the Pine Tree, the medicinal properties of which are well known. With this powerful element are thoroughly incorporated several other vegetable ingredients, each of which possesses soothing and healing attributes, thus making it the most POTENT ANTAGONIST to all diseases of the pulmonary organs that has yet been introduced.

DR. L. Q. C. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL is not a new remedy that has never been heard of before, but an OLD, RELIABLE, AND WELL-TRIED medicine that has been in daily use by families and intelligent physicians for the last sixteen years, and is spoken of in the highest terms by all who have used it, as thousands of UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIALS prove.

If you suffer from any disease for which this Cordial is recommended, we unhesitatingly say: "TRY IT, WE KNOW IT WILL DO YOU GOOD." A single bottle will demonstrate its valuable qualities.

The U. S. mail building is loomin' up. Won't Lee feel tonny though.

Geo Patterson has moved with his family into the country, and will till the soil.

The Presbyterian Society, at S. W. Ralston's, was largely attended, and enjoyed.

We learn that Mr. Stevens has sold his livery stock to I. N. Cool & Son, of this city.

A nice, neat and tasty "barn-yard" fence is going around the new jail building.

Billy Lyttle has got the boss pointer dog. He came from down on the Kankakee.

Somebody ought to start a city hack, one that accommodates night and day—Two of our young men will patronize it freely.

"Keep the lid on old man, or you'll make it weak!" And the milkman said, "No fear; reckoned on rain, and brought it over proof."

P. V. Hoffman, Esq., attorney at law, has located in the city for the practice of his profession. He met with great success at Butler and through his clever and courteous ways will soon receive a share of the patronage here.

America is shipping manufactured cotton to England. Superior machinery and enterprise will tell against the cheap labor of Europe. This is by no means the first instance, and we look for an increase till the balance of trade will be largely in our favor. Gold will then accumulate in our county.

Trade continues very good. In this respect it differs much from last year, when the June trade was largest and grew gradually less to the close of the year. It is not always easy to tell what one year will be by what another has been. Reports from the great Eastern markets indicate that the seasons is pretty much past with them.

We have known young men who would think it a very unpleasant duty to hold a skein of yarn a few minutes for their mother but they would walk a mile or more on a very dark evening and hold 125 pounds of a neighboring family for the greater part of the night, then walk home again with a patience and docility that were certainly pheumenal.

She Wanted Information.

An old lady entered a dry goods store Saturday, on Main-st., and after warming hereself she turned to the proprietor and blazed out:

"Where does that old man live that got hurt by the B. & O. train the other day?"

"He lives on Cedar Street, just in rear of Rainier House."

"You'r sure are you?" asked the old lady.

"Yes, that's where he lives."

"Well, if your sure, that's all right.—But what I was going to say is, that if he'd made one more step he'd been all hunky."

The old lady kept up her noise for a long time, and the proprietor began to get nervous and ask:

"Is there anything I can show you to-day?"

"Yes. But as I said a 'fore, if he'd jist made one more step—

"What can I show you?" interrupted the proprietor.

"Don't be in a rush, old man; its a long time 'till night, and I want a little information concernin' them are railroads. I'm goin' to back that old man—I am."

The proprietor started to go out, and the old lady colared him.

"I'll return in one minute. The clerk there will wait on you."

He went back of the store and peeked through the window to see when the old woman would leave.

"Good morning madam," said the clerk, "what is it this morning?"

"I say young fellow did you hear of that accident."

"Speak a little louder," said the clerk "I'm hard of hearing."

"Did you hear about that man getting hit by the cars?"

"Who hit him with bars, and what was the matter."

The old woman got angry and hollered as loud as she could.

"You're a regular lalagag, and I'll do my tradein' with people that act nighborly. When such fools as you kick the bucket its generally done by a cowcatcher or the heels of a mule." anohow

And she took her bundle under her arm and went south on Main-st.

Tain't Hardly Fair.

Bro. Wermer says that he's going to give every business man and woman in Auburn a free notice for a Christmas present. Now, we'd like to know who is business. If we mistake not about 4,999 of our young men are actually Business, and if you doubt it just square off at some of 'em. We don't want any business in ours—no, please count us out, although it 'taint hardly fair for R. W. to stand all the blunt.

Marriage Licenses.

County Clerk Moss issued the following Marriage Licenses, during the month of November.

Albert J. Beard and Sarah Campbell; Philip Pfaffman and Anna Ahrens; John L. McLeod and Mary L. Smith; M. V. Hettinger and Zeruiah Johnson; Daniel Shilling and Clara A. Widney; E. F. Gibson and Della Porter; Samuel Greenemyer and Catharine Dawson; S. B. Reeder and Lucinda Rosenbury; Robert H. Gilbert and Sarah A. Burniston; Benjamin Hamilton and Martha Marsh; Henry Coe and Hattie A. Reed; William H. Erwin and Sarah E McAntarfer; Franklin Killinger and Clara Seguar; George McMullen and Rose Kilkenny; Willis E Baker and July Ann Sayler; Charles A Willahan and Mary J Hall; Samuel Lawhead and Sarah C. Kugey; Emanuel Bushong and Hannah Mootheart.

Wm. B. Astor, probably the richest man in the United States, died in New York last Wednesday aged 88 years. He was said to be worth about two hundred million dollars, which was largely invested in a improved property in New York city. He also had heavy interest in a number of leading railroads. He was the owner of over 3,000 houses in that city and never insured any of his property in fire insurance companies. He leaves three sons, John Jacob, William and Henry, and two married daughters. He was borne in New York city, on Broadway, but his father, John Jacob Astor, was born in Heidelberg, Germany, and coming to this country in early life, embarked in the fur trade, and amassed a fortune. He died in 1848, at the age of 88 years, leaving an estate valued at upwards of twenty million.

Something to Read on Sundays

The whole family climbed out of the wagon and went into the book store—

They were father, mother and a sixteen old daughter.

"Mister, we want to sorter get somethin' good to read on Sundays, which is powerful lonesome out in the country."

"Shall be glad to serve you sir. What will the ladies like."

"I'd choose something 'bout the new fashions, pa."

"Of koase, I mought a know'd that! Kin you fix her out?"

"Oh, yes," replied the storekeeper; "we have here Godey Leslie, Harper's Bazar, Peterson, Demorest, and numerous other magazines."

"Gody? w'y you don't tell me he's live an' fingerin' out fashions yet, do ye?" cried the old man.

"Oh, yes!" was the reply.

"Well, centennial snakes and cross-barred breeches! W'y ole'ooman, don't ye mind that we hed our weddin' close fixed up arter his plan? Gody! Of korse Sofy ye'll take Gody, and I'll bet that bob-tailed mule and the black shoat that what he sez is the fashion can't be discounted."

"What will your wife like?" asked the merchant, as the old man paid for the magazine.

"Somethin' that's got good church readin' in it —some religous paper, ef ye please," said the old lady.

"Here is the best we have—Christian at work."

"Hold up thar! Is they got eny of this here Beecher an' Tilton bizzness if it?"

"None o'yer bizzness, anyhow, what if it has?" fired the old woman.

"Tain't hey?"

"No taint! So its church readin' if don't bother you sir; so dry up."

"Well, mebbe that's so; an' what I read don't bother you, too? All right, mister; jist hand me out half dozen 'lustrated papers full of pictures of legs with striped stockin's on an' fifty dollar garters, and—"

The old lady chucked the Christian at work under the table, grabbed the old man by the ear, and if he had worn striped stockings, about 11 inches of them would have been seen between the tops of his shoes and the bottom of his pants' legs, as she made him walk Spanish out to the wagon.

POOL.

A Fellow Can't Always Win.

The other night it rained and snowed; and to tell the truth was a bad, disagreeable night to be out. Nobody could blame a fellow for playing a few games of pool.

One of our young married men was led into this popular game and about 12 o'clock started for home, with a new cotton umbrella under his arm. He went up-stairs, entered his wife's bed room, laid of his hat, got the umbrella on a bee line and sent the small end of it into his beterhalf's ribs a flukin', and as she rolled over for breath he cried out:

"How's that (hic) for pool, boys. Got ten (hic) ball."

And before he discovered his mistake the good wife had him in one corner of the room using him as an experienced hand would a bass drum at a Granger pic-nic.

He Did'nt Want a Cold.

A man living near the Junction, not a bad looking gentleman by-the-way, entered one of our saloons and called for a drink.

"No, sir," said the clerk.

"Why not, young fellow," demanded the man as he raised a hickory cane.

"Your drunk now," remarked the clerk

"Drunk eh," and he sent that clerk over four beer kegs head formost.

When the Marshal was leading him off he said:

"There is only one thing I ask of you my faithful officer."

"What's that, old man?"

"That is, sir, Mr. Marshal—that is, that you give me a warm cell. I've always been used to a warm bed-room. I don't want to catch a cold until after the holidays—I would'nt be hoarse at that time for fifty dollars.

"Why not," asked the officer.

"Well, I'll tell you why," said the old man as he laid his hand on the officers shoulder. "You see on Christmas morning the "brothers and sisters" are to hold a series of meetings at my house and if I'm hoarse, so that I can't led the singing, and holler amen! when brother Jones prays, my church would loose faith in me, and outsiders would say I was a back-slider."

He was taken to the new jail and an extra fire was made. The clerk has not been over to see him.

The Weekly Sun.

Eighteen hundred and seventy-six is the Centennial year. It is also the year in which the Opposition House of Representatives, the first since the war, will be in power at Washington and the year of the twenty third election of a President of the United States. All of these events are sure to be of great interest and importance, especially the two latter; and all of them and everything connected with them will be fully and freshly reported and expounded in The Sun

The Opposition House of Representatives, taking up the line of inquiry opened years ago by The sun, will sternly and diligently investigate the corruptions and misdeeds of Grant's administration; and will, it is to be hoped, lay the foundation for a new and better period in our national history. Of all this The sun will contain complete and accurate accounts furnishing its readers with early and trustworthy information upon these absorbing topics.

The twenty third Presidential election, with the preparations for it, will be memorable as deciding upon Grant's aspirations for a third term of power and plunder, and still more as deciding who shall be the candidate of the party of Reform, and as electing that candidate. Concerning all these subjects, those who read The Sun will have the constant means of being thoroughly well informed.

The Weekly Sun, which has attained a circulation of over eighty thousand copies, already has its readers in every State and Territory, and we trust that the year 1876 will see their numbers doubled. It will continue to be thorough newspaper. All the general news of the day will be found in it condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment; and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructing manner.

It is our aim to make The Weekly Sun the best family newspaper in world, and we shall continue to give in its columns a large amount of miscellaneous reading, such as stories, tales poems' scientific intelligence and agricultural information, for which we are not able to make room in our daily edition. The agricultural department especially is one of its prominent features. The fashions are also regularly reported and so are the markets of every kind.

The Weekly Sun, eight pages with fifty-six broad columns is only $1.2 a year postage prepaid. As price barly repays the cost of the paper no discount can be made from this rate to clubs agents, postmasters, or anyone.

The Daily Sun, a large four page newspaper of twenty eight columns, gives all the news for two cents a copy. Subscribers postage prepaid 55c a month or the news for two cents a copy. Sunday edition extra, $1.10 per year. We have no traveling agents.
Address,
THE SUN, New York City.

The rain has made the roads bad for traveling purposes, and consequently trade is a little dull. Our merchants have received large stocks of winter goods, and are prepared when trade does open up.

THE NATION.

Annual Message of President Grant.

Importance of the Centennial Commented on.

Satisfactory Condition of Our Foreign Relations.

The Common-School Question Discussed.

The Civil Strife in Cuba--Intervention or Mediation Suggested.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

In submitting my seventh annual message to Congress in this centennial year of our national existence as a free and independent people, it affords me great pleasure to recur to the advancement that has been made from the time of the colonies, one hundred years ago. We were then a people numbering only 3,000,000; now we number more than 40,000,000. Then the industries were confined almost exclusively to the tillage of the soil; now manufactories absorb much of the labor of the country. Our liberties remain unimpaired. The bondsmen have been freed from slavery. We have become possessed of the respect, if not the friendship, of all civilized nations. Our progress has been great in all the arts, in science, in agriculture, commerce, navigation, mining, mechanics, law, medicine, etc., and in general education the progress is likewise encouraging. Our thirteen States have become thirty-eight, including Colorado, which has taken initiatory steps to become a State, and eight Territories, including the Indian Territory and Alaska, and excluding Colorado, making a territory extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific. On the South, we have extended to the Gulf of Mexico, and in the West from the Mississippi to the Pacific. One hundred years ago the cotton gin, the steamship, the railroad, the telegraph, the reaping, sewing and modern printing machines, and numerous other inventions of scarcely less value to our business and happiness, were entirely unknown. In 1776 manufactories scarcely existed, even in name, in all this vast territory; in 1870 more than two millions of persons were employed in manufactories producing more than $2,100,000,000 of produce in amount, annually; nearly equal to our national debt. From nearly the whole of the population of 1776 being engaged in the one occupation of agriculture, in 1870 so numerous and diversified had become the occupation of our people, that less than six millions out of forty millions, were so engaged. The extraordinary effect produced in our country by a resort to such occupations, has built a market for the products of the fertile lands distant from the seaboard and the markets of the world.

The American system of working various and extensive manufactories, next to the farm and the pasture, and adding connecting railroads and steamboats, has produced in our distant country a result not equaled by the intelligent parts of other nations. The ingenuity and skill of American mechanics have been demonstrated at home and abroad in a manner most flattering to their pride. But for the extraordinary genius and ability of our mechanics, the achievements of our agriculturists, manufacturers and transporters throughout the country would have been impossible of attainment.

The progress of the miner has also been great. Of coal our production was small; now many millions of tons are mined annually. So with iron, which formed scarcely an appreciable part of our products half a century ago, we now produce more than the world consumed at the beginning of our national existence. Lead, zinc and copper, from being articles of imports, we may expect to be large exporters of, in the near future. The development of gold and silver mines throughout States and Territories has not only been remarkable, but has had a large influence upon the business of all commercial nations.

Our merchants in the last hundred years have had success, and have established a reputation for enterprise, sagacity, progress and integrity unsurpassed by the people of older nationalities. This good name is not confined to their homes, but goes out upon every sea, and into every port where commerce enters. With equal pride we can point to our progress in all of the learned professions.

As we are now about to commence our second centennial, commencing our manhood as a nation, it is well to look back upon the past, and study what will be best to preserve and advance our future greatness.

From the fall of Adam for his transgression to the present day no nation has ever been free from threatened danger to its prosperity and happiness. We should look to the dangers threatening us and remedy them so far as lies in our power. We are a Republic, wherein one man is as good as another before the law.

Under such a form of government, it is of the greatest importance that all should be possessed of education and intelligence enough to cast a vote with a right understanding of its meaning. A large association of ignorant men cannot for any considerable period oppose a successful resistance to tyranny and oppression from the educated few, but will inevitably sink into acquiescence to the will of intelligence, whether directed by the demagogue or the priestcraft. Hence the education of the masses becomes of the first necessity for the preservation of our institutions. They are worth preserving, because they have secured the greatest good to the greatest proportion of the population of any form of government yet devised. All other forms of government approach it just in proportion to the general diffusion of education and independence of thought and action. As the primary step, therefore, to our advancement in all that has marked our progress in the past century, I suggest for your earnest consideration, and most earnestly recommend it, that a constitutional amendment be submitted to the Legislatures of the several States, for ratification, making it the duty of each of the several States to establish and forever maintain free public schools, adequate to the education of all the children in the rudimentary branches within their respective limits, irrespective of sex, color, birth place, or religion, forbidding the teaching in said schools of religious, atheistic, or pagan ideas, and prohibiting the granting of any school funds or school taxes, or any part thereof, either by legislative, municipal, or others, for the benefit of any other object of any nature or kind whatever in connection with this important question, I would also call your attention to the importance of correcting an evil that, if permitted to continue, will probably lead to great trouble in our land before the close of the nineteenth century. It is the accumulation of vast amounts of untaxed church property.

In 1850, I believe, the church property of the United States which paid no tax, municipal, or State, amounted to about $83,000,000. In 1860 the amount had doubled; in 1875 it is about $1,000,000,000; by 1900, without check, it is safe to say this property will reach a sum exceeding $3,000,000,000. So vast a sum receiving all the protection and benefits of Government, without bearing its proportion of the burdens and expenses of the same, will not be looked upon acquiescently by those who have paid taxes. In a growing country, where real estate enhances so rapidly with time as in the United States, there is scarcely a limit to the wealth that may be acquired by corporations, religious or otherwise.

If allowed to retain real estate without taxation the contemplation of so vast a property as is here alluded to, without taxation, may lead to sequestration without constitutional authority and through blood. I would suggest the taxation of all property equally, whether church or corporation, exempting only the last resting place of the dead, and possibly, with proper restrictions, church edifices.

Our relations with most of the foreign powers continue on a satisfactory and friendly footing. Increased intercourse, the extension of commerce and cultivation of mutual interests, have steadily improved our relations with the large majority of the powers of the world, rendering practicable the peaceful solution of questions which from time to time necessarily arise, leaving few which demand extended or particular notice.

The correspondence of the Department of State with our diplomatic representatives abroad is transmitted herewith. I am happy to announce the passage of an act by the General Cortes of Portugal, proclaimed since the adjournment of Congress, for the abolition of servitude in the Portuguese colonies. It is to be hoped that such legislation may be another step onward in the great consummation to be reached when no man shall be permitted, directly or indirectly, under any guise, excuse or form of law, to hold his fellow-man in bondage. I am of the opinion, too, that it is the duty of the United States, as contributing toward that end and required by the spirit of the age which we live in, to provide by suitable legislation, that no citizen of the United States shall hold slaves as property in any other country, or be interested therein.

Chili has made reparation in the case of the whaleship Good Return, seized without sufficient cause upward of forty years ago. Though she had hitherto denied her accountability, the denial was never acquiesced in by this Government, and the justice of the claim has been so earnestly contended for that it has been gratifying that she should have acknowledged it.

The arbitrator in the case of the United States steamer Montijo, for the seizure and detention of which the Government of the United States of Colombia was held accountable, has decided in favor of the claim. This decision has settled a question which has been pending for several years, and which, while it continued open, might more or less disturb the good understanding which it is desirable should be maintained between the Republics.

A reciprocity treaty with the King of the Hawaiian Islands was concluded some months ago. It contains a stipulation that it shall not go into effect until Congress shall enact the proper legislation for the purpose. Copies of the instrument are herewith submitted, in order that if such should be the pleasure of Congress, the necessary legislation upon the subject may be adopted.

In March last, an arrangement was made through Mr. Cushing, our Minister in Madrid, with the Spanish Government, for the payment by the latter to the United States of the sum of $80,000 in coin for the purpose of the relief of the families or persons of the ship's company and certain passengers of the Virginius. This sum was to have been paid in three installments of two months each. It is due to the Spanish Government that I should state that the payments were fully and speedily anticipated by that Government, and that, the whole amount was paid within but a few days more than two months from the date of agreement, a copy of which is herewith transmitted. In pursuance of the terms of adjustment, I have directed distribution of the amount among the parties entitled thereto, including the ship's company and such of the passengers as were American citizens. Payments are made accordingly on the application of the parties entitled thereto.

The past year has furnished no evidences of an approaching close of the ruinous conflicts which have been raging for seven years in the neighboring island of Cuba. The same disregard of the laws of civilized warfare, and of the just demands of humanity, which have heretofore called forth expressions of condemnation from the nations of Christendom, have continued to blacken the sad scene. Desolation, ruin and pillage are pervading the rich fields of one of the most fertile and productive regions of the earth, and the incendiaries' torch, firing plantations and valuable factories and buildings, is the agent marking the alternate advance or retirement of contending parties. The protracted continuance of the strife seriously affects the interests of all commercial nations, but those of the United States more than others, by reason of close proximity, its larger trade and intercourse with Cuba, and the frequent and intimate personal and social relations which have grown up between its citizens and those of the island. Moreover, the property of our citizens in Cuba is large, and is rendered insecure and depreciated in value and in capacity of production. By the continuance of the strife and the unnatural mode of its conduct, the same is true, differing only in degree with respect to the interests and people of other nations, and the absence of any reasonable assurance of a near termination of the conflict, must of necessity soon compel the States thus suffering to consider what the interests of their own people and their duty toward themselves may demand. I have hoped Spain would be enabled to establish peace in her colony, to afford security to the property and the interests of our citizens, and allow legitimate scope to trade and commerce, and the natural production of the island. Because of this hope, and from an extreme reluctance to interfere in the affairs of another and a friendly nation, especially of one whose sympathy and friendship in the struggling infancy of our existence must ever be remembered with gratitude, I have patiently and anxiously waited the progress of events. Our own civil conflict is too recent for us not to consider the difficulties which surround a Government distracted by a dynastic rebellion at home, at the same time that it has to cope with a separate insurrection in a distant colony. But whatever causes may have produced the situation which so grievously affects our interests, it exists with all its attendant evils, operating directly upon this country and its people. Thus far all the efforts of Spain have proved abortive, and time has marked no improvement in the situation. The armed bands of either side now occupy nearly the same ground as in the past, with the difference from time to time of more lives sacrificed, more property destroyed, and wider extent of fertile and productive fields and more valuable property constantly and wantonly sacrificed to the incendiaries' torch.

In contests of this nature, when a considerable body of people who have attempted to free themselves of the control of the superior Government have reached such a point in occupation of territory, in power and in general organization as to constitute in fact a body politic, having a government in substance as well as in name, possessed of the elements of stability, and equipped with the machinery for the administration of internal policy and the execution of its laws, and prepared and able to administer justice at home, as well as in its dealings with other powers, it is within the province of those other powers to recognize its existence as a new and independent nation. In such cases other nations simply deal with an actually existing condition of things, and recognize as one of the powers of the earth that body politic which, possessing necessary elements, has, in fact, become a new power. In a word, the creation of a new State is a fact. To establish the condition of things essential to the recognition of the fact, there must be a people occupying a known territory, united under some known and defined form of government acknowledged by those subject thereto, in which the functions of a government, administered by usual methods, competent to mete out justice to citizens and strangers, to afford remedies for public and for private wrongs, and able to assume the correlative international obligations, and capable of performing the corresponding international duties resulting from its acquisition of the rights of sovereignty, a power should exist complete in its organization, ready to take and able to maintain its place among the nations of the earth. While conscious that the insurrection in Cuba has shown strength and endurance which make it at least doubtful whether it be in the power of Spain to subdue it, it seems questionable that no such civil organization exists which may be recognized as an independent Government, capable of performing its obligations and entitled to be treated as one of the powers of the earth. A recognition, under such circumstances, would be inconsistent with the facts, and would compel the power giving it soon to support, by force, the Government to which it had really given its only claim of existence.

In my judgment the United States should adhere to the policy and the principles which have heretofore been its sure and safe guides in like contests between revolted colonies and their mother country, and, acting only upon the clearest evidence, should avoid any possibility or suspicion of intervention. A recognition of the independence of Cuba being, in my opinion, impracticable and indefensible, the question which next presents itself is that of recognition of belligerent rights in the parties to the contest.

In a former message to Congress I had occasion to consider this question, and reached the conclusion that the conflict in Cuba, dreadful and devastating as were its incidents, did not rise to the fearful dignity of war. Regarding it now, after the lapse of time, I am unable to see that any notable success, or any marked or real advance, on the part of the insurgents has essentially changed the character of the contest. It has acquired greater age, but not greater or more formidable proportions.

It is possible that the acts of foreign powers, and even acts of Spain herself, of this very nature, might be pointed to in defense of such recognition, but now, as in its past history, the United States should carefully avoid the false lights which might lead it into the mazes of doubtful law and questionable propriety, and adhere rigidly and sternly to the rule which has been its guide, and doing only that which is right and honest and of good report.

The question of according or of withholding rights of belligerency must be judged in every case in view of the particular attending facts; unless justified by necessity, it is always and justly regarded as an unfriendly act, and a gratuitous demonstration of moral support to the rebellion. It is necessary and it is required, when the interests and right of another Government, or of its people, are so far affected by a pending civil conflict as to require a definition of its relations to the parties thereto. But that this conflict must be one which will be recognized in the sense of international law as war. Belligerence, too, is a fact. The mere existence of contending armed bodies and their occasional conflicts do not constitute war in the sense referred to. Applying to the existing condition of affairs in Cuba the tests recognized by publicists and writers on international law, and which have been observed by nations of dignity, honesty and power when free from sensitive or selfish and unworthy motives, I fail to find in the insurrection the existence of such a substantial political organization, real and palpable, and manifest to the world, having the forms, and capable of the ordinary functions of government toward its own people and to other states, with courts for administration of justice with a local habitation possessing such organization of force, such material, such occupation of territory as to take the contest out of the category of a mere rebellious insurrection, or occasional skirmishes, and place it on the terrible footing of war to which a recognition of belligerency would aim to elevate it. The contest, moreover, is solely on land; the insurrection has not possessed itself of a single seaport whence it may send forth its flag, nor has it any means of communication with foreign powers except through military lines of its adversaries. No apprehension of any of those sudden and difficult complications which a war upon the ocean is apt to precipitate upon the vessels, both commercial and national, and upon the Consular officers of other powers, calls for a definition of their relations to the parties to the contest. Considered as a question of expediency, I regard the accordance of belligerent rights still to be as unwise and premature as I regard it to be at present indefensible. As a measure of right, such recognition entails upon the country according to the rights which flow from it, difficult and complicated duties, and requires from the contending parties the strict observance of their rights and obligations. It confers the right of search upon the high seas by vessels of both parties. It would subject the carrying of arms and munitions of war, which now may be transported freely and without interruption in the vessels of the United States, to detention and to possible seizure. It would give rise to countless vexatious questions; would release the parent government from responsibility for acts done by the insurgents, and would invest Spain with the right to exercise the supervision recognized by our treaty of 1795 over our commerce on the high seas, a very large part of which, in its traffic between the Atlantic and Gulf States, and between all of them and the States upon the Pacific, passes through the waters which wash the shores of Cuba. The exercise of this supervision could scarce fail to lead, if not to abuses, certainly to collisions perilous to the peaceful relations of the two States. There can be little doubt to what result such supervision would, before long, draw this nation. It would be unworthy of the United States to inaugurate the possibilities of such a result by measures of questionable right or expediency, or by any indirection.

Apart from any question of theoretical right, I am satisfied that, while the accordance of belligerent rights to the insurgents in Cuba might give them a hope and inducement to protract the struggle, it would be but a delusive hope, and would not remove the evils which this Government and its people are experiencing, but would draw the United States into complications which it has waited long and already suffered much to avoid. The recognition of independence or of belligerency being thus in my judgment equally inadmissible, it remains to consider what course shall be adopted should the conflict not soon be brought to an end by acts of the parties themselves, and should the evils which result therefrom, afflicting all nations, and particularly the United States, continue. In such event I am of the opinion that other nations will be compelled to assume the responsibility which devolves upon them, and to seriously consider the only remaining measures possible, mediation and intervention. Owing, perhaps, to the large expanse of water separating the island from the peninsula, the want of harmony and of personal sympathy between the inhabitants of the colony and those sent thither to rule them, and want of adaptation of the ancient colonial system of Europe to the present times, and to the ideas which the events of the past century have developed, the contending parties appear to have within themselves no depository of common confidence, to suggest wisdom, when passion and excitement have their say, and to assume the part of peacemaker. In this view, in the early days of the contest, the good offices of the United States, as a mediator, were tendered in good faith, without any selfish purpose, in the interest of humanity, and in sincere friendship for both parties, but were at the time declined by Spain, with the declaration, nevertheless, that at a future time they would be indispensable. No intimation has been received that, in the opinion of Spain, that time has been reached, and yet the strife continues with all its dread horrors, and all its injuries to the interests of the United States and of other nations. Each party seems quite capable of working great injury and damage to the other, as well as to all the relations and interests depending on the existence of peace in the island; but they seem incapable of reaching any adjustment, and both have thus far failed of achieving any success whereby one party shall possess and control the island to the exclusion of the other. Under these circumstances, the agency of others, either by mediation or by intervention, seems to be the only alternative which must sooner or later be invoked for the termination of the strife.

At the same time, while thus impressed, I do not at this time recommend the adoption of any measure of intervention. I shall be ready at all times, and as the equal friend of both parties, to respond to a suggestion that the good offices of the United States will be acceptable to aid in bringing about a peace honorable to both. It is due to Spain, so far as this Government is concerned, that the agency of a third power, to which I have adverted, shall be adopted only as a last expedient. Had it been the desire of the United States to interfere in the affairs of Cuba, repeated opportunities for so doing have been presented within the last few years, but we have remained passive and have performed our over whole duty and all international obligation to Spain with friendship, fairness and fidelity, and with a spirit of patience and forbearance which negatives every possible suggestion of desire to interfere or to add to the difficulties with which she has been surrounded. The Government of Spain has recently submitted to our Minister at Madrid, certain proposals, which it is hoped, may be found to be the basis, if not the actual submission of terms to meet the requirements of the particular griefs of which this Government has felt itself entitled to complain. These proposals have not yet reached me in their full text. On their arrival they will be taken into careful examination, and may, I hope, lead to a satisfactory adjustment of the questions to which they refer, and remove the possibility of future occurrences, such as have given rise to our just complaints. It is understood, also, that renewed efforts are being made to introduce reform in the internal administration of the island. Persuaded, however, that a proper regard for the interests of the United States, and of its citizens entitled to relief from the strain to which it has been subjected by the difficulties of the questions, and the wrongs and losses which arise from the contest in Cuba, and that the interests of humanity itself demand the cessation of the strife before the whole island shall be laid waste and larger sacrifices of life be made, I shall feel it my duty, should my hopes of a satisfactory adjustment and of an early restoration of peace, and the removal of future causes of complaint, be unhappily disappointed, to make a further communication to Congress, at some period not far remote, and during the present session, recommending what legislation may then seem to me to be necessary.

The Free Zone, so called, several years since established by the Mexican Government in certain of the States of that Republic adjacent to our frontier, remains in full operation. It has always been materially injurious to honest traffic, for it operates as an incentive to traders in Mexico to supply, without customs charges, the wants of the inhabitants on this side of the line, and prevents the same wants from being supplied by merchants of the United States, thereby to a considerable extent defrauding our revenue and checking honest commercial enterprise. Depredations by armed bands from Mexico on the people of Texas, near the frontier, continue. Though the main object of the incursions is robbery, they frequently result in the murder of unarmed and peaceably disposed persons, and in some instances even the United States Postoffices and mail communications have been attacked. Renewed remonstrances upon this subject have been addressed to the Mexican Government, but without much apparent effect. The military force of this Government disposable for service in that quarter is quite inadequate to effectually guard the line even at those points where the incursions are usually made. An experiment of an armed vessel on the Rio Grande for that purpose is on trial, and it is hoped that, if not thwarted by the shallowness of the river and other natural obstacles, it may materially contribute to the protection of the herdsmen of Texas.

The proceedings of the joint commission under the convention between the United States and Mexico, of the 4th of July, 1868, on the subject of claims, will soon be brought to a close. The result of these proceedings will then be communicated to Congress.

I am happy to announce that the Government of Venezuela has, upon further consideration, practically abandoned its objection to pay to the United States that share of its revenue which some years since it allotted toward the extinguishment of claims of foreigners generally. In thus reconsidering its determination, that Government has shown a just sense of self-respect which cannot fail to reflect credit upon it in the eyes of all disinterested persons elsewhere. It is to be regretted, however, that its payment on account of claims of citizens of the United States are still so meagre in amount, and that the stipulations of the treaty in regard to the sums to be paid and the periods when those payments were to take place should have been so signally disregarded.

Since my last annual message the exchange has been made of the ratification of a treaty of commerce and navigation with Belgium, and of conventions with Mexican Republic for the further extent of the joint commission respecting claims, with the Hawaiian Islands for commercial reciprocity, and with the Ottoman Empire for extradition, all of which have been duly proclaimed.

The Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims has prosecuted its important duties very assiduously and very satisfactorily. It convened and was organized on the 22d day of July, 1874, and by the terms of the act under which it was created, was to exist for one year from that date. The act provided, however, that should it be found impracticable to complete the work of the court before the expiration of the year, the President might, by proclamation, extend the time of its duration to a period not more than six months beyond the expiration of one year. Having received satisfactory evidence that it would be impracticable to complete the work within the time originally fixed, I issued a proclamation (a copy of which is presented herewith) extending the time of duration of the court for the period of six months, from and after the 22d day of July last. A report made through the Clerk of the Court, communicated herewith, shows the condition of the calendar on the 1st of November last, and the large amount of work which has been accomplished. Thirteen hundred and eighty-two claims have been presented, of which 682 had been disposed of at the date of the report. I am informed that 170 cases were decided during the month of November. Arguments are being made and decisions given in the remaining cases with all the dispatch consistent with the proper consideration of the questions submitted. Many of these claims are in behalf of mariners, or depend on the evidence of mariners, whose absence has delayed the taking of the return of the necessary evidence. It is represented to me that it will be impracticable for the Court to finally dispose of all the cases before it, within the present limit of its duration. Justice to the parties claimant, who had been at large expense preparing their claims and obtaining evidence in their support, suggest a short extension to enable the Court to dispose of all the claims which have been presented. I recommend the legislation which may be deemed proper to enable the Court to complete the work before it.

I recommend that some suitable provision be made by the creation of a special court, or by conferring the necessary jurisdiction upon such appropriate tribunal for the consideration and determination of the claims of aliens against the Government of the United States which have arisen within some reasonable limitation of time, or which may hereafter arise, excluding all claims caused by treaty provisions or otherwise. It has been found impossible to give proper consideration to these claims by the Executive Department of the Government. Such a tribunal would afford an opportunity to aliens other than British subjects to present their claims on account of acts committed against their persons or property during the rebellion, as also to those subjects of Great Britain whose claims, having arisen subsequent to the 9th day of April, 1865, could not be presented to the late commission organized pursuant to the provisions of the treaty of Washington.

The electric telegraph has become an essential and indispensable agent in the transmission of business and social messages. Its operation on land and within the limits of particular States, is necessarily under the control of the jurisdiction within which it operates. The lines on the high seas, however, are not subject to particular control of any one Government. In 1869 a concession was granted by the French Government to a company which proposed to lay a cable from the shores of France to the United States. At that time there was a telegraphic connection between the United States and the continent of Europe through the possessions of Great Britain at either end of the line, under the control of an association which had, at large outlay of capital and at great risk, demonstrated the practicability of maintaining such means of communication. The cost of the correspondence by this agency was not too large at the time for the proper remuneration for so hazardous and so costly an enterprise. It was, however, a heavy charge upon a means of communication which the progress in the social and commercial intercourse of the world found to be a necessity, and the obtaining of this French concession showed that other capital than that already invested was ready to enter into competition, with assurance of adequate return for their outlay. Impressed with the conviction that the interests not only of the people of the United States, but of the world at large, demanded, or would demand, the multiplication of such means of communication between separated continents, I was desirous that the proposed connection should be made, but certain provisions of this concession were deemed by me to be objectionable, particularly one, which gave for a long term of years the exclusive right of telegraphic communication by submarine cable between the shores of France and the United States. I could not concede that any power should claim the right to land a cable on the shores of the United States and at the same time deny to the United States or to its citizens an equal right to land a cable on its shores. The right to control the conditions for the laying of a cable within the jurisdiction of the waters of the United States, to connect our shores with those of any foreign State, pertains exclusively to the Government of the United States, under such limitation and conditions as Congress may impose. In the absence of legislation by Congress, I was unwilling on the one hand to yield to a foreign State the right to say that its grantees might land on our shores while it denied a similar right to our people to land on its State; and, on the other hand, I was reluctant to delay, to the great interests of the world and of civilization, the facilities of such communication as were proposed. I therefore withheld any resistance to the landing of any cable, on condition that the offensive monopoly feature of the concession be abandoned, and that the right of any cable which may be established by authority of the Government to land upon French territory and to connect with French land lines, and enjoy all the necessary facilities of privileges incident to the use thereof upon as favorable terms as any other company be conceded.

As the result thereof, the company in question renounced the exclusive privilege, and the representative of France was informed that, understanding this relinquishment to be construed as granting the entire reciprocity and equal facilities which had been demanded, the opposition to the landing of the cable was withdrawn. The cable under this French concession was landed in the month of July, 1869, and has been an efficient and valuable agent of communication between this country and the continent. It soon passed under the control, however, of those who had the management of the cable connecting Great Britain with this continent, and thus whatever benefit to the public might have ensued from competition between two lines was lost. They had the greater facilities of an additional line, and the additional security in case of accident to one of them, but these increased facilities and this additional security, together with the control of combined capital of the two companies, gave also greater power to prevent future construction of other lines, and to limit the control of telegraphic communication between two continents to those possessing lines already laid. Within a few months past a cable has been laid, known as the United States Direct Cable Company, connecting the United States directly with Great Britain. As soon as this cable was reported to be in working order the rates of the then existing consolidated company were greatly reduced; soon, however, a break was announced in this new cable, and immediately the rates of the other line, which had been reduced, were again raised. This cable being now repaired, the rates appear not to be reduced by either line from those formerly charged by the other company.

There is reason to believe that large amounts of capital, both at home and abroad, are ready to seek profitable investment in the advancement of this useful and most civilizing means of intercourse and correspondence. They await, however, the assurance of the means and conditions on which they may safely be made tributary to the general good. As the cable telegraph lines connect separate States, these are questions as to their organization and control which probably can be best, if not solely, settled by conventions between the respective States. In the absence, however, of international conventions on the subject, municipal legislation may secure many points which seem to me important, if not indispensable, for the protection of the public against the extortions which may result from a monopoly of the right of operating cable telegrams, or from a combination between several lines. First—No lines should be allowed to land on the shores of the United States under the concession from another power which does not admit the right of any other line or lines formed in the United States to land and freely connect with and operate through land lines. Second—No line should be allowed to land on the shores of the United States which is not, by treaty stipulation with the Government from whose shores it proceeds, or, by prohibition in its charter or otherwise, to the satisfaction of this Government, prohibited from consolidating with any other cable telegraph line, or combining therewith, for the purpose of regulating and maintaining the cost of telegraphic communication. Third—All lines should be bound to give precedence in the transmission of the official messages of the Governments of the two countries between which it may be laid. Fourth—A power should be reserved to the two Governments, either conjointly or to each as regards the messages dispatched from its shores, to fix a limit to the charges to be maintained for the transmission of messages. I present this subject to the earnest consideration of Congress. In the meantime, and unless Congress otherwise directs, I shall not oppose the landing of any telegraphic cable which complies with and assents to the points above enumerated, but will feel it my duty to prevent the landing of any which does not conform to the first and second points, as stated, and which will not stipulate to concede to this Government the precedence in the transmission of its official messages, and will not enter into a satisfactory arrangement in regard to its charges.

Among the pressing and important subjects to which, in my opinion, the attention of Congress should be directed, are those relating to fraudulent naturalization and expatriation. The United States, with great liberality, offers its citizenship to all who in good faith comply with the requirements of the law. These requirements are as simple and upon as favorable terms to the emigrant as the high privilege to which he is admitted can or should permit. I do not propose any additional requirements to those which the law now demands, but the very simplicity and want of formality in our law have made fraudulent naturalization not infrequent, to the discredit and injury of all honest citizens, whether native or naturalized. Cases of this character are continually being brought to the notice of the Government, by our representatives abroad, and also those of persons resident in other countries, most frequently those, if they have remained in this country long enough to entitle them to become naturalized, generally have not much over-passed that period, and have returned to the country of their origin, where they reside, avoiding all duties to the United States by their absence, and claiming to be exempt from all duties to the country of their nativity and of their residence by reason of the alleged naturalization. It is due to this Government and to the great mass of the naturalized citizens who entirely, both in name and in fact, become citizens of the United States, that the high privilege of citizenship of the United States should not be held by fraud or in derogation of the laws and of the good name of every honest citizen. On many occasions it has been brought to the knowledge of the Government that certificates of naturalization are held and claimed by the parties, who admit that not only they were not within the United States at the time of pretended naturalization, but that they have never resided in the United States. In others the certificate and record of the Court show on their face that the person claiming to be naturalized had not resided the required time in the United States. In others it is admitted upon examination that the requirements of the law have not been complied with. In some cases even such certificates have been matters of purchase. These are not isolated cases, arising at rare intervals, but of common occurrence, and which are reported from all quarters of the globe. Such occurrences cannot and do not fail to reflect upon the Government and injure all honest citizens. Such a fraud being discovered, however, there is no practicable means within the control of the Government by which the record of naturalization can be vacated, and should the certificate be taken up, as it usually is, by the diplomatic and consular representatives of the Government to whom it may have been presented, there is nothing to prevent the person claiming to have been naturalized from obtaining a new certificate from the court in the place of that which has been taken from him. The evil has become so great, and of such frequent occurrence, that I cannot too strongly recommend that some effective measures be adopted to provide a proper remedy and means for the vacating of any record thus fraudulently made, and of punishing the guilty parties to the transaction.

In this connection I refer to the question of expatriation and the election of nationality. The United States was foremost in upholding the right of expatriation, and was principally instrumental in overthrowing the doctrine of perpetual allegiance. Congress has declared the right of expatriation to be a natural, inherent right of all people. While many other nations have laws providing what formalities shall be necessary to work a change of allegiance, the United States has enacted no provisions of law, and has in no respect marked out how and when expatriation may be accomplished by its citizens. Instances are brought to the attention of the Government where citizens of the United States, naturalized or native-born, have formally become citizens or subjects of foreign powers, but who, nevertheless, in the absence of any provisions of legislation on these questions, when involved in difficulties, or when it seems to be to their interest, claim to be citizens of the United States, and demand the intervention of a Government which they have long since abandoned, and to which for years they have rendered no service, nor held themselves in any way amenable. In other cases, naturalized citizens, immediately after naturalization, have returned to their native country, have become engaged in business, have accepted offices or pursuits inconsistent with American citizenship, and evidence no intent to return to the United States, until called upon to discharge some duty to the country where they are residing, when at once they assert their citizenship, and call upon the representatives of the Government to aid them in their pretensions. It is but justice to all bona fide citizens that no doubt should exist on such questions, and that Congress should determine, by enactment of law, how expatriation will be accomplished and change of citizenship be established.

I also invite your attention to the necessity of regulating by law the status of American women who may marry foreigners, and of defining more fully that of children born in a foreign country of American parents, who may reside abroad, and also of some further provision regulating or giving legal effect, to marriages of American citizens contracted in foreign countries.

The correspondence submitted herewith shows a few of the constantly occurring questions on the points presented to the consideration of the Government. There are few subjects to engage the attention of Congress on which more delicate relations are depending.

The month of July last the building erected for the Department of State was taken possession of and occupied by that department. I am happy to say that the archives and valuable property of the Government in the custody of that department are now safely deposited and properly cared for.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury shows the receipts from customs for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, to have been $163,103,833.69, and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, to have been $157,167,722.35, a decrease for the last fiscal year of $5,936,111.34. The receipts from internal revenue for the year ending on the 30th of June, 1874, were $102,409,784.90, and for the year ending on the 30th of June, 1875, were $110,007,493.58, an increase of $7,597,708.68. The report also shows a complete history of the working of the Department for the last year, and contains recommendations for reforms and for legislation, which I concur in, but cannot comment on so fully as I should like to do if space would permit, but will confine myself to a few suggestions which I look upon as vital to the best interests of the whole people, coming within the purview of the Treasury, I mean specie resumption. Too much stress cannot be laid upon this question, and I hope Congress may be induced at the earliest day practicable to insure the consummation of the act of the last Congress, at its last session, to bring about specie resumption on and after the 1st day of January, 1879, at the furthest. It would be a great blessing if this could be consummated even at an earlier day. Nothing seems to me more certain than that a full, healthy and permanent reaction cannot take place in favor of the industries and financial welfare of the country, until we return to a measure of values recognized throughout the civilized world. While we use a currency not equivalent to its standard, the world's recognized standard of specie becomes a commodity like the products of the soil, the surplus seeking a market wherever there is demand for it. Under our present system we should want none, nor would we have any were it not that customs dues must be paid in coin, and because of the pledge to pay the interest of the public debt in coin, the yield of precious metals would flow out for the purchase of foreign productions, and leave the United States the hewers of wood and the drawers of water because of the wiser legislation on the subject of finance by the nations with whom we have dealings.

I am not prepared to say that I can suggest the best legislation to secure the end so heartily to be commended. It will be a source of great gratification to me to be able to approve any measure of Congress looking effectively toward securing resumption. Unlimited inflation would probably bring about specie payments more speedily than any legislation looking to the redemption of legal-tenders in coin, but it would be at the expense of honor. The legal tenders would have no value beyond settling present liabilities, or, properly speaking, repudiating them. They would buy nothing after the debts were all settled. There are a few measures which seem to me important in this connection, and which I commend to your earnest consideration: First, the repeal of so much of the Legal Tender acts as makes these notes receivable for debts contracted after a date to be fixed in the act itself—say not later than the 1st of January, 1877. We should then have a quotation at real values, not fictitious ones. Gold would no longer be at a premium, but currency at a discount. A healthy reaction would set in at once, and with it a desire to make the currency equal to what it purports to be. The merchants, manufacturers and tradesmen, and every calling, could do business on a fair margin of profit. The money to be received having an unvarying value, laborers and all classes who work for stipulated pay or salary would receive more for their income because extra profits would no longer be charged by the capitalist to compensate for the risk of a downward fluctuation in value of the currency.

Second. That the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to redeem, say not to exceed $2,000,000 monthly, of legal-tender notes, by issuing, in their stead, a long bond bearing interest at the rate of 3 65-100 per cent. per annum, of denominations ranging from $50 to $1,000 each. This would, in time reduce the legal-tender notes to a volume that could be kept afloat without demanding redemption in large sums suddenly.

Third. That additional power be given to the Secretary of the Treasury to accumulate gold for final redemption, either by increasing revenue, curtailing expenses, or both. It is preferable to do both, and I recommend that a reduction of expenditures be made wherever it can be done without impairing Government obligations or crippling the due execution thereof. One measure for increasing the revenue, and the only one I think of, is the restoration of the duty on tea and coffee. These duties would add probably $18,000,000 to the present amount received for imports, and would in no way increase the prices paid for those articles by the consumers. These articles are the products of countries collecting revenue from exports, and as we, the largest consumers, reduce the duties, they proportionately increase them. With this addition to the revenue, many duties now collected, and which give but an insignificant return for the cost of collection, might be remitted, and to the direct advantage of the consumers at home. I would mention those articles which enter into manufactures of all sorts. All duties paid upon such articles go directly to the cost of the article when manufactured here, and must be paid for by the consumers. The duties not only come from the consumers at home, but act as a protection to foreign manufacturers of the same completed articles in our own and distant markets.

I will suggest or mention another subject bearing upon the problem of how to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to accumulate balances. It is to devise some better method of verifying claims against the Government than at present exists through the Court of Claims, especially those claims growing out of the late war. Nothing is more certain than that a large percentage of the amounts passed and paid are in part, or wholly, fraudulent, or are far in excess of the real losses sustained. The large amount of losses, proven on good testimony, according to the existing laws, by the affidavits of fictitious or unscrupulous persons, to have been sustained on small farms and plantations, are not only far beyond the possible yield of those places for any one year, but, as every one knows who has experience in tilling the soil, and who has visited the scenes of these spoliations, are in many instances more than the individual claimants were ever worth, including their personal and real estate. The report of the Attorney-General, which will be submitted to Congress at an early day, will contain a detailed history of the awards made, and of the claims pending of the class here referred to.

The report of the Secretary of War, accompanying this message, gives a detailed account of army expenditures for the year just passed, expenses for maintenance, etc., with recommendations for legislation, to which I respectfully invite your attention. To some of these I invite special attention: First, the necessity of making $300,000 appropriation for the Subsistence Department available before the beginning of the next fiscal year. Without this provision, troops at points distant from supply or production must either go without food or existing laws must be violated. It is not attended with cost to the Treasury. Second, his recommendations for the enactment of a system of annuities for the families of deceased officers by voluntary deductions from the monthly pay of officers. This, again, is not attended with burden upon the Treasury, and would, for the future, relieve much distress which every old army officer has witnessed in the past—of officers dying suddenly or being killed, leaving families without even the means of reaching their friends—if they were fortunate enough to have friends—to aid them. Third, the repeal of the law abolishing mileage and a return to the old system. Fourth, the trial with torpedoes under the charge of the Corps of Engineers, and appropriation for the same. Should war ever occur between the United States and any maritime power, torpedoes will be among, if not the most effective and cheapest auxiliaries for the defense of harbors, and also in aggressive operations, that we can have. Hence it is advisable to learn by experiment their best construction and application, as well as effect. Fifth, A permanent organization for the Signal Service Corps. This service has now become a necessity of peace, as well as war, under the advancement made by the present able management. Sixth, A renewal of the appropriation for completing the official records of the war, etc.

The condition of our navy at this time is a subject of satisfaction. It does not contain, it is true, any of the powerful cruising ironclads which make so much of the maritime strength of some other nations, but neither our continental situation nor our foreign policy requires that we should have a large number of ships of this character, while this situation and the nature of our ports continue to make those of other nations little dangerous to us under any circumstances. Our navy does contain, however, a considerable number of ironclads of the monitor class, which, though not properly cruisers, are powerful and effective for harbor defense, and for operations near our own shores. Of these, all the single-turreted ones, fifteen in number, have been substantially rebuilt, their rotten wooden beams replaced with iron, their hulls strengthened, and their engines and machinery thoroughly repaired, so that they are now in the most efficient condition, and ready for sea as soon as they can be manned and put in commission. The five double-turreted ironclads belonging to our navy, by far the most powerful of our ships for fighting purposes, are also in hand, undergoing complete repairs, and could be ready for sea in periods varying from four to six months. With these completed according to present designs, and our two iron torpedo boats now ready, our ironclad fleet will be, for the purposes of defense at home, equal to any force that can be readily brought against it. Of our wooden navy, also, cruisers of various sizes, to the number of about forty, including those now in commission, are in the Atlantic, and could be ready for duty as fast as men could be enlisted for those not already in commission. Of these, one-third are in effect new ships, and though some of the remainder need considerable repairs to their boilers and machinery, they are, or can readily be made, effective. This constitutes a fleet of more than fifty war ships, of which fifteen are ironclads, now on hand on the Atlantic coast. The navy has been brought to this condition by a judicious and practical application of what could be spared from the current appropriations of the last few years, and from that made to meet the possible emergency of two years ago. It has been done quietly, without proclamation or display, and though it has necessarily straightened the department in its ordinary expenditure, and, as far as the ironclads are concerned, has added nothing to the cruising force of the navy, yet the result is not the less satisfactory because it is to be found in a great increase of real rather than apparent force. The expenses incurred in the maintenance of an effective naval force in all its branches are necessarily large, but such force is essential to our position, relations and character, and affects seriously the weight of our principles and policy throughout the whole sphere of naval responsibilities. The estimates for the regular support of this branch of the service for the next year amount to a little less in the aggregate than those made for the current year, but some additional appropriations are asked for objects not included in the ordinary maintenance of the navy, but believed to be of pressing importance. At this time it would, in my opinion, be wise at once to afford sufficient means for the immediate completion of the five double-turreted monitors now undergoing repairs which must otherwise advance slowly, and only as money can be spared from current expenses. Supplemented by these, our navy armed with the destructive weapons of modern warfare, manned by our seamen and in charge of instructed officers, will present a force powerful for the home purposes of a responsible though peaceful nation.

The report of the Postmaster-General, herewith transmitted, gives a full history of the workings of the department for the year just passed. It will be observed that the deficiency to be supplied from the general Treasury is increased over the amount refunded for the preceding year. In a country so vast in area as the United States, with large portions sparsely settled, it must be expected that this important service will be more or less a burden upon the Treasury for many years to come, but there is no branch of the public service which interests the whole people more than that of cheap and rapid transmission of the mails to every inhabited part of our territory.

Next to the free school, the Postoffice is the great educator of the people, and it may well receive the support of the General Government.

The subsidy of $150,000 per annum, given the vessels of the United States for carrying the mails between New York and Rio de Janeiro, having ceased on the 30th day of September last, we are without direct mail facilities with the South American States. This is greatly to be regretted, and I do not hesitate to recommend the authorization of a renewal of that contract, and also that the service may be increased from monthly to semi-monthly trips. The commercial advantages to be gained by a direct line of American steamers to the South American States will far outweigh the expense of the service.

By an act of Congress, approved March 3, 1875, almost all matter, whether properly mail matter or not, may be sent any distance throughout the mails in packages, not exceeding four pounds in weight, for the sum of sixteen cents per pound. So far as the transmission of real mail matter goes, this would seem entirely proper. But I suggest that the law be so amended as to exclude from the mails merchandise of all descriptions, and limit this transportation to all articles enumerated, and which may be classed as mail matter proper.

The discovery of gold in the Black Hills, a portion of the Sioux reservation, has had the effect to induce a large emigration of miners to that point. Thus far the effort to protect the treaty rights of the Indians of that section has been successful, but the next year will certainly witness a large increase of such emigration. The negotiations for the relinquishment of the gold field having failed, it will be necessary for Congress to adopt some measures to relieve the embarrassment growing out of the causes named. The Secretary of the Interior suggests that the supplies now appropriated for the sustenance of that people being no longer obligatory under the treaty of 1868, but simply a gratuity, may be issued or withheld at his discretion.

The condition of the Indian Territory, to which I have referred in several of my former annual messages, remains practically unchanged. The Secretary of the Interior has taken measures to obtain a full report of the condition of that Territory, and will make it the subject of a special report at an early day. It may then be necessary to make some further recommendation in regard to legislation for the Government of that Territory.

The steady growth and increase of the business of the Patent Office indicates in some measure the progress of the industrial prosperity of the country. The receipts of the office are in excess of its expenditures, and the office generally is in a prosperous and satisfactory condition.

The report of the General Land Office shows that there were 2,459,601 acres less disposed of during this than during the last year. More than one-half of this decrease was in land disposed of under homestead and timber culture laws. The causes of this decrease are supposed to be found in the grasshopper scourge, and the drouths which prevailed so extensively in some of the frontier States and Territories during that time, as to discourage and deter entries by actual settlers. The cash receipts were less by $690,322.23 than during the preceding year. The entire surveyed area of the public domain is 680,253,094 acres, of which 26,077,531 were surveyed during the past year, leaving 1,154,471,762 acres still unsurveyed.

The report of the Commissioner of Pensions makes interesting suggestions in regard to the management and disposition of the public domain, and the modification of existing laws, the apparent importance of which should insure for them the careful consideration of Congress. The number of pensioners still continues to decrease, the highest number having been reached during the year ending June 30, 1873. During the last year 11,557 names were added to the rolls, and 12,977 were dropped therefrom, showing a net decrease of 1,420; but while the number of pensioners has decreased, the annual amount due on the pension-rolls has increased $1,473,313. This is caused by the greatly increased average rate of pensions which, in the liberal legislation of Congress, has increased from $90.26 in 1872 to $102.71 in 1875, to each invalid pensioner—an increase in the average rate of 10 per cent. in the three years. During the year ending June 30, 1875, there was paid on account of pensions, including the expenses of disbursements, $29,683,116, being $910,632 less than was paid the preceding year. This reduction in the amount of expenditures was produced by the decrease in the amount of averages due on allowed claims and on pensions, the rate of which was increased by the legislation of the preceding session of Congress.

At the close of the last fiscal year there were on the pension-rolls 234,821 persons, of whom 210,363 were army pensioners, 105,478 being invalids and 104,885 widows and dependent relatives; 3,420 navy pensioners, of whom 1,636 were invalids and 1,784 widows and dependent relatives; 21,038 were pensioners of the war of 1812, 15,875 of whom were survivors and 5,163 of whom are widows. It is estimated that $29,535,000 will be required for the payment of pensions for the next fiscal year, an amount $365,000 less than the estimate for the present year.

The geographical explorations have been prosecuted with energy during the year, covering an area of about 40,000 square miles in the Territories of Colorado, Utah, and New Mexico, developing the agricultural and mineral resources, and furnishing interesting scientific and topographical details of that region.

The method for the treatment of the Indians, adopted at the beginning of my first term, has been steadily pursued, and with satisfactory and encouraging results. It has been productive of evident improvement in the condition of that race, and will be continued with only such modifications as further experience may indicate to be necessary.

The Board heretofore appointed to take charge of the articles and materials pertaining to the War, the Navy, the Treasury, the Interior and the Postoffice Departments, and the Department of Agriculture, the Smithsonian Institute, and the Commission of Food Fishes, to be contributed, under the legislation of last session, to the International Exhibition to be held at Philadelphia, during the Centennial year, 1876, has been diligent in the discharge of the duties which have devolved upon it, and the preparations so far made with the means at command give assurance that the Government contributions will be made one of the marked characteristics of the exhibition. The Board has observed commendable economy in the matter of the erection of buildings for the Governmental exhibit; the expense of which, it is estimated, will not exceed, say $500,000. This amount has been withdrawn under the law [illegible] appropriations of five of the principal departments, which leaves some of those departments without sufficient means to render their respective practical exhibits complete and satisfactory. The exhibition being an international one, and the Government being a voluntary contributor, it is my opinion that the contribution should be of a character in quality and extent to sustain the dignity and credit of so distinguished a contributor. The advantages to the country of a creditable display in an international point of view are of the first importance, while an indifferent or discreditable participation by the Government would be humiliating to the patriotic feelings of our people themselves. I commend the estimates of the Board for the necessary additional appropriations to the favorable consideration of Congress.

The powers of Europe, almost without exception, many of the South American States, and even the more distant Eastern powers have manifested their friendly sentiments toward the United States, and the interest of the world in our progress by taking steps to join with us in celebrating the Centennial of the nation, and I strongly recommend that a more national importance be given to this exhibition by such legislation and by such appropriation as will insure its success. Its value in bringing to our shores innumerable useful works of art and skill, the commingling of the citizens of foreign countries and our own, and the interchange of ideas and manufactures will far exceed any pecuniary outlay we may make.

I transmit herewith the report of the Commissioner of Agriculture, together with the reports of the Commissioners of the Board of Audit and the Board of Health of the District of Columbia, to all of which I invite your attention.

The Bureau of Agriculture has accomplished much in disseminating useful knowledge to the agriculturist, and also in introducing new and useful productions adapted to our soil and climate, and is worthy of the continued encouragement of the Government.

The report of the Commissioner of Education, which accompanies the report of the Secretary of the Interior, shows a gratifying progress in educational matters. In nearly every annual message that I have had the honor of transmitting to Congress, I have called attention to the anomalous, not to say scandalous, condition of the affairs existing in the territory of Utah, and have asked for definite legislation to correct it. That polygamy should exist in a free, enlightened and Christian country, without the power to punish so flagrant a crime against decency and morality, seems preposterous. True, there is no law to sustain this unnatural vice, but what is needed is a law to punish it as a crime, and at the same time to fix the status of the innocent children—the offspring of this system, and of the possibly innocent plural wives; but, as an institution, polygamy should be banished from the land. While this is being done, I invite the attention of Congress to another, though perhaps no less an evil, the importation of Chinese women, but few of whom are brought to our shores to pursue honorable or useful occupations.

Observations while visiting the Territories of Wyoming, Utah and Colorado, during the last autumn, convinced me that existing laws regulating the disposition of public lands, timber, etc., and probably the mining laws themselves, are very defective, and should be carefully amended, and at an early day. In Territories where the cultivation of the soil can only be followed by irrigation, where the lands can only be used as pasturage, and this only where stock can reach water to quench thirst, cannot be governed by the same laws as to entries of lands, every acre of which is an independent state by itself. Lands must be held in larger quantities to justify the expense of conducting water upon it to make it fruitful, or to justify utilizing it as pasturage. The timber in most of the Territories is principally confined to the mountain regions, which are held for entry in small quantities only, and as mineral lands. The timber is the property of the United States, for the disposal of which there is now no adequate law. The settler must become a consumer of this timber, whether he lives upon the plains or engages in working the mines. Hence every man becomes a trespasser himself, or, knowingly, a patron of trespassers. My opportunities for observing were not sufficient to justify me in recommending specific legislation on these subjects; but I do recommend that a joint committee of the two houses of Congress, sufficiently large to be divided into sub-committees, be organized to visit all the mining States and Territories during the coming summer, and that the committee shall report to Congress, at the next session, such laws, or amendments to the laws, as may seem necessary to secure the best interests of the Government and the people of those Territories, who are doing so much for their development. I am sure the citizens occupying the Territories described do not wish to be trespassers, nor will they be, if legal ways are provided for them to become owners of those actual necessities of their position.

As this will be the last annual message which I shall have the honor of transmitting to Congress before my successor is chosen, I will repeat or recapitulate the questions which I deem of vital importance which are to be legislated upon and settled at this session: 1. That the States shall be required to afford the opportunity of a good common school education to every child within their limits. 2. No tenets shall ever be taught in any school supported in whole or in part by the State, nation, or by the proceeds of any tax levied upon any community; make education compulsory, so far as to deprive all persons who cannot read and write from becoming voters after the year 1890, disfranchising none, however, on the ground of illiteracy who may be voters at the time this amendment takes effect. 3. Declare the Church and State forever separate and distinct, but each free within their proper sphere, and that all church property shall bear its own proportion of taxation. 4. Drive out licensed immorality, such as polygamy and the importation of women for illegitimate purposes. To recur again to the centennial year, it would seem as though, now, as we are about to begin the second century of our national existence, would be a most fitting time for these reforms. 5. Enact such laws as will insure a speedy return to a sound currency, such as will command the respect of the world.

Believing that these views will commend themselves to the great majority of the right-thinking and patriotic citizens of the United States, I submit the rest to Congress.

(Signed), U. S. GRANT.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Dec. 7, 1875.

THE DEPARTMENTS.

The Finances—Secretary Bristow's Report.

Owing to the crowded state of our columns we can find room only for that portion of the lengthy report of the Secretary of the Treasury treating of the financial problem. The Secretary takes strong ground in favor of an early resumption of specie payments. Upon this subject he says:

"Every branch of industry and all classes of people are alike interested in the restoration of a sound and stable circulating medium, the laborer and producer no less than the merchant, bondholder and banker. The present unequal and fluctuating currency oppresses and injures laborers and producers, who constitute a great majority of our people, far more than it affects injuriously dealers in money. The difference between gold and our paper currency is a margin upon which experienced money dealers do business, and it is this that gives the opportunity for artificial combinations whereby values are increased or reduced at pleasure. The purchasing power of the currency is increased or diminished by the manipulation of large operators united for that purpose, and producers and laborers are often made to suffer, without effective power of resistance. Restoration of a sound and unvarying currency must bring better relative wages with more constant employment, because the value of labor, as of that which it produces, will be measured by a more certain standard; and, with the return of confidence, there must come activity, prosperity, larger markets, and greater demand, which, as both reason and experience prove, do not tend to lower wages, or make employment less certain.

"The claim that the large issue of inconvertible paper currency has been beneficial to producers is, perhaps, sufficiently disproved by reference to the reports of sales of leading articles of produce, such as wheat, corn and pork, before and since the issue of such currency. The most trustworthy statistics show that such articles were sold in New York during the five years from 1870 to 1874, inclusive, for about the same price that they brought in the five years from 1856 to 1860, inclusive.

"On the other hand, it is equally certain that the farmer has paid increased prices, during the period from 1870 to 1874, for articles imported for consumption, upon all of which the difference between gold and currency must be paid by the consumer, who pays in the latter. Thus the producer of domestic articles is constantly subjected to loss in exchanging his products for such articles as coffee, tea, sugars, and other imported goods, which enter into daily consumption. In this connection it should be borne in mind that a greater volume of currency is required for the transaction of business when it consists of inconvertible paper, which does not circulate abroad, than when the currency in general use is gold, which flows through every artery of commerce. The statistics of our foreign trade illustrate this proposition. For every imported article the consumer must pay to the importer, besides the cost in gold, increased by his per centage of profit, as much more as the difference between gold and the currency with which payment is made. This difference, commonly called the premium on gold, increases by many millions the total amount which would otherwise be required to complete all such transactions.

"The proper office of currency, whether it be gold or paper, is to serve as a medium of exchange for the adjustment of transactions between buyers and sellers. When it is sound and stable, receivable in all parts of the commercial world, the amount which actually passes from hand to hand in business transactions is far below the volume of business. A small per cent. thereof is adjusted by the actual handling of money. Exchanges are, for the most part, made by transfers of credits through banks and other agencies. Wherever exchanges and business transactions are conducted on the basis of coin, and paper convertible into it, the volume will be regulated by natural causes. Money, like merchandise, will go where there is demand for it, and where something of value can be obtained in exchange for it. When the financial panic of 1857 created a demand for gold in this country, a ready and continued supply came steadily from abroad to meet the necessities of our people, and brought speedy relief. Now, the enforced use of inconvertible paper currency not only obstructs the flow of gold from abroad, but drives from the country the precious metals yielded by our mines.

"Good and bad currency cannot be retained in anything like equal proportions in a country having commercial relations with other powers and peoples. The latter will drive away the former. Gold and silver will flow steadily to those parts of the commercial world where business is done on the basis of an unvarying standard of values, and where every issue of paper is convertible into the precious metals at the option of the holder, because they are needed there. Such is the inevitable operation of the law of supply and demand; and the present limited and inadequate supply of coin in this country is chiefly due to this cause. Gold has become a commodity of trade, the price of which from day to day depends largely upon the will of those who have combined to control the market. This presents a serious obstruction to all productive industries and commerce, and introduces into business transactions an element of uncertainty, which often unsettles the most intelligent calculations, and tends to destroy confidence, without which there can be no real or permanent prosperity. Apparent but fictitious prosperity has often followed large issues of irredeemable paper currency, but no result is more certain to flow from a given cause than disaster and financial distress to follow a period of inflation of business and credit caused by excessive issues of paper currency. The philosophy which teaches by example, as well as the deductions of reason, establishes conclusively that there is no effective remedy for the evil but the removal of its cause.

"The circumstances attending the issue of the United States notes now in circulation impose upon the Government a peculiar obligation to provide for their speedy and certain redemption in coin. They were issued in the exercise of a power which can be called into use only in a time of supreme necessity, and were paid out for the support of an army composed of brave and patriotic citizens who had responded to the call of their country in the hour of its extreme peril. To suffer a promise made at such a time and under such circumstances to be dishonored by subsequent indifference or nonperformance, would be little better than open repudiation, and would affect injuriously our national name and credit.

"It is worthy of note that for the most part those who now oppose the redemption of legal-tender notes, and who ask for a further issue and continued and indefinite reissue of the notes now in circulation, were most strenuous in their opposition to such issue during the civil war. The acts authorizing such issues were denounced as in violation of sound principles of finance, not warranted by the Constitution. Their constitutional validity was resisted at every point, and subjected to the test of judicial decision in almost every court in the country, both State and national. The supreme judicial tribunal of the nation upheld the acts as measures of necessity in a time of great exigency, but it has neither decided nor intimated that such power may be exercised by Congress in time of public tranquillity. Indeed it is fairly inferable, from all the Court has said, in the various cases in which the question has been before it, that the issue of such notes in time of peace is not within the constitutional power of Congress. The language and argument of the Court leave no reason to believe that it would sustain the claim of power to increase the volume of such issues or to reissue such as have been redeemed in obedience to law, when the public exigency no longer exists. Those who opposed such issues at a time of supreme necessity, and insist upon further issues when the emergency has passed away, put themselves in the attitude of opposing war measures in the midst of war, and advocating them in a time of profound peace. Congress carefully confined the operation of the act to the period of necessity by authorizing 'the reissue from time to time, as the exigencies of the public interest shall require.'

"The Government is bound, not only by economic considerations and proper regard for the interest of the people, but by express and repeated promises, to provide for the redemption in coin of all its issues of legal-tender notes. The original Legal-Tender act was regarded and treated at the time of its adoption as a temporary measure, made necessary and justifiable only by the exigency of war, which taxed all the resources and energies of the nation."

After reciting the various acts of Congress authorizing the issue of United States notes, and the declaration of the Supreme Court that these acts should be accepted as conclusive of the obligation and duty of the Government to provide for the payment in specie of all such issues, the Secretary continues:

"These provisions of the various acts of Congress, which were passed with the approval of the executive, and the clear adjudication of the Supreme Court, as well as the plainest principles of political economy, and proper regard for the public welfare, commit the Government to the redemption in coin of the notes issued under the circumstances before stated. National faith and honor could not be more distinctly or unequivocally pledged to the performance of a plain duty.

"In view of these solemn and repeated pledges, it seems idle to resort to the consideration of elementary principles of finance to prove the evils of an irredeemable paper currency. In the face of such pledges, disregard of which would bring national dishonor, and serious, if not irreparable injury to the public credit, it can hardly be necessary to discuss questions of expediency, or to point out the ills which the experience of the civilized world shows must follow a violation of well-known laws of political economy.

"It is among the first and most important functions of Government to give to its people a sound and stable currency, having a fixed relation to the standard of values in general use among nations. The true matter with which Government has to do is not so much a question of volume as of soundness and stability of the currency. When it has established a currency of fixed and stable value, having a known relation to that of other powers, and furnishing a uniform medium of exchange, the volume may and should be left to be determined by the wants of trade and business. Natural causes, aided by individual effort and enterprise, will regulate the volume of currency far more wisely and with greater safety to business than acts of Congress imposing artificial limits, subject to increase or diminution at every session. The existing provisions of the law making United States notes legal tender for all debts, both public and private, with certain exceptions relating to transactions with Government, is an artificial barrier to the use of gold and silver, tending not only to prevent the flow of gold toward this country, but promoting the shipment abroad of our own production of precious metals. For this reason Congress should abolish the legal tender quality of the notes, as to all contracts made, and liabilities arising after a fixed day. The first day of January, 1879, being already fixed by law as the time when the redemption of United States notes then outstanding shall begin, it would be proper and safe to provide that such notes shall not be legal tender for contracts made, or liabilities incurred after the first day of January, 1879. Such an act would not too suddenly change the value of the notes, and would not affect injuriously either debtors or creditors, but would remove a present obstruction to the retention of our gold and silver production, and create a demand for the return of the gold now abroad, thus promoting final resumption by preparing the country for it.

"In furtherance of the purpose of the act of the last Congress to provide for the resumption of specie payments, the Secretary recommends that authority be given for funding legal-tender notes into bonds bearing a low rate of interest. Such bonds should run for a longer period of time than those now authorized for refunding the interest-bearing debt, and should be made available to national banks to deposit to secure their circulation and other liabilities to the Government, and should bear a rate of interest so low as not to cause too rapid absorption of the notes. It seems probable that a bond bearing interest at the rate of four per cent. would invite the funding of a sufficient amount of legal-tender notes to lessen materially the sum of gold which, in the absence of such provision, must be accumulated in the Treasury by the 1st of January, 1879, to carry out the imperative requirements of the act of Jan. 14, 1875. If it be apprehended that authority to the Secretary to fund an unlimited amount of notes might lead to too sudden contraction of the currency, Congress could limit the amount to be funded in any given period of time. The process being in no sense compulsory as to the holders of United States notes, and the rate of interest on the bonds being made low, it is not probable that currency which could find profitable employment would be presented for redemption in such bonds. Only the excess of notes above the needs of business would seek such conversion. Authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to redeem and cancel two million of legal-tender notes per month by this process would greatly facilitate redemption at the time now fixed by law, and besides would have the advantage of publicity as to the exact amount to be withdrawn in any given month. Bonds issued for this purpose should be of the denomination of fifty and one hundred dollars, and any multiple thereof, in order to meet the convenience of all classes of holders of United States notes. The faith of the Government is now pledged to the redemption on and after January 1, 1879, and to the final redemption and removal from the currency of the country of the legal-tender notes as fast as they shall be presented for redemption, according to the provisions of the act of January 14, 1875. To resume on the 1st of January, 1879, without further legislation, would require the accumulation of a large amount of gold in the Treasury in order to avert the possibility of failure of the plan. Such an amount of gold can be procured with difficulty, and not without more or less embarrassing effect upon the trade and commerce of our own and other countries. The present abundance and cheapness of both currency and capital presents a favorable opportunity for the withdrawal and redemption of a considerable part of the outstanding legal-tender notes, thereby making easy and effectual the redemption now pledged. Such withdrawal of legal-tender notes, thus dispensing with the necessity for accumulating gold in the Treasury in proportion to the amount withdrawn, would tend to appreciate those remaining outstanding and make it easier to protect and keep in circulation the silver coin now authorized to be issued.

"The act last referred to is an express recognition of the duty and obligation of the Government to resume specie payment at the day therein named; and, however widely different may be the views of intelligent persons upon the means adopted by Congress, it is gratifying to know that the end sought to be reached has met the concurrence of the country, and that a majority of the people, wherever the matter has been publicly and fully discussed, have signified their approval of the determination of Congress to be faithful to its pledges, and to relieve them of the ills of an irredeemable paper currency.

"The act in question not only makes express provisions for resumption at a fixed date, but commits the Government to the use of all such means as may be needful to that end. If experience shall show that the means provided by Congress need to be supplemented by further legislation for the easier and more certain accomplishment of the end, it must be assumed that Congress will not suffer the great purpose to be impeded for want of such additional legislation. The act confers large powers on the Secretary of the Treasury, touching the issue of United States bonds for the purpose of procuring the supply of gold necessary to execute such of its provisions as go into immediate operation, and to provide for the redemption in gold of United States notes outstanding on and after the 1st of January, 1879. In this respect the power conferred on the Secretary is ample; but if, for any cause, it should be found impracticable to accumulate in the Treasury a sufficient amount of gold to carry out the provisions of the act, the Secretary is left without the choice of other means to accomplish the end. It may, perhaps, be doubted whether the process of accumulating a large amount of gold by a given time could go on without meeting opposition from the financial powers of the world. It is safe to say that so large an amount of gold as would be required to carry out the purpose and direction of the act cannot be suddenly acquired. It can be done only by gradual processes, and by taking advantage of favorable conditions of the money market from time to time.

"The loss of interest on large sums hoarded in the Treasury for a considerable period in advance of January, 1879, is a consideration not to be disregarded, although it should not be permitted to outweigh the benefits to result from full and complete execution of the act.

"The Secretary regrets that the condition of the Treasury has been such as to render it necessary to make sales of gold coin from time to time to meet current expenditures payable in currency. Such sales have been made in New York city, upon public notice, in accordance with the plan previously adopted, and have been limited from month to month to the amount necessary to keep on hand a sufficiency of currency to meet probable demands upon the Treasury under existing appropriations. It is the desire of the Secretary to retain in the Treasury, so far as practicable, the gold received from customs, and sales are discontinued whenever the balance of currency in the Treasury is sufficient to meet currency payments."

Report of the Secretary of War.

Secretary Belknap's report is, as usual, a very lengthy document, and our space permits only a brief abstract of its salient features. He is gratified to state that since his last report a marked improvement has taken place in the morale of the service. The army is now reduced to 25,000 men. Recruiting was resumed in November, 1874, for the purpose of keeping up the standard number, and under a careful system in the selection of the men the class of recruits now received is of a superior quality. The number of desertions has been largely reduced, being about 2,100 less than during the previous year, while the number of re-enlistments has increased nearly threefold. The state of contentment thus shown is due, in a great measure, to the excellent system of pay established, which is now graduated by length of service, and affords the soldier an opportunity to deposit his savings with the Government and receive interest for the same until the end of his term.

The Secretary calls attention to the fact that large numbers of married men have been enlisted, and that their presence in the ranks proves a source of embarrassment to military discipline, as it is an injury to their families. He asks for appropriate legislation to correct this growing evil.

The work of care and improvement of national cemeteries has been satisfactorily performed during the year. Nine cemeteries have been inclosed with walls, leaving eleven yet uninclosed.

The works for the defense of our seaboard, under the Engineer Department, have progressed satisfactorily and as rapidly as the means provided would admit. The trials of torpedoes have continued, and have proved the importance of this auxiliary in the defense of our harbors.

Secretary Robeson states that under the act of Congress for the relief of persons from the ravages of grasshoppers, 1,957,108 rations were issued to 63,593 adults, and 43,942 children under 12 years of age, residing in Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Colorado and Dakota. Of the sum of $150,000 appropriated by Congress, $132,887.69 was disbursed for the purpose contemplated by the act, and $5,112.31 was returned to the Treasury.

The Secretary calls attention to the fact that the annual appropriation for arming and equipping the militia ($200,000) is now no larger than in 1808, when the population was about 8,000,000, and says that with such a meager appropriation it is impossible for him to meet all the demands made upon his department by the States and Territories.

Secretary Belknap heartily approves of the plan proposed by the Board on Arsenals in 1874, for the concentration of ordnance manufactories, by the establishment in the vicinity of New York city of a grand arsenal of construction.

The entire army has been supplied during the year with new rifles and carbines, caliber 45.

The Secretary calls attention to the Rio Grande troubles and says measures have been instituted to preserve the integrity of, and enforce a proper regard for, the territory of the United States.

The Indians in the Department of the Missouri are represented to be in a peaceful mood at present, and all on their reservations except the Utes.

It is suggested that Alaska be attached to Washington Territory as a county.

The report shows that the actual expenditures of the War Department for the year ending June 30, 1874, including river and harbor improvements, were $42,326,314.71; the same for the last fiscal year, ending June 30, 1875, were $41,277,375.28—showing a reduction of $1,048,939.43. The estimates for the military establishment for the ensuing fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, are $33,452,396.50; those for the current fiscal year, ending June 30, 1876, were $32,488,969.50—being an increase of $963,427. The appropriations for that purpose for the current fiscal year were $28,727,47.99.

Secretary Belknap states that the curiosities of the great Yellowstone National Park are rapidly being destroyed, and urges that troops be stationed in or near the park to prevent spoliation. He rightly says that everything should be done that can be to protect all that is grand and beautiful in that remarkable region.

Indian Affairs.

Commissioner of Indian Affairs Smith, in his annual report, says that the reports of the Indian Superintendents and Agents convey unmistakable evidence of a year of advance in the civilization of the Indians. Their testimony is almost uniform to the fact that the civilization of Indians is not only entirely practicable, but fairly under way. The Commissioner expresses the opinion that a general Indian war will never again occur in the United States. In reference to the Black Hills country the Commissioner recommends that legislation be now sought from Congress offering a fair and full equivalent for the country lying between the north and south forks of Cheyenne River in Dakota, the true equivalent to be offered the Sioux as helpless wards of the Government for the Black Hills. The Commissioner says the need of the Indian Territory is a government of the simplest form possible, and suggests that a government similar to that provided for the territory of the United States northwest of the River Ohio preliminary to the organization of a General Assembly, would be best adapted for the Territory at present. He recommends that the matter be again brought before Congress. The Commissioner opposes the transfer of the Indian Bureau to the War Department. He hopes that Congress will remove the difficulties which have heretofore been experienced in procuring the enactment of laws and necessary appropriations for the training and education of Indians. None but the very best men, he says, should be appointed as agents, and he expresses the hope that the Government will still be inclined to call upon the religious bodies of the country to name the men.

The Navy.

Secretary Robeson's report of the naval service for the year shows that the number of vessels of every class and description now borne on the navy register is 147, carrying 1,195 guns, and 152,492 tons measurement. Of these, many are sailing vessels of little or no value as part of the efficient force for either the cruising or fighting purposes of the present day. The steam vessels as distinguished from ironclads and torpedo-ships, number 95, of which 25 are tugs. Of the remainder 38 are ready for use when required. Our ironclad fleet consists of 36 vessels, 21 of the monitor type, 2 torpedo-ships, and 3 never launched. All the vessels (80) are available, including 16 ironclads and 2 torpedo-boats. Details are given of the operations of the fleet on each of the six stations.

The Secretary is gratified to state that the navy is stronger and in a more efficient condition than at any time within the last seven years. He asks Congress for an appropriation to finish at once all the repairs of the five double-turreted monitors. With these added to it, our ironclad service would, for purposes of defense, present a very substantial barrier to anything which could cross the seas and attempt to enter our ports.

The Public Domain.

Commissioner Burdett, of the General Land Office, states that the disposal of public lands for the last fiscal year amounts to 7,071,271.29 acres, as follows:

	Acres.
Disposal of public lands by ordinary cash sales	45,061
Military bounty land warrant locations under acts of 1855, 1852 and 1855	137,000
Homestead entries	[illegible]
Timber culture entries	464,670
Agricultural College scrip locations	9,432
Certified to railroads	3,107,013
Land approved to States as swamp	47,721
Certified for Agricultural Colleges	27,021
Certified for common schools	[illegible]
Certified for universities	16,434
Internal improvement selections approved to States	8,614
Sioux half-breed scrip locations	[illegible]
Chippewa half-breed scrip locations	11,181
Total	7,070,271
Disposals of previous year	9,530,872

This is a decrease of 2,460,601.54 acres, as compared with the area disposed of in 1874. This result is attributed by the Commissioner largely to the devastation by grasshoppers, the falling off of emigration, and the general business depression.

The Currency.

A considerable portion of the report of Mr. Knox, Comptroller of the Currency, is devoted to an elaborate defense of the national banking system, which he thinks should be continued as at present organized. A number of amendments to the banking laws are suggested, embracing, among others: (1) Authorizing the Comptroller to appoint Receivers of national banks when insolvency becomes evident; (2) for the appointment of a Receiver when the charter of a bank is determined and adjudged forfeited by a United States Court; (3) providing that if the shareholders of a bank whose capital stock is impaired refuse to pay their assessments, after three months' notice, the capital stock of such delinquents shall be sold to make good the deficiency; (4) prohibiting the deposit of more than 10 per cent. of the capital of a national bank with any private banker; (5) the repeal of the 2 cent stamp tax upon bank checks; (6) requiring the words "counterfeit," or "altered," or "illegal," to be stamped on all counterfeit or unauthorized issues.

The Lighthouse Board.

The report of the Lighthouse Board shows that the Board has made an extensive and careful series of experiments with regard to the merits of the mineral oils of this country for the purpose of lighthouse illumination, and an elaborate and extensive series of experiments with regard to sound as applied to signals for warning the mariner of his approach to danger in thick or foggy weather, when all other guides become of little use. Even at this stage of the experiments success has been most gratifying, and by pursuing these inquiries the Board hopes to arrive at results not only valuable to science, but of practical importance in enabling it better to contend with one of the worst elements of danger which the mariner has to meet on our extended and dangerous coast. The Board asks for $2,139,000 for the year ending June 30, 1877, as against $1,899,000 appropriated last year, for its general support, and $780,926 for constructing new lighthouses, lightships, etc., as against $915,400 appropriated last year.

Quartermaster-General's Report.

The Quartermaster-General, in his annual report, states that the clothing issued to the troops has proved satisfactory except the campaign hats, and measures are being taken to procure more suitable ones for adoption in their stead. Through the courtesy of Sir Edward Thornton, the British Minister at Washington, 100 cork helmets, such as are worn by the British troops in hot countries, have been procured, and are being tried in Arizona. Clothing to the value of $180,041 has been issued to the National Home for Disabled Volunteers. The total cost of animals purchased during the year was $390,896, and 2,526 animals were sold, for which $70,901 was received and deposited in the Treasury. The cost of forage was much increased by the ravages of the grasshoppers and drought in certain localities, which consequently increased the expenditures on account of this class of supply.

The Postoffice Department.

From the report of Postmaster-General Jewell we glean that the earnings of the department for the last fiscal year fell short of its expenditures by something more than six million dollars. Of registered letters sent by mail during the year, 911 have been absolutely lost—stolen, of course—and 683 are missing, but not yet given up as lost. There have been 107 persons convicted of violating the postal laws, and 157 others await trial. The fast mail trains have worked so satisfactorily that the Postmaster-General expects a voluntary extension of that species of service by the railroads at an early date. There is a sensible recommendation that the postage on transient printed matter be reduced to the old rate, one cent for two ounces. The prepayment of newspaper postage has not been found to increase the revenue, but there has been a material saving in commissions, sufficient to prove that the change is profitable to the department.

The Signal Service.

The Chief Signal Officer, in his report, states that the display of cautionary signals has been made systematically at forty-three different stations, sea and lake ports and cities. Of the total number of cautionary signals thus displayed, 76 per cent. have been afterward reported as justified. No great storm has passed over any considerable number of the ports of the United States without preannouncement. The watch kept by the service and the prompt transmission in times of danger of a few messages have saved property amounting to more than the cost of the lines. The question of the useful preannouncement of approaching meteoric changes may be considered as determined by now five years of successful service. With each year of labor the paths for improvement open more plainly. What was conjectured became a certainty.

The Secret Service.

Chief Elmer Washburn's report shows that since Oct. 1, 1874, his officers have arrested 214 persons charged with counterfeiting, frauds upon the internal revenue and other crimes. His forces also captured eleven machines for manufacturing and numbering of counterfeit money, besides a large quantity of engraver's tools, etc. The sum of $174,669 in spurious currency was destroyed. Among the convicts were one clergyman, one lawyer, and thirty-three farmers. There were 202 males and twelve females. A large majority were natives of the United States. Not a single compromise with a criminal was made. Every arrest was prosecuted to conviction and punishment where the evidence was conclusive.

The National Printing Office.

The report of the Superintendent of the Public Printing shows that the total cost of the printing, binding, lithographing, etc., for the Government, for the year ended September 30th last, was $1,560,425. Beside this, the Congressional Record cost $88,000. In no period during the last six years has the work been so far advanced as now, nearly all the printing ordered by the last Congress having been completed. There are now 1,200 employes in all the departments of the office, with a pay roll of $95,000 a month. The compositors are allowed 60 cents per 1,000 ems, or $4 a day for eight hours.

CHILDREN'S SHOES.

A great many children suffer martyrdom with their feet and make no sign. Compression of the feet in children, not less than in grown people, works a great many evils. Derangement of circulation, headache and weak eyes result from wearing tight shoes. The motions of a child should be absolutely free, and every garment and covering of the body should be so contrived as not to detract in the least from perfect freedom of circulation and movement. Keeping shoes on feet that have outgrown them is very expensive economy. It is probable that more children suffer the misery of compressed feet from want of reflection or from false views of economy on the part of the parent than from material vanity. It may not be amiss to add a word of consolation to the unfortunate possessors of ugly hands and feet. We have heard unnumbered expressions of admiration of the works of various artists, authors and poets, but we do not remember ever to have heard the query as to what kind of a hand wrought any picture or penned any passage thus admired, or what kind of a foot seconded the researches of the brain and hand in pursuit of the knowledge or ability thus illustrated. If our work is well and faithfully done, it matters little whether our complexion is clear or cloudy, what the color of our hair may be, or what number of gloves or shoes we wear, so they do not impede our activities.

HOW A WOMAN GOT RICH.

Six years ago Mrs. Mary Ahart was living in a little tent on the edge of a town. Her whole worldly possessions consisted of this tent, a strawbed, two or three boxes which served as chairs and table, a little 7 or 8-year-old girl, and two cows and calves. She sold the spare milk of these two cows, carrying it around town with a tin pail, and with the product, and from work which she did for her neighbors, supported herself and child. When she could get $3 or $5 ahead she would buy another calf or yearling. It is not our purpose to trace her progress up to the present time minutely; but the result is, she now, in less than seven years, has several hundred head of cattle, a fine farm, with nice buildings and improvements, a comfortable, even luxuriant, home, and, instead of carrying milk around by hand, rides in her own carriage. Her daughter is a young lady, educated and accomplished. To-day Mrs. Ahart's property is valued at from $40,000 to $50,000. And she has made it all by honest industry and good management. She has had no outside help. She never had a government contract nor fell heir to any property.—Laramie (Col.) Sentinel.

ENGLAND'S FOREIGN TRADE.

During the year 1874 the foreign trade of England amounted in value to about £610,000,000. More than £500,000,000 of this was with sixteen countries, some of which, however, are portions of the Empire. They stand as follows: With the United States, £102,000,000; with France, £63,000,000; with British India, above £55,000,000; with Germany, nearly £45,000,000; with Australia, nearly £38,000,000; with Russia, nearly £30,000,000; with Holland, £29,000,000; with British North America, above £21,000,000; with Belgium, £21,000,000; with China, above £20,000,000; with Brazil, nearly £15,000,000; with Egypt, £14,000,000; with Spain and Canary Islands, above £13,000,000; with Turkey, nearly £13,000,000; with Sweden, £12,000,000; with Italy, £10,000,000.

ANOTHER OLD LADY.

The crop of centenarians improves as 1876 approaches. The latest heard from is Mrs. Hester Authors, living in Caroline County, Md., who is said to be 114 years old, and to have been present in Philadelphia at the signing of the Declaration of Independence. If the list continues to grow, Philadelphia must provide a special hotel to accomodate all these hundred-year-old folks.

AN ETERNAL EMIGRANT FAMILY.

At one of the stations on the plains east of Cheyenne, while the other passengers were taking their meal, we strayed away to breathe the invigorating air, and were attracted by a common housekeeping arrangement not far from our train. The horse and cow were grazing at a little distance from the empty wagon, from which the top had been removed and converted into a house. Upon a miniature cooking-stove the lady of the mansion, a rosy-cheeked young woman, was preparing the dinner, while the husband was engaged in an employment the practice of which would not have suggested itself to us—[illegible] into flat slabs the tin cans that he had picked up on his journey. These, he said, were for the purpose of covering his roof when he built a house somewhere.

"Somewhere? And where is that?" we asked.

"Well, now, Mister," he replied, "you are too much for me there. I suppose we must stop somewhere by and by, but the further we go the less we want to. I like to keep going this way; my wife likes it, and the baby in there seems to like it, for she grows like a weed. We are none of us sick; we always have plenty to eat, and so we don't see the use of stopping. One of these days, I suppose, we shall get to the Pacific, and then we shall be obliged to stop. In the meantime, if we strike a good place we may build a house to live in for a spell, but for the present we are well enough off."—Western Cor. New York Evening Post.

STATISTICS OF MINING.

In Great Britain there are 410,000 men employed in the coal-mines below ground, and 106,000 engaged above ground. The coal mined each year amounts to 12,500,000 tons. On an average 1,000 men are killed every year and 4,000 wounded. In the last half-century 50,000 men have been killed in the mines, and some 200,000 were wounded. In the United States 83,000 men are employed in mining, and 50,000,000 tons of coal mined yearly. In Pennsylvania the death rate exceeds that of Great Britain. The death rate in Ohio was also greater last year than that of England, but this year it will be less. The most dangerous mines in the United States are in Schuylkill County, Pennsylvania, one man being killed there for every 85,000 tons mined. One man is killed in England for every 138,000 tons mined, one in Pennsylvania for every 88,000 tons, and one in Ohio for every 133,000 tons. The destruction of human life ought always to be considered when making complaints about dear fuel. No doubt the prices often charged for coal are too dear, but the excess of charges is on the part of those who own the mines, and never on that of those who work them.

A CAT WITH TWO HEADS.

There is a wonderful curiosity, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, in Sedamsville, at the Sedamsville drug store, in the shape of a cat with two heads. Both heads are perfectly formed and fully developed, with two pairs of eyes, two months, but only two ears. His catship enjoys good health, and suffers no inconvenience from his superabundance of heads, except when it tries to catch a mouse, when there is a conflict of jurisdiction between the two mouths as to which shall take the mouse in. When the evenings are pleasant, the double-headed feline ambles to the cone of the roof, attunes its sweet voices, and in a duet of two voices from the same head it caterwauls the happy time away. And nice it would be if all cats had two heads. How enjoyable the summer nights would be!

A KIND BOY.

Yesterday, when a corpulent citizen was carefully feeling his way over an icy spot on Larned street, a boot-black overtook him and said:

"Some boys laff when a feller falls down!"

"Eh? ah!" growled the fat man.

"But I don't," continued the boy, "I allus feels bad."

"G'way, bub," growled the man, who felt insecure.

"Oh, you hunk o' taller," exclaimed the boy as he drew out of reach, "if I had them ears o' yourn I'd want to fall down and knock the coupons off'n 'em purty quick."—Free Press.

AN UNDERSTANDING.

Yesterday morning, after an old woman had taken her seat in the train going west, a young man came along and inquired if he could have a part of the seat.

"I guess you can," she replied, "but you want to understand me first. No chewing tobacco, no swearing, and no soft-soaping around, so's to get a chance to pick my pocket."

After thinking the matter over, he took a seat on the wood-box.—Detroit Free Press.

A DRUNKARD who was to have a finger amputated in the presence of Albany Medical College students, by Dr. Armsby, died under the influence of chloroform; and the surgeon says that in nearly every recorded instance of death from an anæsthetic the patient was addicted to intoxication.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN INDIANA, DEC. 9th, 1875

We want our readers to remember that the millions of money stolen from the government in these whisky frauds now undergoing investigations, was stolen by government officers under this corrupt administration and poured into the Republican electioneering fund in different States to carry the elections. In magnitude it excels all other frauds committed under the administration. It throws them all into the shade.—Goshen Democrat.

Among the first acts of the coming congress will be an urgent invitation to Secretary Robinson to rise and explain recent recruiting and repairs in the naval arm of the public service. He will also be called upon to explain other matters of personal and public interest. Withal, Mr Robinson may have so much to explain that he will have to let out the contract and take a little trip to Europe for his health.

The sensation of the day is the escape of Tweed from the Ludlow street jail in New York, which occurred on Saturday afternoon. The particulars as given in the dispatches published elsewhere show that the most disgraceful carelessness and recklessness has characterized the officers who had the great thief in custody. He was allowed to leave the jail and go about the city with an attendant, and it seems remarkable that he has not made his escape before. It is presumed that he has made his way to some of the South American republics with which the United States has no extradition treaty. If he is not recaptured he is doomed to pass the remainder of his days in exile, a punishment hardly less severe than imprisonment. Meanwhile those who are responsible for his escape should be made to suffer the full penalty of the law which is a fine of $1,000 and imprisonment for one year. The probability is that bribery was used.

The National Union says:—The Union has received several private letters from parties in DeKalb and Noble counties favoring the renomination of Freeman Kelly for Congress, against Hon. John H. Baker, who will in all probability receive the Republican nomination again next year. The point is argued that Mr. Kelly's nomination is in demand by the farmers, without respect of party and that last year owing to the briefness of the campaign and the unorganized condition of things on our side he did not have a fair show. This is partly true and there can be but little question that with proper management to the campaign a few weeks before the election, Mr. Kelly would be our Congressman to-day. It will be our purpose and aim to support the nominee of the Democratic Convention without respect to locality and if Mr. Kelly receives the nomination we will do whatever we can towards his election or that of any other man's; we have no favorites and as far as known there is no opposition to Mr. Kelly in this quarter. We would prefer the latter gentleman however, to some that we have supported for that position.

If the Washington dispatches giving an account of the funeral obsequies of the late Vice-President Wilson, are true then the crew of Federal ringmasters at the capitol have shown themselves to the public in the most indecent manner. Hon. Henry Wilson may not have been a great man in his life time, nevertheless he was the Vice-President of the United States at the time of his death and on account of his position it was but to his memory and to the respect of the American people that his remains while lying in state at the Capitol should not be made a show for the coarse, vulgar congregation of bummers. But such seems to have been the case. The dispatch says there was no person of any refinement who visited the capitol on the occasion who was not thoroughly scandalized and shocked. It was a scene without parallel and hardly to be matched in disgrace. The official in the nation lay as a vulgar curiosity in a crowd where not even the semblance of decorum was maintained. In this connection it may be added that the Vice-President was unattended save by a capitol policeman at the hour of his death and while his body was yet warm and the blood followed the dissecter's knife it was cut up in the presence of idle spectators. Gen. Badcock the President's private secretary who seems to hold a sort of supervisor position over his Excellency was appealed to but that gentleman no doubt was too much absorbed in the St. Louis whiskey fraud developments to pay much attention to his duties elsewhere.

CHILLS AND FEVER.

Simon's Liver Regulator, or Med'e

Is eminently a Family Medicine, and by being kept ready for immediate resort will save many an hour of suffering and many a dollar in time and doctors' bills.

After over forty years trial it is still receiving the most unqualified testimonials to its virtue from persons of the highest character and responsibility. Eminent physicians commend it as the most for Constipation, Headache, Pain in the [illegible] Sour Stomach, bad taste in the mouth, bilious attacks, Palpitation of the heart, [illegible] the region of the kidneys, despondency, [illegible] and forebodings of evil, all of which are the offspring of a diseased liver.

EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, poor appetite [illegible] you are suffering from torpid liver, or biliousness and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the liver, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of the disease, and if not regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and death will ensue.

As used with this medicine, all climates and changes of water and food may be faced without fear. As a remedy in Malarious fevers, Bowel complaints, Restlessness, Jaundice, Nausea, it is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

CAUTION.—Buy no powders or prepared Simons' Liver Regulator unless in our engraved wrapper with Trade Mark, Stamp, and Signature unbroken. None other is genuine.

The Cincinnati Weekly Enquirer

Is the only paper exclusively devoted to the

POLITICAL AND GENERAL

Welfare of the People.

It publishes letters of inquiry direct from the people and answers them fully without regard to party bias or benefit.

It is the advocate of right and justice to all, and the greatest good to the greatest number.

It is opposed to the unwise and dishonest class legislation that has benefited the few and oppressed the many, as realized in act of congress retiring from circulation nearly two-thirds of the people's money.

The National Bank Scheme, a device to place the control of the currency in the hands of the Money Kings and creating a non-producing aristocracy.

The Salary Grab Robbery, increasing the pay of government officials, while the price of labor and its products, real estate and greenbacks (the peoples' money) have been depreciated.

The act changing the original contract with bondholders, and making bonds payable in gold instead of legal tenders as first agreed upon: a favoritism of 25 per cent. in value to the few at the expense of the many.

The Resumption Act, demanding that which is utterly impossible and placing the object sought for twenty years further off.

For such and other crimes against the people the Enquirer will advocate a change in the administration government at once, a most fitting Celebration for the Centennial year.

FOR CHRISTMAS & NEW YEARS!

The Holidays Will Soon be on us!

NOW IS THE TIME TO LOOK AROUND FOR YOUR

HOLIDAY GOODS!

As usual we have an immense stock for the occasion.

We have 10 casks of New Turkish Prunes at 10c per pound. This is a reduction of 5c per pound.—And 500 case of Peaches at 15c per can. Just think of that price, with all the scarcity of Peaches this season. [illegible] bankrupt stock at half price.

SUGAR TEAS—We bought out the whole stock of McDougal's, formerly J. M. Flinger's, and his $1.60 Tea! We have put down to 1.10. Other qualities from 30c to 50c.

Sugars.

SUGARS! SUGARS!

We have reduced 1c per pound, and got a stock sufficient to last over the holidays. So you need not fear their advancing.

Coffee A,	10½c	N. O. Genuine,	9c
Coffee C,	9½c	Good Yellow.	8c

When we first commenced selling Teas there was very little sold in this place; the reason was they were sold so high that parties clubbed together and sent to New York to get their Teas, because they could save 20c to 50c on the pound. This we have all challenged, we not only sell teas and sugars as cheap as they do in New York, but cheaper. The freight is but a trifle and our immense sales of 40 to 50 chests a month enables us to undersell all competitors. No 3 or 4 profits with us. No middle men to handle our goods. We purchase of the Importers and sell direct to consumers, there saving our customers the profits of the Speculator, Jobber and Wholesale Merchant, which is at least 15 to 25 per cent.

We saw quite a number of persons under the influence of crooked whisky One poor soiled looking fellow could scarcely stand leaning up against a prominent business corner another making a snake fence down one of the principal thoroughfares, and several others taking a pleasure ride down Main street.

We ask our frieds all over the county to make an especial effort to increase our circulation nowithstanding the extreme stringency of the times, our circulation is to-day larger than it has ever been. But we desire to increase it. Many of its party friends are not subscribers who should and do want the paper. These we decire to secure.

The march in improvement that we have made within the past two years is the pride of the county and the wonder of those who visit the town now who saw it in times past in its dilapidated condition. Like all towns which make an effort to rise after having laid in a state of lethargy for years, the struggle was a bitter one. Improvement and progress triumphed, and but few can now be found who like to acknowledge that they interposed any objections.

We Must Have Fun.

The Holidays are close at hand, and our little folks all expect to have fun with their toys, &c. These hard times every body is anxious to buy where they can have a large selection to choose from and buy the cheapest. Now we advise all to call at Abright's Jewelry Store before you buy an article of any kind. He has the nicest presents in town and sells them for less money than any other house.

A certain Auburnite is in the habit of using the common expression, By the way, to a considerable extent. Some time ago during a religious awakening he experienced a change of heart and began attendance at protracted meetings Finally one evening he gained courage enough to rise and offer a prayer. He did well until the closing up when he abruptly sat down without the usual Amen. As he dropped into his seat the omission occurred to him when he arose quickly and with the index finger of his right hand extended toward the presiding pastor ejaculated. Oh, by-the way-Amen, and immediately resumed his seat.

Stop that Cough.

"He Went and Came."

Last Tuesday the Sheriff told one of his employees to transfer George Hopenix from the old to the new jail. Geo. liking sport pretty well fixed up a game on his partner. When about half way to jail he tore loose and started on a run The deputy gave him a hot chase, but George went right away from him without an effort and he was finally given up. The deputy returned told the story of the chase and great excitement prevailed. Crowds gathered on every corner and told what they all knew, and how would be the best way to secure the prisoner. In the midst of all this George turned and walked leisurely to the new jail.

Burned to Death

Mrs. Shrader, wife of Chas. Shrader, of this place who has been insane for two years back, ran away from home about two months ago, and was taken up by the people of Elkhart county and placed in the poor house. The superintendant of the poor farm sent word to this place immediately after she came there, but no one seemed at all interested and consequently she has remained there since. Yesterday we learned from her relations here that the poor house was burned and it was impossible to get her from the building. Her cries were heard until the roof fell in, and then she suffered the terrible death of burning.

KERFLAP.

A young lad by the name of Edward Smith, was riding a black colt to water last Sunday afternoon, and on returning he was going to show two other boys the speed of the animal. The two boys went ahead one block, and signaled for him to let 'er rip. He started the horse, put both feet tight against its ribs and took hold of the mane. About half way he loosened one hand and began to lay on the holter-strap. The horse was doing its best and when they had reached the boys one of them threw up his hat This frightened the horse and by a little jump sideways he sent that boy in a mud-puddle kerflap. He started after his steed carrying with him about one acre of dust, without the juice squeezed out,—and nobody could make him believe that "money" makes the mare go.

Kahn, the Clothier.

There are parties who claim they do not put names of those who buy overcoats in the "Courier" because it is not large enough to contain them. There are two better reasons. One is that they cant muster names enough to make a list and the other is that the very few who bought over-coats of them have seen their mistake and are ashamed to have it made public. We undertake to say that every man has bought an overcoat of us is proud of having done so, and will cheerfully testify to the extremely low prices and excellent quality of the same. The readers of the "Courier" are doubtless acquainted with many of the names on our list and we only ask them to inquire of such parties, the reason why they bought their overcoats of Kahn. The reply will invariably be, "Because they have the largest stock, best assortment and lowest prices of any house in Auburn. Look at the following:

A. McFicheran, D, Fretz, William Dehne, P. Alteuburg, P. Lockwood, Geo. Grogg, Jas Hazzard, S. Moore, Sr., O. M. Record, I. C. Culbertson, Jas. Cruse, Sam Cruse, Geo. Bottle, Joel Link, E. Shaffer, H. Herron, W. S. Dancer, D. B. Olinger, G. Hassman L. W. Treesh, R. Culbertson, G. Swineford, G. Rhodenbaugh, Eldridge Bruce, W. Spangler, C. Brandon, Clyde Brandon, J. Beugnot, W. Shaffer A. McClellan, W. S. Kutzner, A. L Hollopeter, E. Lintz, J. A. Barber G. W. Dragoo, A. Blodgett, Jacob Somers W. Welloume, N. Ensley, Treasurer. Ira N. Wingord, Joseph Link, Patrick Logue.

Now if any one can produce a more respectable list of names. We ask them to step forward and not "hide their light under a bushel"

We have suppressed some names at the desire of the parties as they have considered themselves under obligations to purchase of other houses, but upon comparison of prices bought of us.

KAHN.

Our attention has been called to a very elegant little book called: "Little Gems," by T. S. Arthur. It is composed of the author's best and sweetest crumbs for the little ones. It contains a variety of stories and poems, the choicest and most beautiful of all he has ever written and set like gems in a casket for his little friends. All the stories and poems are pleasant and instructive to read and good to be laid up in the memory, where their influence must ever be sweet and wholesome.

The book is very beautifully illustrated with 59 fine engravings which must have been prepared at a great expense. These will be enjoyed by the little ones and will instruct and entertain for hours at a time. In our estimation parents can purchase nothing more suitable for a childs holiday present it is not like a toy that is soon ruined but like a great fruit tree yielding its precious fruit from year to year. It is fitting that holidays should be a time for gift giving for it is the world's vacation from care its festal hope and joy. We consider that we confer a favor upon the public by announcing that Mrs. R. P. Moore is agent for its sale and will be glad to receive your orders.

From LaOtta.

Ed. Courier:

We notice in a late issue of your valuable journal, items of interest descriptive of this place and vicinity. We do not, however, wish it to be understood that we stand infalable in literary ability, on the contrary we know that our inability and inherent prejudices will in a great measure prevent us from giving a just and full representation; but may as we hope it will call forth others who will set at right the wrong revise and complete our unfinished efforts. This village is located at the crossing of the G. R. & I. and the E. R. & I. Railroads on a beautiful plat of ground, in the county of Noble and within a stone throw of DeKalb. The village but a few years since, was more tradesmen could find profitable imployment here. We are quite deficient in some of the professions. Ministers we have, but Doctors we have none. A doctor here must avoid all who have been tried and found wanting in the temperance cause as such have all "commited the unpardonable sin." He must say to all such "depart ye, I know ye not." If he should of frequent necessity, be called to Fort Wayne or other foreign points, the above rule may consistently be reversed.

To those who think of coming here and engage in the sale of strong drink, our advice is, to stay away; it is no plac for you. If you was even allowed to remain, you would starve at the business as our young men avoid the poisen cup. Just now this village is considerable aroused by an attempt by Fred Shomaker, to start a saloon here, and the verdict almost unanamously is, Fred go back to fatherland or to some other more congenial climate than this. To do justice that belongs to the temperance sentiment here, owes its origin to a few in this vicinity who have ever been faithful and vigilant. Business here is comparatively good. Dr. Taylor keeps a full stock of drygoods, groceries, boots and shoes, hardware, queensware and devotes an entire room, 20x40ft on the second floor, to ready made clothing and merchant tailoring. All who want to purchase ready made suits either boys, youths or mens can here find a fine assortment to select from, at low prices.

Sowers & Co. are engaged in the drug and grocery trade, with fair success.

The two Railroad Companies are about building a Y here, to connect the two roads, for the purpose of transfering coal and lumber.

The Eel River road has promised to erect next season, grain elevators here, which we very much need, as the shipment of grain from this point is quite extensive.

PERSONAL.

—Harry Ward, of Kendallville, was in the city last Sunday.

—Mace Long, of Fort Wayne, was in town last Saturday, looking after his billiard tables.

—Dr. Swartz, of La Grange, has been in the city several days.

—M. L. Duck, of North Manchester, was in the city this week.

—F. Kline and wife of Corunna, visited their parents in the city last Sunday.

—Mr. E. Carter, the knight of the cue is visiting his parents in the city.

—Mr. Wetz, of Fort Wayne, spent last Saturday with some friends in this place.

—Tom Scott, now at Waterloo, was in the city last Sunday.

W. Tolerton, of Chicago, gave us a short call last Monday.

—Mr. M. Reaver, of New Era. is contemplating a visit to Baltimore, Maryland and other large cities, about the holidays.

—Mrs. Dr. Swartz, of La Grange, who has been suffering for some time with sickness, is visiting her parents in the city. Vesta, as she is commonly known by, was principal of our public schools for a long time, giving entire satisfaction to our people. Many of her friends will be pleased to see her.

—C. A. Baxter, of the "Press" at Waterloo, was in the city last Monday.

We were mistaken last week in saying that the harness shop belonging to Mr. Hiram Racely was sold at Sheriff's sale. We are sorry that the notice appeared, and are glad to learn that he will soon be on his "feet" again. We do not know why our informant told us so, and would be obliged to such people if they would tell us the truth.

AN ORDIANCE TO ESTABLISH FIRE LIMITS.

Be it ordained by the Board of Trustees of the incorporated town of Auburn, in DeKalb County Ind., that it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to erect or cause to be erected any frame building or buildings or part or parts thereof on any part or parts of lot or lots Nos. Thirteen [13] Twenty-eight [28], Sixty-five [65], Sixty-six [66] Sixty-seven [67], sixty eight [68], Fourteen and Twenty-seven of the original plat of said town.

PRIZE GUM.

A boy of about ten summers entered one of our groceries on Main-st and pounding on the counter, to attract the attention of the clerk, he asked:

"Have you got any prize gum?"

"Yes, how much will you have," said the clerk.

"One stick."

He took it home before opening it and right before his mothers eyes he pulled out a nice "gold ring." It was most to small for her and she reached in her pocket and gave the boy ten cents and said:

"Run right straight back and tell the store-keeper to give you another stick, but try and get a bigger one. Do you understand, now?"

"Yes, I know."

On the corner of Fifth and Main streets he met Windy Joe, Longlegged Bill and several other lads. He told them all about it, and they arranged it to divide up the money and each one try his luck. They called for the gum, and as fast as they opened it they naturally placed it in their mouths. Coming out of that store was ten boys all chewing, and not one of them drawing anything. They all went down to the bridge to have a skate. In about two hours could be seen a woman, without any shawl or bonnet on breaking for that skating pond, and under her apron was an apple limb, just limber enough to work well.

He can't play duck with the boys, nor tag, with the girls. He says if you touch him on the back it hurts.

From Angola.

Angola, Dec., 7th, 1875.

Court still in session. On complaint of Wm. Hopkins against the Reppard boys, for attempt to provoke an assault battery, were fined one cent each. State of Indiana against Pierce for murder in second degree was tried, and discharged by the jury.

—School commences to-day with a good attendance.

—Another new grocery opened up by Dickinson of this place.

—It is currently reported upon good authority that we are to have a Sash, Door and Blind Factory started in the old Freygang building. The parties are from Quincy, Mich.

—The present indications are that '76 will be a fruitful year to angola, but we were commanded to multiply. and replenish the earth.

—The "Republican" asks "why the whisky rings was not looked into and broken up when the Democrats ruled. Why, Mr. Republican, there was no such rings known in their day. There was no object in them then. We could get the genuine article made directly from the grain for 12 and 18c per gallon —as cheap as water in a dry time, and did'nt create snakes in the boots as now either. In the Republican rule whisky is extremely high, but the Democrats drink all the whisky, so it don't make any difference how poor it is. They are called the whisky party by the shallow brained Republican editors.

Another shining mark hit in Angola. Delta, only son of F. M. Ardell died of diptheria, Dec. 2, 1865. Funeral services at the residence.

ANGOLA.

Deaths.

We learn through relatives of the deceased, that Mattie Blanch, aged 8yrs, 1 month and 3days infant daughter of John and Etta Ralston, died Nov. 17th, 1875, of "Yellow Disease."

Mr. Ralston was formerly a citizen of this city, and several years ago to Aberdeen, Miss., where he has since resided. The family have many friends in this vicinity who will sympathize with them in the loss of Mattie.

Lovely one how brief thy stay,
Short and hasty was the day;
Ending soon thy journey here,
Pain and grief no more to bear.

ANOTHER FIRE!

The Work of an Incendary.

The other day Mr. Weyer, living in the South-west end of town, received through the postoffice a drop letter, stating that if the whole family would call at Penfield & Moody's office, they would get money that was left there for them. Accordingly all went and while gone someone fired the house. It was discovered by some of the neighbors who immediately set at work to remove the contents inside. The family was on their way back and on discovering the fire hurried to the place. By a strong effort on the part of the neighbors, they succeeded in extinguishing the flames The contents were saved but the house is a total reck. The house was insured for a small amount. Mr. Weyer is a man of very moderate circumstances, and the work of firing the building was done undoubtedly through spite.

BUTLER ITEMS.

Butler, Dec. 7, 1875.

Cornelius Showalted and wife were in town last week. They formerly resided here but are now living at Bryan O.

—Roads are in a very bad condition Only the best of drivers keep from getting mired every rod or two.

—If you should ever fail to receive a report from Lena; Please do not blame Uncle Sam—poor Uncle Sam, he has enough to bear.

—A tramp barber by the name of Leishman, who has been working for Elic Paine, had to be helped out of town by the officers, Saturday evening. Mr. Paine has poor luck with his barbers.

—Now Mr. Weamer "has been and gone" and published the names of gentlemen waiting to receive proposals next year. Why didn't somebody think to publish the names of us girls (?) who have been waiting three years in vain?

—Lawyer Franks is jubilant; plenty of lawing to do. Our dentist has "jumped" the town greatly to the financial disadvantage of many of the boys who are now saying: "He owed me $10." "I loaned him $15" "And he borrowed my watch" &c., almost "adinfuntim"

THE PAST WEEK.

There are thirteen contested seats in the Forty-fourth Congress.

Nearly all the members of the Evansville (Ind.) whisky ring have pleaded guilty.

The projected monument to Horace Greeley has been abandoned, and the money subscribed has been returned.

Scannell, the New York murderer, who was recently acquitted on the ground of insanity, has been very properly locked up in a lunatic asylum.

The Texas border troubles continue. Additional transports have been ordered to the Rio Grande, to patrol the river, and prevent the crossing of stolen cattle.

The Rowing Association of American Colleges have challenged the Oxford, Cambridge and Dublin crews to take part in the annual regatta in July next.

The cable announces that Worth, the famous man-milliner of Paris, is financially embarrassed. It is said that the unpaid bills of fashionable American women are the principal cause of his troubles.

In connection with the export movement following closely the sending out of American cotton fabrics to England, the most interesting feature of late has been an important shipment of American ribbons to England.

The proposal of Guatemala to other Central American Governments for a national union under one flag, has received favorable attention from at least one power—that of the Republic of Salvador—which has accepted the proposition.

The report of the Comptroller of the Currency shows the number and resources of the national banks. It appears that Chicago has 16 banks; St. Louis, 7; Cincinnati, 5; Cleveland, 6; Pittsburgh, 23; Milwaukee, 3; St. Paul, 4; Detroit, 3.

The German Government has interdicted the wearing of extravagant dresses by female artists performing in the theaters of that country. The German critics have long railed against this Parisian practice, and it seems they have carried the day.

H. H. Taylor, who died recently in Chicago, willed half a million dollars to establish in that city "a charitable institution that will do the most good and the least harm." The trustees have not decided what to do with the money, but doubtless will found a hospital.

The trial of the Wainwright brothers, Thomas and Henry, for the murder of Harriet Lane, in Whitechapel road, London, in 1874, which created such an excitement throughout England, has resulted in their conviction. Henry was sentenced to death and Thomas to seven years' penal servitude.

Gen. Sheridan, in his annual report to the Secretary of War, devotes considerable attention to the Indian problem, which he thinks can be best solved by transferring the Indian Bureau to the War Department. He thinks if the Indians were honestly and humanely dealt with, the Government would have less need of troops to keep the savages under proper subjection.

According to the official canvass of the recent Mississippi election, two Republicans and four Democrats were elected to Congress, the Republicans being G. W. Wells in the Second District, and J. R. Lynch in the Sixth; and the Democrats are L. Q. C. Lamar in the First District, H. D. Money in the Third, O. R. Singleton in the Fourth, and C. E. Hooker in the Fifth.

A correct list of contests for seats in the lower house of Congress is given as follows: Alabama, Bromberg vs. Haralson; Florida, Finley vs. Walls; Illinois, LeMoyne vs. Farwell; Louisiana, Spencer vs. Morey, Breux vs. Darrall; Massachusetts, Abbott vs. Frost; Minnesota, Cox vs. Strait; New York, Lowry vs. Norton; South Carolina, Lee vs. Rainey, Buttz vs. Mackey; Virginia, Platt vs. Goode; Idaho Territory, Fern vs. Bennett; Utah Territory, Baskin vs. Cannon.

Col. J. F. Keegan and Capt. R. W. Baylor had a hostile meeting at Edgemoor, in Delaware, recently, in which shots were exchanged twice, and Baylor received a bullet under one of his left ribs, and Keegan's left hand was slightly injured. Capt. Baylor was an officer of Col. Mosby's command in the late war, and Col. Keegan was an officer in the Union army. The parties were both stopping at a hotel in Philadelphia when a quarrel ensued between them, resulting in blows, followed by a challenge from Keegan.

The revenue of the United States Government for the fiscal year just closed was less than for any year since 1864, which was before the great tax system necessitated by the war had begun to work. The sum total in 1875 was almost exactly $288,000,000, against $619,000,000 in 1866, the summit year, and $383,000,000 in 1870. There has been a reduction in the revenue of $95,000,000 therefore in five years. Part of this reduction is due to taxes abolished, $40,000,000 in internal revenue having been taken off in 1874, but a large amount is also due to the falling off in imports.

In Luzerne County, Pa., recently, occurred the most extensive caving-in of a coal mine ever known in this country. The shaft was operated by the Grand Tunnel Company, and the proprietors had noticed that the roof of the mine was insecure. Two hours previous to the mishap the workmen, 125 in number, had gone out, taking their implements with them, and, fortunately, no loss of life resulted. The effects of the cave-in were terrific. Huge boulders were thrown out of the mouth of the tunnel by the compressed air as if they had been pebbles, and the shock of the crash was like an earthquake.

A shocking murder has just been discovered in Buffalo, N. Y. Mrs. Withemeyer Weik, aged 40 years, was arrested, charged with murdering her step-son, Michael Weik, aged 14 years, whose body was found in an old well on the premises. He had been missing since Nov. 2, and when found had on only a scant shirt. The boy's father has been dead five years. By will he left his property to the lad, and which, by the latter's death, was to revert to Mrs. Weik's children. The little fellow had a pail, and an old heavy chain, together with other weights attached to him, and the body of a dead dog and other debris was thrown into the well to hide the crime.

The announcement that England had purchased from the Khedive of Egypt a controlling interest in the Suez Canal has been fully confirmed. The significance of this act can scarcely be realized by the casual reader. It is big with fate. It is somewhat remarkable that England should now gobble up this great canal, in view of the fact that her engineers originally pronounced the work entirely impracticable. It had the opposition of England from the start, the idea being that it would give to France an advantage in the trade of India. But French skill and money built the canal, and English commerce has kept the work open and enjoyed four-fifths of its advantages.

The Supreme Court of the United States has affirmed the decision of the Court of Claims in the case between the United States and the Union Pacific Railway. The question involved was whether the Government had the right to retain one-half the compensation due the road for the transportation of the mails and military and Indian supplies as a reimbursement or set-off for interest paid on the bonds issued by the corporation to aid in the construction of the road, and which were guaranteed by the Government. The amount involved was about $800,000, which the Government has withheld and will now be compelled to pay. The bonds run for thirty years, and the decision virtually allows the road to take its own time prior to their maturity for payment.

DOMESTIC INTELLIGENCE.

The East.

Mr. Samuel Wood, of New York, proposes to establish a college of music in Central Park, and to endow it with $5,000,000.

The Boston Rubber Shoe Company's factories, at Malden, Mass., were recently burned. Loss, $600,000; insurance, $150,000. Some 800 persons are thrown out of employment.

The residence of Albert Wood, at Piny Hollow, N. Y., was recently burned, and his wife and three children perished in the flames.

The Grand Trunk Railroad Works at Belleville, Ont., were recently burned. Loss, $150,000.

The steamer Sunnyside was sunk by floating ice in the Hudson River, near West Point, a few days since, and eleven of the passengers and crew drowned. The boat was valued at about $250,000.

The Atlantic express, going at a terrific speed, on the New York Central Railroad, collided with a freight train about four miles east of Buffalo, one day last week, killing four persons and injuring several others, some fatally. The fast mail train, following the express, had a narrow escape, having only succeeded in stopping 15 feet from the wreck.

Wm. M. Tweed, the ex-Tammany Chief, is at liberty. The "Boss" has for some time past been confined in the Ludlow Street Jail, New York, awaiting trial of the $6,000,000 suit, and it has been the habit of the prison authorities to allow Tweed to visit his friends in the city, accompanied by trustworthy officers. On Saturday week, Tweed visited the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Douglass, accompanied by the Warden of the jail, and while at the house asked permission to go up stairs and see his wife, who was living there. The request was granted, and after the lapse of fifteen minutes the Warden became uneasy at his prolonged absence, and sent Tweed's son after him. The son returned and said his "father was not there." The house was searched from top to bottom, but no trace of the "Boss" was to be found. Word was immediately sent to the police of New York and all the large cities, but at last accounts the fugitive had not been apprehended. It is now believed that he is well on his way to South America.

Lieut. Gen P. H. Sheridan, Maj. Gen. W. S. Hancock, and Brig. Gen. A. H. Terry, compose the Court of Inquiry which has met in Chicago to investigate the charges against Gen. O. E. Babcock, in connection with the whisky ring. Maj. Asa B. Gardner, Professor of Law at the West Point Military Academy, acts as Judge Advocate.

A horrible triple murder occurred in Cleveland, Ohio, on Saturday week. Wm. Aden, an Englishman, quarreled with his wife, and, becoming enraged, he caught up an ax and commenced butchering her with it, severing her head from her body and otherwise horribly mutilating her. He then went to the residence of Mrs. Benton, and attacked his stepdaughter, Hattie Aden, with an ax and hammer, cutting her in a fearful manner. Mrs. Benton, who attempted to interfere, was also chopped and pounded with the hammer. Both were mortally injured.

CONGRESS.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

The Democratic members of the Forty-fourth Congress met in the Hall of the House of Representatives, at Washington, at 2 o'clock p. m. on Saturday, Dec. 4. On motion of Fernando Wood, J. Q. C. Lamar, of Mississippi, was called to preside over the caucus. After a 20-minutes' speech by Lamar, and some preliminary proceedings, Holman nominated Kerr for Speaker, Clymer nominated Randall, and Hewitt nominated Sam Cox. The first ballot resulted: Kerr, 71; Randall, 59; Cox, 31; Sayler, 1. Second ballot: Kerr, 77; Randall, 63; Cox, 21; Sayler, 1. The third ballot resulted in the nomination of Kerr, who received 90 votes to 63 for Randall and 7 for Cox. On motion of Randall, the nomination was declared unanimous. Other nominations were made, as follows: Clerk, George M. Adams, of Kentucky; Sergeant-at-Arms, John G. Thompson, of Ohio; Doorkeeper, L. H. Fitzhugh, of Texas; Postmaster, James Stuart, of Virginia; Chaplain, I. L. Townsend (Episcopalian), of Washington.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS.

The Republican members of the House held a caucus the same evening, continuing in session only a short time. Mr. Blaine and all the old officers were renominated.

REGULAR PROCEEDINGS.

Washington, Monday, Dec. 6.—Senate.—The Senate was called to order precisely at 12 o'clock by Hon. T. W. Ferry, President pro tem.... After prayer, Cooper (Tenn.) presented the credentials of D. M. Key, the successor of Andrew Johnson, who was sworn in.... Boutwell announced the death of Vice-President Wilson, and said that at an early day resolutions relating to his life and public services would be offered.... At 12:45 adjourned.

House.—Mr. McPherson, Clerk of the House of the Forty-third Congress, called the House to order at 12 o'clock. The call of the roll showed 284 members present.... On motion of Lamar, the election of Speaker was proceeded with. Michael C. Kerr was chosen on the first ballot, he receiving 173 votes, to 106 for James G. Blaine, and 8 scattering.... The new Speaker was sworn in, and the election of the other officers proceeded with, resulting in the choice of all the nominees of the Democratic caucus.... Kelley (Pa.), being the oldest member in continuous service, administered the oath to Speaker Kerr.... An attempt was made to open up the Louisiana controversy by the introduction by Wood of a resolution referring the credentials of Morey (signed by Kellogg) and Spencer (signed by McEnery) to the Election Committee. After a sharp debate, participated in by Wood, Blaine, Lamar and Holman, the resolution was defeated and Morey was sworn in.

Tuesday, Dec. 7.—Senate.—James E. English, appointed Senator from Connecticut, to succeed O. S. Ferry, was sworn in and took his seat.... The Senate listened to the reading of the President's message, and soon after adjourned.

House.—The proceedings in the House were unimportant, the most of the time of the session being consumed in listening to the reading of the message and the drawing of seats.

HOW THE SUNLIGHT CAME.

The sunlight sometimes came into the room, for the sunlight was made for the poor as well as the rich, and it will pour in through crazy shutters and over the bare floors just as cheerily as it filters through lace curtains and breaks into golden fragments over velvet carpets. And God's free air came to the desolate room as well, though when it had crossed the decaying roofs and lingered for a moment on the weather-beaten sills, it was no longer pure.

Do you know what poverty is? A gaunt, starved woman with great black eyes, which had a look of hunger and terror, as if the shadow of fate had clutched her throat. A bare room—not bare, because it contained an old stove, a wretched bed, a broken chair, a bench, and—but nothing more. The gaunt, starved face woman had bread to eat—and nothing else. A bare room—bread and water. That is poverty. That is what brings to the heart that feeling of loneliness and grim despair which is poisoned out of life or quenched, like a flickering light, in the green waters of the river which creeps softly past the city and carries every burden of sorrow and woe to the bosom of the lake.

Why did this woman live? Had life one charm for her? Perhaps she asked herself these questions as she sat with her face in her hands and looked out upon he cold, cheerless day. There were no tears in her great black eyes—only such a look of woe and despair that the world should have been there to see it and to have it painted on their hearts.

"Mother!"

A little, wasted form on the wretched bed—a bony hand on the ragged quilt—a voice which told of hunger and pain and weary waiting.

She bent over him, and for a moment a mother's love shone in her eyes, and her wrinkled hand rested on his pale face with such tenderness as only a mother has.

"Lift me up and let me see the sunshine," he whispered, trying to put his arms around her neck.

"There is no sunshine," she whispered in reply, a sob in her throat.

"Kiss me, mother, and call me when the sunlight comes agin," he said.

She knew that he had been dying for a week—sinking slowly and surely into eternity, but she had no friends to call in—she could only weep over him and pray God that she might soon follow. With a gasp and a sob she pressed her lips to his forehead, then turned away to struggle with her despair and her great sorrow.

The cloudy, cheerless day faded into dusk. She roused herself for a moment and peered through the gloom to see if her boy still slept, and then she whispered with her thoughts again. And such thoughts!

When the darkness covered the bare floor as with a mantle, and when she could no longer see her own poverty, the boy suddenly cried out:

"Mother! mother! The sunlight has come!"

"Not yet, dear Ned—not yet! It's night now."

"But I see the sun—it lights all the room—it blazes into my face!" he called.

"There is no sun; it is cold and dark," she sobbed.

"And it grows brighter and I hear such sweet music! and I see little Tommy!" he whispered, while through the darkness she saw his white face grow radiant.

"You are dreaming," she sobbed.

"It was such a bright sun! The music is so sweet!" he whispered, clasping her hand.

"It is dark; it is night!" she gasped, but he did not hear.

The sunlight had truly come, but it was the sunlight—the golden rays reflected from the gates of Heaven—and not the sunlight of earth. The mysterious curtain hiding the Valley of Death had lifted for his spirit to pass under, and woe had been left behind.

And of her? Ask the shadows o night—ask the river. When they found his little dead body she was not there. They cannot find her. If she is dead God did not judge her harshly.—M. Quad.

"As to opening oysters," said Old Hurricane, "why, nothing's easier, if you only know how." "And how's how?" inquired Straight. "Scotch snuff," answered Old Hurricane, very sententiously; "Scotch snuff; bring a little of it ever so near their noses, and they'll sneeze their lids off."

Our Dan, on seeing a laundry wagon smashed up lately, remarked that it seemed to need ironing. At all events it was well mangled.—Boston Globe.

A BUSY LIFE.

The life of the late Vice-President Wilson has been a marked one, and its record is one that may be profitably studied by all Americans. It is, says a contemporary, a record that should be carefully observed by all young men, of whatever occupation or pursuit. Born in 1812, in poverty, he was apprenticed to a farmer a [illegible] years of age, and served laboriously until his majority, in 1833. With little opportunity for schooling, he found the means, even in those days, when books were not as plentiful or as accessible as now, to read a great many volumes of history and biography. As soon as he had completed his apprenticeship on the farm, he walked to Natick, Massachusetts, where he engaged at shoemaking, at which he worked diligently, practicing temperance and rigid economy, until he had accumulated some five hundred dollars. He then tried to improve his limited education by attending an academy in New Hampshire, but the depository of his savings having become insolvent, he returned to shoemaking at Natick. His good habits and his natural abilities, however, made him conspicuous among his associates, and in 1840 he was enlisted in behalf of Gen. Harrison's election to the Presidency, he making a great many speeches. From that time to the present he has been conspicuous in American politics. He was almost continuously a member of either one or the other branch of the State Legislature, and frequently the presiding officer. He was an active Anti-Slavery man, and opposed the annexation of Texas. In 1848 he left the Whig National Convention when it rejected the Anti-Slavery platform and united with the Free-Soil party. For two years he edited an Anti-Slavery paper in Boston, serving also in the Legislature. In 1852 he presided at the Free-Soil National Convention in Pittsburgh. In 1853 he was the Free-Soil candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, but was defeated. When the Know-Nothing organization elected Gardner Governor of Massachusetts, Mr. Wilson was a member of that party, but when that party, subsequently, rejected an Anti-Slavery platform, he abandoned it. In 1855 he was elected to the United States Senate in place of Edward Everett, resigned, and continued by successive elections a member of that body until 1873, when he resigned to become Vice-President, to which place he was elected in 1872.

Mr. Wilson has been a laborious public officer. For thirty-five years he has held elective offices, and in all of them had borne himself honorably and creditably. From the humble position of an uneducated farm-hand and a journeyman shoemaker he had progressively ascended in public favor and confidence to the second office of the Republic. He began his public life as a determined opponent of slavery, and at once was in sympathy with the popular sentiment of the State. But it was not merely because he was on the popular side that he was successful; his success was due to the earnestness and the ability, the perseverance and the energy with which he advocated the right and opposed the wrong. His success did not prove too great for him to bear. He was not so dazzled by his honors, nor overcome by his unexpected eminence, as to follow the example of so many others in like circumstances. He maintained his personal integrity, preserved his strictly temperate, abstemious habits, and to these circumstances, as well as to his natural abilities, are due the popular respect and confidence he has so long enjoyed.

HIS HONOR AND BIJAH.

An Hour at the Central Station Court.

"Was I ever a pirate?" echoed Bijah, as he pounded the door-mat against the fire-plug to clean out the dust. And then placing his hand on the newsboy's head he softly said:

"No, my son, I never was a pirate. My folks were poor, and there was no chance in those old days for a boy to get along. I was forced to go to school, work, and come up poor, while there was a splendid opening to become a pirate and make a heap of money."

"And were you allus as good as you are now?" asked the lad.

"Just the same, my boy. I wanted to be a prize-fighter, or a burglar, or something, but I was always chained down, and here I am now working for $2 a day and furnishing my own postage stamps, when I might have been a stage-coach robber just as well as not."

And he went in singing:

I had a dream the other night
When everything was still;
I dreamed I saw my early love,
Meandering by the mill.

THE CASE OF TAYLOR.

The first prisoner out had a more lonely look than a drifting sailor and he frankly acknowledged that he wouldn't have got drunk for a million dollars if he had known how it would make him feel.

"If this had been a quiet drunk," remarked his Honor, as he closely inspected an apple to see if a torpedo hadn't been inserted into it, "I might overlook it, but you planned for a regular old Potomac jamboree, and you had it. You kicked a boy on the leg; you upset a peanut stand; you whooped and yelled, and the great State of Michigan demands that you be bounced."

"Oh, sir, I have got a big family on my hands!"

"For which I am sorry, Mr. Taylor. However, I don't think they will miss any bread and butter by missing you."

"I'll sign the pledge, your Honor."

"Too late—too late. You were here only ten days ago, and your face plainly shows that you prefer whisky to good beefsteak. I'll mark you for sixty days."

"Oh! gosh! gosh! gosh!" exclaimed the prisoner.

"Be calm, Mr. Taylor—sit down and be composed."

"I can't—oh, let me go!"

"Go back in there, find an easy chair, and get your hair combed up to make a favorable impression on the driver of the Black Maria. The decision has been made and can't be changed."

A BROKER.

"John S. Newton, what is your business?" asked the Court of a big man with a sullen look.

"Broker," he growled.

"What do you break."

"Nothing."

"Then how are you a broker?"

"I buy notes and sell 'em, and discount paper, and so forth."

"Where does all this happen?"

"Home."

"Where is your home?"

"Oh, down here."

"Mr. Newton, you were drunk last night. While in that condition you entered a grocery and fell into a basket of eggs, abused the proprietor, and tried to pass yourself off as Prof. Tice, of St. Louis."

"It's no such thing," bluntly replied the broker.

"Mr. Newton," said his Honor, bending over the desk, "do you intimate that this Court is a liar?"

"N—no."

"Very well, Mr. Newton. That takes a great burden off my mind. Now, then, do you want four or five officers to stand up and swear that you were drunk?"

"No."

"Very well, again. The sentence is a fine of $10 or thirty days in the House of Correction."

The broker slowly counted out the money, and as he was ready to go his Honor said:

"Mr. Newton, as you are a stranger in town we may never meet again. My advice to you is to be more civil, improve your grammar, and drink forty gallons of water to one drop of whisky.

NO ACCUSER.

"Little Mrs. Graham, the charge against you is drunkenness and disturbing the peace."

"I don't care what the charge is, I never disturbed the peace, and I've been in this town forty years, and no one ever saw me drunk," she exclaimed.

"Mrs. Graham will you speak a little slower, and put in more commas and periods in your answers?"

"Show me the man who says I was drunk when I was working hard all day and when I'm the honestest woman in Detroit—show me the man!"

"The aforesaid man will please come forward," remarked the Court.

No one came.

"Call him—call him—call him!" squeaked the little woman.

"Is the officer here who arrested this fast-talking and highly indignant female?"

No answer.

"There! there! there!" squeaked Mrs. Graham, jumping up and down.

"Mrs. Graham, I have called and he answers not. I don't see how I can convict you, and therefore I suspend sentence. Go home and be happy."

"Yum! yum! yum!" she chuckled as she hurried out, and Bijah said that heaven was made up of small women.

A STRANGE DEFENSE.

"And Jerry Thomas, you are here with the rest," said his Honor to the next.

"I am, sir."

"That's right, Jerry, always respond promptly to civil questions, and speak the truth when you speak at all. Now, about that little affair last evening? Were you leaning up against the fence because you were tired?"

"No, sir; I had the earache."

"Ah ha! and did the earache induce you to kick at the officers?"

"Yes, sir."

"And to roll one in the mud?"

"Yes, sir."

"And to oblige them to draw you down here in a cart?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I'll make a law against the earache, and under its provisions I fine you ten dollars."

"You can't do it!"

"But I have done it."

"But I won't pay!"

"Then go up for thirty days."

"But I won't!"

"But you have already gone!"

And Bijah led him away.

As Court closed and the buggy drove up, the band uncovered their heads and sang:

"Thanksgiving is nigh unto us,
And the goose—oh, where may she be?
We 'spects we shall eat fat pork and such meat,
And never a goslin' we'll see."

THE UPAS TREE.

The story of the terrible upas tree, as told in the books furnished for the delectation of children a quarter or a half century ago, was a pure fiction. But, like thousands of other fabled productions, the wonderful properties of the tree disappeared when investigated by men who sought truth instead of the verification of a superstition. The so-called poisonous upas tree of Java has been cultivated in the conservatories of Europe since 1844, and, strange to say, its nearest kin is the cow tree of South America, the milky juice of which is as wholesome as that of the best short-horn cow. The juice of the upas tree may contain some poisonous properties, but not in such quantities or of so virulent a character as to make it a dangerous one to have about, even as a window plant. The American sumac beats this fabled Java production hollow in poisonous properties. But the original story of the poisonous upas, as told by Foersch, surgeon to the Dutch East India Company in 1774, was a remarkably good one, and proves the author to be a man possessing a very terrific brain.

THOSE SAD LEAVES.

She, a girl of seventeen, walked under the maples a month ago, and gathered the golden leaves and said:

"Oh, leaves, you remind me of crushed hopes and scattered plans."

He, her father, found them in a nail-keg, the other day, and shook them down in a corner of the woodshed and said:

"There, that dog has got just as good a bed as any canine in this town!"—Free Press.

A Famous Medical Institution.

From the Chicago Times.

"The name of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has become as familiar to the people all over the country as 'household words.' His wonderful remedies, his pamphlets and books, and his large medical experience, have brought him into prominence and given him a solid reputation. The Times, in the present issue, presents a whole-page communication from Dr. Pierce, and our readers may gain from it some idea of the vast proportions of his business and the merits of his medicines. He has at Buffalo a mammoth establishment, appropriately named 'The World's Dispensary,' where patients are treated, and the remedies compounded. Here nearly a hundred persons are employed in the several departments, and a corps of able and skilled physicians stands ready to alleviate the sufferings of humanity by the most approved methods. These physicians are in frequent consultation with Dr. Pierce, and their combined experience is brought to bear on the successful treatment of obstinate cases. The Doctor is a man of large medical experience, and his extensive knowledge of materia medica has been acknowledged by presentation of degrees from two of the first Medical Colleges in the land."

If you would patronize Medicines, scientifically prepared by a skilled Physician and Chemist, use Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines. Golden Medical Discovery is nutritious, tonic, alterative, and blood cleansing, and an unequaled Cough Remedy; Pleasant Purgative Pellets, scarcely larger than a mustard seed, constitute an agreeable and reliable physic; Favorite Prescription, a remedy for debilitated Females; Extract of Smart-Weed, a magical remedy for Pain, Bowel Complaints, and an unequaled Liniment for both human and horse flesh; while his Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is known the world over as the greatest specific for Catarrh and "Cold in the Head" ever given to the public. They are sold by Druggists.

CHAPPED hands, face, pimples, ringworm, saltrheum, and other cutaneous affections cured, and rough skin made soft and smooth, by using Juniper Tar Soap. Be careful to get only that made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, as there are many imitations made with common tar, all of which are worthless.

BURNETT'S COCOAINE. See Advertisement.

MILLIONS of bottles of BURNETT'S COCOAINE have been sold during the last twenty years, in every civilized country, and the public have rendered the verdict that it is the cheapest and best Hair Dressing in the world.

THE proprietors of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, Parsons' Purgative Pills, and Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders, have published a readable and instructive pamphlet, which may be had free by mail.

VEGETINE is composed of roots, barks and herbs. It is very pleasant to take; every child likes it. Vegetine—By its use you will prevent many of the diseases prevailing in the spring and summer season.

RUFUS CHAPMAN, of Liberty, Maine, had a stiff leg bent at the knee, limbered and straightened by the use of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS,

Will be found to possess those qualities necessary to the total eradication of all bilious attacks, prompt to start the secretions of the liver, and give a healthy tone to the entire system. Indeed, it is no ordinary discovery in medical science to have invented a remedy for those stubborn complaints, which develop all the results produced by a heretofore free use of calomel, a mineral justly dreaded by mankind, and acknowledged to be destructive in the extreme to the human system. That the properties of certain vegetables comprise all the virtues of calomel without its injurious tendencies, is now an admitted fact, rendered indisputable by scientific researches; and those who use the Mandrake Pills will be fully satisfied that the best medicines are those provided by nature in the common herbs and roots of the fields.

These pills open the bowels and correct all bilious derangements without salivation or any of the injurious effects of calomel or other poisons. The secretion of bile is promoted by these pills, as will be seen by the altered [illegible] of the [illegible] and disappearance of the sallow complexion and cleansing of the tongue.

Ample directions for use accompany each box of pills.

Prepared only by J. H. Schenck & Son, at their principal office, corner Sixth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, and for sale by all druggists and dealers. Price 25 cents per box.

VALUABLE INFORMATION.

BOSTON, Dec. 12, 1869.

Gentlemen—My only object in giving you this testimonial is to spread valuable information. Having been badly afflicted with Salt Rheum, and the whole surface of my skin being covered with pimples and eruptions, many of which caused me great pain and annoyance, and knowing it to be a blood disease, I took many of the advertised blood preparations, among which was any quantity of Sarsaparilla, without obtaining any benefit, until I commenced taking the VEGETINE; and before I had completed the first bottle, I saw that I had got the right medicine. Consequently I followed on with it until I had taken seven bottles, when I was pronounced a well man, and my skin is smooth and entirely free from pimples and eruptions. I have never enjoyed so good health before, and I attribute it all to the use of VEGETINE. To benefit those afflicted with Rheumatism, I will make mention also of the VEGETINE's wonderful power of curing me of this acute complaint, of which I have suffered so intensely.

C. H. TUCKER, Pas. Agt. Mich. C. R. R.,
69 Tyler Street, Boston.

HAS ENTIRELY CURED ME.

BOSTON, October, 1870.

Mr. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—My daughter, after having a severe attack of whooping cough, was left in a feeble state of health, being advised by a friend, she tried the VEGETINE, and, after using a few bottles, was fully restored to health.

I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism. I have taken several bottles of the VEGETINE for this complaint, and am happy to say it has entirely cured me. I have recommended the VEGETINE to others, with the same good results. It is a great cleanser and purifier of the blood; it is pleasant to take; and I can cheerfully recommend it.

JAMES MORSE, 364 Athens Street.

NO TROUBLE SINCE USING

VEGETINE.

CHARLESTOWN, October, 1870.

This certifies that my daughter has always been troubled with a humor, which has caused frequent swelling on her face and about her eyes. Physicians called it the Erysipelas; but after having taken two bottles of the VEGETINE, has not been troubled with it since.

SIMON ALDRICH, Charlestown, Mass.

DR. TUSEE says: "It is unnecessary for me to enumerate the diseases for which the VEGETINE should be used. I know of no disease which will not admit of its use with good results. Almost innumerable complaints are caused by poisonous secretions in the blood, which can be entirely expelled from the system by the use of the VEGETINE. When the blood is perfectly cleansed, the disease rapidly yields; all pains cease, healthy action is promptly restored, and the patient is cured."

The remarkable cures effected by VEGETINE have induced many physicians and apothecaries whom we know to prescribe and use it in their own families.

In fact, VEGETINE is the best remedy yet discovered, and is the only reliable BLOOD PURIFIER yet placed before the public. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers everywhere.

The COCOAINE holds, in a liquid form, a large proportion of deodorized COCOA-NUT OIL, prepared expressly for this purpose. No other compound possesses the peculiar properties which so exactly suit the various conditions of the human hair.

LOSS OF HAIR.

BOSTON, July 19.

MESSRS. JOSEPH BURNETT & CO.:

For many months my hair had been falling off, until I was fearful of losing it entirely. The skin upon my head became gradually more and more inflamed, so that I could not touch it without pain.

By the advice of my physician, to whom you had shown your process of purifying the Oil, I commenced its use the last week in June. The first application allayed the itching and irritation. In three or four days the redness and tenderness disappeared, the hair ceased to fall, and I have now a thick growth of new hair.

Yours, very truly, SUSAN R. EDDY.

A REMARKABLE CASE.

EAST MIDDLEBORO', MASS., June 9, 1864.

MESSRS. BURNETT & CO.:

When my daughter's hair came off she had been afflicted with neuralgia in her head for three years. She had used, during that time, many powerful applications. These, with the intense heat caused by the pain, burned her hair so badly that in October, 1861, it all came off, and for two years after her head was as smooth as her face.

Through the recommendation of a friend, she was induced to try your COCOAINE, and the result was astonishing. She had not used half the contents of a bottle before her head was covered with a fine young hair. In four months the hair has grown several inches in length, very thick, soft and fine, and of a darker color than formerly.

With respect, WM. S. EDDY.

Weekly World

ONE YEAR.

1. It contains all the news of the past seven days, collected by the agents and correspondents of the New York Daily World, and in fullness, accuracy and enterprise in this respect is unequaled.

2. Its agricultural department contains the latest news of farm experiments at home and abroad, contributions by home and foreign writers, full reports of the Farmers' Club of the American Institute, and quotations of valuable and interesting articles appearing in the agricultural weeklies and magazines.

3. Its Grange news, to which attention is specially called, is a feature which can be found in no other paper. All the resources at the command of a great metropolitan daily newspaper are employed in its collection, and the result is a page each week, where the members may find a complete record of the work of the order in every State in the Union for the past seven days. In addition to this weekly record, The World gives the cream of all the local grange papers in every State. This department is, and will continue to be, under the charge of one of the active members of the order.

4. For the fireside department, in addition to its other attractions, such as poetry, miscellany, humorous extracts, &c., during the coming year, there will be not less than one hundred short tales by the best writers of fiction in England and America.

5. The market reports, brought down to the hour of publication, are the best that can be made. Each market is reported by one whose special knowledge and training make him the best authority upon that subject in the United States. For accuracy and completeness, the market reports of The World are unrivaled.

"The World is not only the best but the cheapest newspaper ever offered the farmer."

A NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF THE MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS,

24 Quarto Pages,

Is now ready, with PRICE LIST, and very full information, presenting accurate drawings of these celebrated instruments, with detailed descriptions; including many new styles, with valuable improvements; new stops and elegant cases.

It is not questioned by disinterested judges that these are THE BEST OF ALL INSTRUMENTS OF THIS CLASS; unequaled, and, if judged critically, unapproached by others. Their fame is world-wide. They have ALWAYS obtained highest awards in American Industrial Expositions, and received FOUR FIRST MEDALS and DIPLOMA OF HONOR at the GREAT WORLD'S EXPOSITIONS in PARIS, 1867; VIENNA, 1873; and LINZ (Austria), 1875, being the only American organs which ever received any premium in competition with the best products of European makers. The best musicians in Europe and America pronounce them unequaled.

Prices as low as consistent with best workmanship and material, and lower than those commonly demanded for very inferior instruments. Organs sold for cash or time payments, or rented until rent pays for them.

Every one thinking of buying an organ should at least see this new catalogue. It will be sent free and postpaid. Address the MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN CO., 154 Tremont Street, BOSTON; 25 Union Square, NEW YORK; or 80 and 82 Adams Street, CHICAGO.

Remember the prize dance on the 24th inst. at Ensley's Hall.

Last week we had several old winter days. Little out door work was done.

The theater was good, and those who failed to attend missed a rich treat.

Hank Markel has returned to the city again and is with his father at the Central.

Garrett is to have a band. It seems to us that things are lively enough without a band.

We see by the Garrett "News" that the citizens there are making arrangements to purchase a fire engine.

The old jail building will hereafter be used as a calaboose. Be careful fellows how you get.

We received a pleasant call from Uncle Geo McMillen, of Corunna, last week.

The sheep trial, wherein A. Johnson was charged with killing the animal, brought several citizens from Corunna last week.

S. Maxwell, the shooting gallery man left for Butler last week, to give the boys there a chance to hit the "Bull Eye."

It was pay day at Garrett last Saturday. We have not learned of the number of deaths that took place on that day.

The Sheriff's horse took a notion.—Eaton took one too. The horse's was to run awy. Eaton came out a head—on his head, we mean—landing solid on the cold, cold ground.

Remember that we are prepared to print ball, party and wedding invitations in the handsomest style. A fine assortment of suitable stationery continually kept on hand.

The billiard match at Toledo, last week, between Shaw and Carter resulted in favor of the former. But then there is nothing surprising, about it, as everybody expected a like result.

A correspondent in the Waterloo "Press" don't speak very favorably of Perkins' lecture. We heard several of our citizens camplain of its being too vulgar to attract any attention from a "cizilived audience."

A gentleman was examining an umbrella and commenting upon its fine quality. "Yas," said a person present, "he fancies everything he sees." "And added a third party, "is inclined to seize everything he fancies.

She was brushing his hair and he enjoyed being fussed over amazingly. Rolling up his eyes he said: "My dear, why was Columbus when he landed in America like me now?" She couldn't tell him, and he explained: "Because he was tickled at being fussed over.

Those boys that are in the habit of coming in the COURIER office, and picking things up that are laying around loose had better stay out, you may get yourselves in trouble. No boys are allowed in the composing room of the office, we want it understood.

The boss restaurant is located over Davenport's drug store, conducted principally by Orrin Meese. If our citizens want a good dish dished up, this is the place to go. Everything looks clean and tidy and if Orrin don't know how to cook them no body does. 25 cents a dish.

We notice that the business men on Main street has but little on the outside of their doors for a sign, some of them have nothing at all. Seventh street is different. Just notice sometime how much more of a business appearance Seventh street presents than does Main street.

A Auburn lawyer employed a new boy the other day, and when the lad asked for instructions the attorney replied:

"Your instructions are to be taken in general. Keep the office clean borrow coal whenever you can, and under no circumstances must you ever lend my umbrella to a lawyer."

We don't uphold the saloon business in any way whatever, but as long as it is a licensed business all of us will have to put up with it—but we like to see it managed well and kept in a good manner. When a business of this kind is particially run to the taste of a young boy, customers must expect to be snubbed occasionally. We can expect to have a first-class saloon when Ed. Eldridge opens out, but until then we can expect nothing more than ordinary.

Lets Swear Off.

One day this week we overheard a conversation, between two of our young sports, and we will name them Tom and Dick. It was in regard to the old, old story of swearing off. They had just taken their "Janes" home from church, and the weather being pleasant sat down on a store box and conversed thusly:

"Well, Tom, I'm getting tired of this life, and it takes about all the money I can earn to keep peace with the boys. Let's swear off What'd you say?"

"I'm in for it," says Dick. "But what if we get treated. That don't cost anything you know."

"No, that's true."

"Well lets swear off treating, and when we can get it for nothing we'll take it in."

Tom was serious, no doubt, and after hesitating for a moment said:

"Oh, Dick, I only made that proposition for your sake, and for your girl who I expect to be my sister-in-law at no distant day."

"Is that all," says Dick. "Well, Tom as you take so much interest in me, here's my hand. We'll swear off."

"Good for you, Dick. Excuse my actions. It would bring tears to the eye of a brass button. We'll marry the girls now without a word and afterwards we can sing:

Mary, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly,
For Dick and I, have swore off from the blow;
And we'll stick to it till we die.

We would advise both of the boys to wait until the new year, as we can distinctly remember of them swearing off every new year for the last five.

Commissioner's Court.

We were too busy last week to get the proceedings and will only give a part, as some of it, at this late date, would not be much news to the reader.

Our Language.

Mr. Washington Moon has written a work on bad English. Some of the errors which he singles out are decidedly amusing. For example:

A furrier lamenting in an advertisement the tricks played on the public by unprincipled men in his own trade, "earnestly requests ladies to bring to him their skins, which he promises shall be converted into muffs and boas.

Another advertisement ran thus 'Two sisters want washing."

Here must have been a strange sight: "He rode to town and drove twelve cows on horseback."

A gentleman advertised for a horse, "For a lady of a dark color, a good trotter, a high stepper, having a long tail.

Better more amusing more instructive and more creditable is the following illustration of ambiguitics involved in accurate language. One gentlemen observed to another:

"I have a wife and six children living in New York, and I never saw one of them.

"Were you ever blind?"

"Of no," replied the other.

A further lapse of time and then the interrogator resumed the subject:

"Did I understand you to say that you had a wife and six children in New York, and you had never seen one of them?"

"Yes such is the fact.

Here followed a still-longer pause in the conversation when the interrogator fairly puzzled said:

"How can it be that you never saw one of them?"

"Why," was the answer "one of them was born after I left.

A Good Idea.

After reading one of our daily papers it matters little which we are sometimes tempted to cry out in dispair, dear, dear is the world so bad as this? Is there nothing but fraud and villainy and crime and shame in this naughty world of ours? Surely it is not safe to trust our next-door neighbor, and as for walking across the street such a course is fraught with serious danger. "The times are out of joint," etc.

If only we could have a record of the good deeds done, the pleasant things said, the helpful acts performed with all the wickedness and cruelty omitted from the catalogue, what a comfort it would be! Then we should read, instead of the long account of vice and selfishness, of all the good and beautiful things that are being done all the world over how people of limited means were trying to help each other; how men were plodding along doing their daily work bravely and without a murmur though the road was hard to bear for the sake of wife and children and those dependent upon their exertions; how women were unselfishly sacrificing themselves to make home happy and cheerful how many thrown upon the world were making a noble struggle to keep respectable and respected, with little help or encouragement; how everywhere kind words were being said and kind deeds done which never found their way into the public prints, and which the great world knew little or nothing about Now to read the daily journal is anything but a comforting operation. With all its record of crime and misery it leaves the reader in doubt whether this be really a Christian land and whether our Christian civilization about whish so many eloquent speeches are made and fine paragraphs written is anything to boast of. Supposing one of the newspapers should startle us some pleasant morning by a record of thd good and helpful things done in the world during a single day!

HARPER'S BAZAR.

ILLUSTRATED.

The Bazar is edited with a combination of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion— Boston Traviler.

The Bazar commends itself to every member of the household to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashon plates in endless variety to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful desings for embroidered slippers luxurious dressing gowns. But the reading-matter of the Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fireside enjoyment it affords.—N. Y. Evening Post.

In its way there is nothing like it. Fresh and trust-worthy as a fashion guide, its stories and essays, its poetry and squibs are all invigorating to the mind.—Chicago Evening Journal.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1875.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

There is much excitement at Mahoney City, Pa., over a horrible triple murder committed there last week. A party of masked men, at 2 o'clock in the morning, entered the house of Charles O'Donnell, seizing and binding him, and carrying him back of the house, where he was shot dead. A man named McAllister was also taken from his house and shot. A sister of McAllister was also murdered. No reason is given by the people in the neighborhood for their bloody deed.... Rev. John H. Vincent, the Corresponding Secretary of the Sunday-School Union, and of the Tract Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, publishes a card in the New York papers disavowing, in behalf of the Society, any interest in Bishop Haven's third-term sentiments.... An order has been received at Fall River, Mass., from Manchester, England, for 25,000 pieces of printing cloth. ....Wm. Delaney was hanged at New York, on Dec. 10, for the murder of Capt. Lawrence, of the steamer Joseph E. Potts, in August last.

Speir, the confidential clerk of a firm engaged in making bitters in New York, has "sweetened" his employers to the extent of $40,000.

Many people in New York adhere to the belief that Boss Tweed is secreted in the city. ....The failure of Freeland, Harding & Loomis, extensive wholesale clothing dealers of Boston, is reported. The liabilities are estimated at $750,000.

The cabinet-shops of the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine Company at Bridgeport, Ct. were destroyed by fire last week. The Fire Department were nearly powerless on account of an insufficient supply of water. Loss, $600,000; insurance, $300,000.

A deficiency of over $30,000 has been discovered in the college accounts of Daniel Blaisdell, the late treasurer of Dartmouth College, who died in August last.

Robert P. Nevin, publisher of the Pittsburgh Leader, and a member of the Presbyterian church, was recently summoned before the Presbytery of that city and notified that he must discontinue the publication of a Sunday edition of his paper or sever his connection with the church.

THE WEST.

In view of the fact that Gen. Babcock has been indicted by the St. Louis Grand Jury, the Military Court of Inquiry which met at Chicago last week to investigate the charges against him decided to postpone its investigation until either the trial by the Civil Court at St. Louis shall have been had, or the War Department shall instruct the military trial to proceed.... Minnesota is to have a State Inebriate Asylum, and the liquor-sellers will have to foot the bill, the Supreme Court having recently sustained the constitutionality of the law imposing a tax for this purpose.

Burrack and Reynolds, two of the indicted Milwaukee whisky ring, have been convicted. ....Various portions of Nebraska experienced a decided shock of earthquake on the morning of the 1st.... Hiram B. Snyder, a witness in the the Indianapolis whisky ring trials, testified, the other day, that in 1874 he "had a contract with John Bingham, who assured him that the ring was perfectly safe; that Babcock, the President's private secretary, was in with them, and so long as the present Administration continued they would be protected, but when a change is made, then look up and stand from under."

The schooner Cornelius B. Windiate, with a cargo of grain and a crew of ten men, sailed from Milwaukee for Buffalo on the 24th of November, since which time nothing has been heard of her. There is scarcely a doubt that the vessel and all on board have gone to the bottom of Lake Michigan.... An underground distillery for the manufacture of crooked whisky has been discovered near Pueblo, Colorado.... A stupendous land swindle has just been unearthed in Southeastern Missouri, the particulars of which we find in the St. Louis Times. It appears that deeds to lands in North Arkansas and Southeastern Missouri have been forged for some years past, and agencies for the work were established in Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York, and Manchester, England. It is estimated that deeds to over 12,000,000 acres of land have been forged and disposed of, the valuation being $25,000,000 or $30,000,000. The land operated upon is owned by non-residents, and as the records were mostly destroyed during the civil war, the ring had every facility to carry out the enormous swindle, and the deeds have been sold all over the United States and England. The Grand Jury of Shannon County, Mo., has indicted Dr. Thomas K. Herman, David D. Bingham, and James L. Lawton, for complicity. Lawton seems to be the executive man, and operated extensively in England.

Letters from Sioux City parties in the Black Hills state that there are at the present time more miners in the hills than at any previous time; that they are finding gold in larger quantities than ever before reported to exist there, and that the miners don't, under any circumstances, intend to leave the hills. Three men who strayed away from camp were waylaid and murdered by Indians recently.... At a convention of millers of the Northwest, held at Chicago last week, a resolution was unanimously adopted protesting earnestly against the recent advance of ten cents per barrel on flour rates, asserting it to be an unjust discrimination against flour and in favor of wheat, and asking the railroads to place the rates upon a fair and equal footing.

Brick Pomeroy is going to remove his Weekly Democrat from New York to Chicago ....Hill, a Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue, has been tried at Indianapolis and found guilty of conspiracy to defraud the Government.... During the past season of navigation there were 1,056 disasters to vessels on the Western lakes, and 85 vessels were totally lost, valued at $1,049,000. The total amount of property lost during the season, including vessels and cargoes, was $3,791,300, being $104,700 in excess of the losses of the preceding year.

THE SOUTH.

Careful estimates place the cotton crop of the South at over 4,000,000 bales.... Advices from the Texas border report no improvement in the condition of affairs on the Rio Grande. There is general lawlessness and discontent all along the frontier. On the lower Rio Grande the feeling between Americans and Mexicans is intensely bitter.

R. H. Mann has been appointed by John McEnery, the Democratic claimant of the Governorship of Louisiana, to succeed W. L. McMillan as United States Senator, in opposition to Pinchback.... F. T. Riddle, Democrat, has been elected to fill the vacancy in Congress from the Fourth Tennessee District.... John W. Johnston has been chosen to be his own successor in the United States Senate from Virginia.... A plea of guilty has been entered by a batch of Covington (Ky.) illicit distillers.

WASHINGTON.

The President made a very singular error in his annual message—one which is creating much unfavorable comment among the legal fraternity. He says in his message, that Congress should devise some better method of verifying claims against the Government than at present exist through the Court of Claims, especially those claims growing out of the late War, and that a very large percentage of the amounts passed and paid are either wholly fraudulent or are far in excess of the real losses sustained. The President then continues and refers to the awards made and claims pending for losses alleged to have been sustained on small farms. The blunder made by the President is this, that the subject-matter of which he treats, is outside of the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims, and the points which he makes have no application to that Court, which has nothing whatever to do with the class of cases alluded to. ....There is a good deal of indignation among Republican Senators and Representatives at ex-Senator Henderson's attack on the Administration, in his speech in the Avery trial at St. Louis, and much satisfaction is felt at his dismissal. Samuel Glover, of St. Louis, succeeds Mr. Henderson as Assistant District Attorney.

President Grant, it is announced, will shortly send to Congress a supplemental message on the subject of the Cuban question. The President is said to be opposed to the recognition either of Cuban independence or belligerency, and to take the ground that annexation is not to be thought of. He is believed to favor the establishment of a semi-independent colonial Government, similar to that of Canada, for Cuba and the remainder of Spain's West India possessions.... The officials at the Postoffice Department have spent much study and labor on the question of the rates of postage, and have made calculations which show just where the loss to the Government occurs. They find that the loss on second-class matter, which consists of newspapers, magazines, and periodicals, is $6,993,023.91, and the loss per pound is about 12½ cents, being at the rate of 4½ cents for each piece of mail matter, which includes books, pamphlets, engravings; and the loss on all miscellaneous matter is $4,113,915.53, or about 9 cents a pound.

Dr. Linderman, Director of the Mint, has decided that, if it is desired to establish another Mint solely to coin silver, Indianapolis is the best location, but if to coin both gold and silver, St. Louis has the best facilities of any Western city. There will be a lively squabble over the location of the new Mint, as Chicago wants it bad, and will fight hard for it.... John D. Young, an ex-M. C. from Kentucky, has been appointed a messenger of the House.

The report of Attorney-General Pierrepont has just been laid before Congress. He urges that District-Attorneys be paid by salaries only, to be graded according to place, giving the appointment of Assistant District-Attorneys to the Attorney-General; that a uniform mode of selecting jurors for United States Courts be provided by law; that a law be passed forbidding the payment of Deputy-Marshals by certificate or due-bills, and the advance of any money to Marshals whose accounts are unadjusted at the Treasury over six months. He refers to the case of Brigham Young, and asks further legislation. The labors of the Supreme Court and Court of Claims are alluded to, and it is suggested that such legislation be had as will enable the latter Court, aided by the Attorney-General, to increase the safeguards against improper testimony by devising a mode of taking it, and to force old cases to early trial or require them to be dismissed without power of restoration.

The following is the anti-subsidy resolution introduced in the House by Mr. Holman, of Indiana, and adopted by a vote of 223 yeas to 33 nays:

> Resolved, That, in the judgment of this House, in the present financial condition of the Government no subsidies in money, bonds, public lands, indorsements, or by pledge of public credit, should be granted to associations or corporations engaged, or proposing to engage, in public or private enterprise, and that all appropriations from the Public Treasury ought to be limited at this time to such amounts only as shall be imperatively demanded by the public service.

Those voting in the negative are nearly all Southern members, as follows: Cabell, Darrall, Douglas, Dunnell, Goode, Hancock, Harris (Va.), House, Hunton, Hyman, Jones (Ky.), Kelley, Lamar, Mills, Morey, O'Neill, Parsons, Reagan, Reilly, Slemons, Smalls, Strait, Stone, Ferry, Throckmorton, Tucker, Vance (N. C.), Wallace (Pa.), Wells (Mo.), Wells (Miss.), White, Yates, Young—33.... George L. Bangs, Superintendent of the Railway Postal Service, has resigned.

GENERAL.

The Agricultural Report for November and December says that the November returns indicate that the corn crop of 1875 was one of the largest ever grown in this country, probably equaling the very large crops of 1870 and 1872. It is at least one-fourth greater than the crop of 1872, and about one-third larger than the crop of 1869. Every section of the Union reports some increase. The potato crop is extraordinary in both product and quality.

A ghastly and horrible relic of the days of the Inquisition has been brought to light in Lima, Peru. Four or five thousand skeletons were found in a solid mass by workmen engaged in repairing a hospital. The bodies had apparently been thrown, in common apparel—many remains of which are still undecayed—into an opening, between two walls, and the closing of the gap has left the frightful secret undiscovered for probably two hundred years.

The General Minutes of the Methodist Episcopal Church for the United States show, for the fiscal year just closed, as follows: Total value of church property in the United States, $31,034,262; benevolent collections for the year, $875,193; number of traveling preachers, 10,923; local preachers, 12,881; total membership, including probationers and clergy, 1,604,363.

Ex-Senator James W. Nye, of Nevada, who has been for some months an inmate of a private insane asylum near New York city, has so far recovered his mental faculties as to be returned to the care of his relatives.

The Secretary of War has dissolved the Court of Inquiry recently convened at Chicago to investigate the charges against Gen. Babcock.... The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers held their annual convention at Indianapolis last week, about sixty delegates being in attendance.

The fourth meeting of the American Board of Transportation was held in Chicago last week. There was a large attendance of delegates from all parts of the country and Canada. Senior Vice-President J. F. Henry, of New York, presided in the absence of Hon. Josiah Quincy, President. Comptroller Hayes, of Chicago, delivered the welcoming address. A number of interesting papers treating of the transportation problem were read. The Railroad Committee submitted a long report, closing with the following recommendations:

> There are certain general laws which are practicable, and which every State should enact for the regulation of railroads which are exclusively within its borders.
>
> Under this head we may embrace the following:
>
> 1. A law providing a Board of Railway Commissioners, with power to prescribe a uniform system of keeping railway accounts, and with other powers and duties similar to those possessed by the Railway Commissioners of Massachusetts.
>
> 2. A law to prevent stock inflations similar to the one now in operation in Massachusetts.
>
> 3. A law prohibiting officers or Directors of railways from either directly or indirectly owning or becoming interested in any non-co-operative fast-freight line, car company, or bridge company, or from being interested in any manner in the furnishing of supplies to any company with which they have official connection.
>
> 4. A law prohibiting railway companies from acquiring or holding more real estate than is necessary for the operation of their roads, and prohibiting railway companies, or officers of companies, from engaging in mining or any business other than that of transportation.
>
> 5. A law providing that all common carriers shall receipt for quantity, whether it be of grain or other commodities, and to deliver the same at its destination.
>
> 6. A law making it a penal offense for any public official to accept or use the free pass of any railway company, and prohibiting railway companies from granting such passes to any but regular employes of such railways.
>
> 7. A law prohibiting representatives of the people, who belong to the legal profession from being retained on either side in cases where the public interest is involved.

The convention adopted two important recommendations—the extension of the Illinois and Michigan Canal from Hennepin, its present terminus, to the Mississippi River, and the construction of a ship canal from Lake Ontario to the Hudson River.

POLITICAL.

The Hon. Mark Bangs, of Lacon, Ill., has been appointed to succeed Mr. Ward, as United States District-Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois.... It is stated that only three Democratic Senators voted for the confirmation of Chandler as Secretary of the Interior.

Samuel T. Glover having declined to take charge of the whisky ring prosecutions at St. Louis, Hon. James O. Brodhead, a prominent Democrat of that city, has accepted the position.... A Washington dispatch says that since the Republican employes of the House have been compelled to surrender their places to Democrats, the Democratic clerks in the Departments will be compelled to vacate their places to make room for the discharged employes of the House.... There will be a meeting of the Republican National Committee in Washington on the 18th of next month, when a day will be fixed for the assembling of the National Convention.

Judge Birney, of Bay City, Mich., has been appointed Minister to the Hague.... The Clerk of the House of Representatives, at Washington, has appointed his uncle, Green Adams, of Kentucky, Chief Clerk, in place of Clinton Lloyd. Adams was a member of the Thirty-sixth Congress, and afterward Sixth Auditor of the Treasury.... The message which the President will shortly send to Congress on Southern affairs will relate for the greater part to the late troubles in Mississippi and the mode of conducting the elections in that State, the information having been gathered by persons designated for that purpose.... The St. Louis Westliche Post (Carl Schurz's paper) nominates Henderson for President.

Mayor Cobb, of Boston, has been re-elected by a majority of 3,000.... A State Convention of Texas Republicans will be held at Houston on the 12th of January. The Democratic State Convention meets at Galveston on the 5th.... The Washington Evening Star considers it certain that the next Republican National Convention will be held at Chicago.

The following is the full text of the resolutions introduced in the Senate by Mr. Morton, defining the political obligations of the States under the Constitution;

> Resolved, By the Senate, the House of Representatives concurring, that the people of the United States constitute a nation, and are one people in the sense of national unity.
>
> Resolved, That the Government of the United States is not a compact between the States in their municipal and corporate characters, but was formed by the people of the United States in their primary capacity; that the rights of the States are defined and guaranteed by the Constitution, and not by any outside theory of State sovereignty, and that the rights of the States cannot be enlarged or diminished, except by an amendment to the Constitution.
>
> Resolved, That the rights of the States have the same sanction and security in the Constitution as the rights and power of the National Government, and the local domestic government by the States, within the limits of the Constitution, is an essential of our free Republican system.
>
> Resolved, That the doctrine that a State has the right to secede from the Union is inconsistent with the idea of nationality; is in conflict with the spirit and structure of the Constitution, and should be regarded as having been forever extinguished by the suppression of the rebellion.

The anti-third-term resolution introduced in the lower House of Congress, by Mr. Springer, of Illinois, and passed by a vote of 232 to 18, reads as follows:

> Resolved, That, in the opinion of this House, the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States in retiring from the Presidential office after their second term has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our Republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored system would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions.

Those voting in the negative were: Bradley, Denison, Haralson, Hoge, Hubbell, Hyman, Lynch, MacDougall, Nash, Page, Plaisted, Pratt, Smalls, Wallace (S. C.), Walls, Wells, (Miss.), White, Whiting—18.

FOREIGN.

There were 114 passengers on the ill-fated steamship Deutschland, fifty-six of whom were saved and fifty-eight are missing, as also are a portion of the vessel's crew.... The three Northern powers of Europe have agreed upon the reforms to be instituted in the Turkish provinces. They contemplate perfect equality between Christians and Turks.

A singular and frightfully destructive accident is reported by cable from Bremen, Germany. The steamship Mosel was on the point of sailing for America, when an explosion occurred on the crowded wharf, killing and wounding a large number of people. For some time the stunned and bewildered people were unable to form any idea of the exact nature, or even of the locality of the disaster. It was soon ascertained, however, that the immediate agent in the calamity was a package of dynamite, the most powerful known explosive, which a passenger had placed in his baggage. Sixty-eight persons were killed and 35 wounded. ....The weather in Spain is described as unusually severe, and several Carlist soldiers have been frozen to death. The total Carlist forces in the field are estimated at 52,000 men, with 105 guns.... The Havana papers are very bombastic in their comments on Grant's message. The Voz de Cuba relieves itself thus: "Gen. Grant's language seems to have been chosen to wound the susceptibilities of the Spaniards. He seems to like playing with fire. He does not know the temperament of the Spaniards any more than Napoleon did." The Diario, at the conclusion of two columns and a half of criticism, says: "We believe Gen. Grant has disgusted the insurgents, and has wounded Spanish pride in his unfounded assertions."

It is announced that the Sultan of Turkey will make an extraordinary levy of 100,000 men in the spring for the suppression of the insurrection in Herzegovina. Egypt will send him in addition 22,000, and Tunis 8,000.

The passenger who placed the dynamite in his baggage that caused the explosion at Bremen has made a confession. He says it was his intention to blow up the steamer Mosel for the sake of an insurance which he had. He implicates others in the plot.... It turns out that the vaunted victories of the Turks on the Bosnian frontier were positive defeats. There is great demoralization among the Turkish troops, who throw away their arms and ammunition in flight.

The British troops have been severely defeated by the Malayans, near Perak, India.

According to Bremen dispatches, Thomas, the passenger on the Mosel and the owner of the case of dynamite which caused the terrible disaster at Bremerhaven, confessed his guilt before dying, saying that he had accomplices at New York. The motive for this diabolical scheme appears to have been to procure an exaggerated and fictitious insurance, and to share afterward with the others. From what is known, the barrel prepared for this shameful work was made strongly by a Bremen cooper, and partitioned, one part containing the dynamite, and the other apparatus for exploding it. He intended to place his hellish machine on the Deutschland; but it was not in time. Thomas is a native of New Orleans, and during the rebellion was engaged in blockade-running in Virginia, by which he got rich. Financial reverses, however, had crazed him. The total number of victims by the explosion is 140 killed and wounded.... Another terrible fire damp explosion in a Belgian colliery is reported. Over 100 miners were killed.

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

Friday, Dec. 10.—Senate.—Not in session.

House.—The House was in session but a short time.... On motion of Hopkins it was voted that so much of the President's message as relates to the Centennial be referred to a select committee of 13. ....McDougall introduced a bill repealing the law increasing the postage on third-class matter.... Adjourned till Tuesday, 14th.

Monday, Dec. 13.—Senate—Howe presented a memorial of citizens of Wisconsin for the repeal of the law increasing postage on merchandise.... Frelinghuysen introduced a bill regulating the transportation of animals by rail and water.... Davis submitted a resolution citing the law requiring reports to be made to Congress annually of persons indebted to the Government, the list of defaulters, the amount of the defalcations, etc., and calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury to inform the Senate why such reports have not been made. After some discussion the resolution was laid over.... Mitchell introduced a bill attaching Alaska Territory to Washington Territory.... Ingalls introduced a bill providing that no National Banking Association shall be organized with less capital than $50,000; also, a bill to extend the time for filing claims for additional bounty under the act of July 28, 1866.

House.—Not in session.

Tuesday, December 14.—Senate.—A large number of petitions for the appointment of a commission to inquire into the traffic in alcoholic liquors, were presented by several Senators; all of which were referred to the Committee on Finance. ....A bill was passed extending for six months the duration of the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims ....Allison introduced a bill to transfer the Indian trust funds to the Treasury of the United States ....After a long debate the Senate agreed—30 to 28—to the motion of West to allow McMillan to withdraw his credentials as Senator from Louisiana—Dawes being the only Republican voting with the Democrats against the motion.

House.—Fort introduced a resolution expressing the judgment of the House that, in the matter of subordinate appointments, men who had served in the Union army and received wounds, should have the preference, and upon this demanded the previous question. Cox offered an amendment, expressing the view that, as the country was now united, all citizens were entitled to an equal privilege. He moved that this amendment and the original resolution be referred to a committee, which was carried by a vote of 168 to 101.... Buckner introduced a resolution calling on the President for all correspondence relating to the [illegible] Laid over for one day.... Randall offered a resolution directing Secretary Bristow to transmit to the House copies of all letters, telegrams, orders and instructions relating to the organization and prosecution of the present movement against the whisky ring at St. Louis, Chicago and Milwaukee. Laid over for one day under the rules.... A large number of new bills were introduced, including the following: By Blaine, proposing an amendment to the Constitution, providing that no State shall make any law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and that no money raised by taxation in any State for the support of the public schools, or derived from any public fund thereof, or any public lands devoted thereto, shall ever be under the control of any religious sect, and that no money or lands so donated shall be divided among religious sects or denominations; by Davis (N. C.), to repeal the act forbidding the payment of the accounts, claims, and demands of Southern citizens for Quartermasters' stores, etc., and appropriating $500,000 to pay for the same; by Whitthorne, to modify the tax on tobacco; by Landers, relative to the repeal of the Resumption act of Jan. 14, 1875; by Baker, relating to the mileage of members of Congress; by Harrison (Ill.), to amend the Constitution by fixing one term for the President, making him ineligible for future election, but making him Senator for life from the United States at large at the expiration of his office as President; by Morrison, to amend the Constitution by fixing the Presidential term at six years, and making the President ineligible to any term of twelve years; by Randall, proposing an amendment to the Constitution, providing that after the next Presidential election the President of the United States shall hold his office for six years, and that neither the President, nor Vice-President, when the office devolves upon him, shall be eligible to re-election; by Baker, against subsidies and grants of land to railroads; by Kasson, to amend the law respecting third-class mail matter; by Holman, to repeal the act for the resumption of specie payments; by Eames, to reduce postage by providing that after the 1st of March, 1876, postage shall be charged on domestic mailable matter of the first class, embracing all correspondence wholly or in part in writing, except books, manuscript, and corrected proof sheets passing between authors and publishers, and including home or drop letters, at a uniform rate of one cent for each half ounce or fraction thereof; by Wells, to establish a mint at St. Louis; by Sparks, authorizing the payment of import duties in legal-tenders; by Crittenden, to fund United States legal-tender notes, and to prepare the way for the resumption of specie payments as soon as practicable; by Bright, a bill to restore the franking privilege for the Congressional Record and public documents; by Cameron, to enable the people of Utah to form a Constitution and State Government, and to admit Utah into the Union as a State; by Steele (Wyoming), for the election of Governors and Territorial officers by the people.

Wednesday, Dec. 15.—Senate.—Morton submitted a preamble and resolution declaring that it had been alleged that fraud prevailed in Mississippi during the late election in that State, and providing for a committee of five Senators to go there and investigate the matter. Laid over.... Morton also submitted his resolutions defining the status and rights of the States of the Union, and gave notice that at some future time he would call them up for action.... A large number of nominations were confirmed by the Senate in executive session.

House.—Hale (Me.) offered a resolution to the effect that, in the judgment of the House, "prompt legislative measures should be taken to render the specie-resumption act of Jan. 14, 1875, effective by placing in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury whatever powers may be necessary to that end," and demanded the yeas and nays on the question. The House refused—75 to 145—to second the previous question. The resolution, on motion of Holman, was then referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.... Bills were introduced as follows: By Starkweather, to amend the law relating to postage on mailable matter of the third class; by Randall, to remove all political disabilities—this is a kind of general amnesty bill; by Walker, to consolidate the bonded debt of the United States, and reduce the interest thereon; by Rainey, to abolish the House Committee on Freedmen's Affairs—unanimously adopted; by Cook, to refund the cotton tax collected between 1863 and 1868, and to authorize the payment for all cotton seized by the United States after May 29, 1865; by Banning, to establish a branch mint at Cincinnati; by Lawrence, a resolution declaring it "the sense of the House that a policy of finance shall be steadily pursued which, without unnecessary shock to business, will ultimately equalize the purchasing power of the gold and paper dollar"—referred to the Banking and Currency Committee; by Holman, a strong anti-subsidy resolution, which was adopted by a vote of 223 to 33; by Springer (Ill.), a resolution declaring against a third Presidential term—adopted, 232 to 18; by Caulfield, a bill providing that the heads of the Executive Departments shall occupy seats on the floor of the House; also, a resolution to amend the Constitution so that no person shall be eligible for the Presidency of the United States for more than a single term; by Anderson, a resolution instructing the Committee on Banking and Currency to report a bill repealing the National Banking law, and substituting for National Bank currency national paper money issued directly from the Treasury, made a legal tender for all debts, public or private, including duties on imports, and to be interchangeable for registered bonds, bearing 3.65 per cent. interest—referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency; by Buckner, reducing the salary of the President of the United States after March 4.... Adjourned till Friday, 17th.

Thursday, Dec. 16.—Senate.—A resolution, instructing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to investigate whether the election of Senator Spencer was fraudulent or effected by corruption, was adopted.... Bills introduced: By Howe, to provide for the appointment of a committee on the subject of the alcoholic liquor traffic; by Withers, to aid the Washington and Cincinnati and St. Louis Railroad to construct a narrow-gauge railroad from tide-water to St. Louis and Cincinnati.... The Senate debated for two hours Morton's resolution to investigate the Mississippi election, without coming to a vote.

House.—Not in session.

Eccentric James Lick.

The new deed of trust of the venerable and variable Mr. James Lick, of San Francisco, was recorded, a few days ago, and people are beginning to believe that the old gentleman will really stick this time. The Lick family, exclusive of John Lick, who gets $150,000, are to receive $24,000, which they think a very contemptible sum, as long as Mr. Lick gives $700,000 for an observatory for the University of California. To the dead Licks he gives nearly as much as to the living members of the family, $20,000 being assigned for monuments over their graves. To establish free baths in San Francisco he gives $150,000, and for the erection of a monument in bronze for Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star Spangled Banner," $60,000. The gifts amount in value to $1,500,000, a large sum being given to charitable societies.

The singing of Christmas carols is almost coeval with the establishment of Christianity. In the early ages of the Christian Church, the Bishops were in the habit of singing carols with their clergy. The word carol, derived from cantare, to sing, and rola, a word expressive of great joy, which, though at first only applying to solemn ecclesiastical hymns, has, in the course of many centuries, been brought to comprise a variety of secular chants connected with Christmas. Carol singing undoubtedly had its origin in the gloria in excelsis of the angels in announcing the birth of Christ to the shepherds.

REMARKABLE DUEL.

An Incident of the Late War.

A writer in the Chicago Tribune says: On the 12th of June, 1863, I witnessed a duel between a Capt. Jones, commanding a Federal scout, and a Capt. Fry, commanding a Rebel scout, in Greene County, East Tennessee.

These two men had been fighting each other for six months, with the fortunes of battle in the favor of one and then the other. Their commands were camped on either side of Lick Creek, a large and sluggish stream, too deep to ford and too shallow for a ferry-boat; but there a bridge spanned the stream for the convenience of the traveling public. Each of them guarded the bridge, that communications should go neither North or South, as the railroad track had been broken up months before.

After fighting each other for several months, and contesting the point as to which should hold this bridge, they agreed to fight a duel, the conqueror to hold the bridge undisputed for the time being.

Jones gave the challenge and Fry accepted. The terms were, that they should fight with navy-pistols at twenty yards apart, deliberately walking toward each other, and firing until the last chamber of their pistols was discharged, unless one or the other fell before all the discharges were made.

They chose their seconds, and agreed upon a rebel surgeon (as he was the only one in either command) to attend them in case of danger.

The ground was stepped off by the seconds, pistols loaded and exchanged, and the principals brought face to face. I never shall forget that meeting. Jones, in his military, boyish mood, as they shook hands, remarked that—

> A soldier braves death for a fanciful wreath,
> When in glory's romantic career.

Fry caught up the rest of the sentence, and answered by saying:

> Yet he bends o'er the foe when in battle laid low,
> And bathes every wound with a tear.

They turned around and walked back to the point designated. Jones' second had the word "Fire;" and, as he slowly said, "One—two—three—fire!" they simultaneously turned at the word, "One," and instantly fired. Neither was hurt. They cocked their pistols, and deliberately walked towards each other, firing as they went. At the fifth shot, Jones threw up his right hand, and, firing his pistol in the air, sank down. Fry was in the act of firing his last shot; but, seeing Jones fall, silently lowered his pistol, dropped it to the ground, and sprang up to Jones' side, taking his head into his lap as he sat down, and asking him if he was hurt.

I discovered that Jones was shot through the region of the stomach, the bullet glancing around that organ, and coming out to the left of the spinal column; besides, he had received three other frightful flesh-wounds in other portions of his body. I dressed his wounds and gave him such stimulants as I had. He afterwards got well.

Fry received three wounds—one breaking his left arm, one in the left and the other in the right side. After months of suffering, he got well. Neither of them asked for a discharge, but both resumed their respective commands when they got well, and fought the war out to the bitter end, and to-day are partners in a wholesale grocery business down South, doing a good business, and verifying the sentiment of Byron that "A soldier braves death," etc., etc.

The Flight of Tweed.

Wm. M. Tweed escaped from custody Saturday afternoon. No clue has been found to his whereabouts, and his recapture is not to be expected. It is possible, but not probable. Really a felon, he was in jail, technically, for debt, and consequently he had only to get beyond the State line to be safe, so far as concerns any pending legal process against him. New Jersey is only across the river, and Connecticut is almost as near.

It is now four years and something more since the war on Tammany in general and Tweed in particular began.

Tweed stands charged with defrauding the city of New York out of $6,000,000. By a technicality, construed in his favor by the Court of Appeals, he was released from Blackwell's Island, where he was a prisoner in the fullest sense of the term, but he was held under a civil process and lodged in Ludlow Street Jail in default of bail to the amount of $3,000,000. It is customary to allow prisoners for debt special privileges. Tweed shared in these favors, being allowed to ride out, dine out, and go home occasionally, accompanied always by two officers. In ordinary cases, such treatment is safe and proper, but Tweed's case was exceptional. The Penitentiary stared him in the face, and his keepers should have known, and doubtless did, that no prisoner, except one confronted by the gallows, could have greater incentives to escape. Tweed is an old man, and unless he had got off while in Ludlow Street Jail he would have spent the rest of his day within prison walls. The reasonable presumption is that he bribed his keepers to connive at his escape.—Chicago Journal.

The Magic Day of the Year.

A correspondent says: "New Year's Day is the term fixed for the fulfillment of all aspirations, the satisfaction of all longings. In this region, where it brings profits so impatiently expected, so consecrated is this period to what is called le commerce Parisien, that politicians forego their struggles and Discord ceases to shake its serpents over the heads of the Deputies, who, by way of discussing the welfare of France, address insults and launch invectives against each other. New Years' Day is, in this country, the magic ring which relaxes the spine of ushers, which renders porters amiable, which puts honey on the tongues of Government officials, and places on the sullen lips of unappreciated women a perpetual smile which almost makes them handsome. The mania for spending at the approach of this giddy-day seizes on the entire nation; gold and silver coins impatiently wriggle in the purses of gentlemen who have social obligations to discharge or attentions to render; and it is at this season of forced purchases and inevitable disbursements that the shopkeepers get rid of their unfashionable articles and clear off the old goods which bear the ornithological name of rossignols or nightingales."

The floor of Mr. Ellis' residence at Luverne, Rock County, Minn., suddenly gave way, precipitating several persons into the cellar. In the descent Mr John Ryan received the contents of a kettle of boiling water on his lower limbs, literally cooking them from the knees down.

A High Old Passenger Conductor.

A few days ago a freight conductor on one of the railroads went to the Superintendent and said he thought he ought to be advanced, having served on the freight for several years. The Superintendent agreed with him, and told him that the change should be made the very next week. And it was made. The Superintendent a day or two after took a seat in the rear end of one of the coaches to see how the new conductor would take to business, and pretty soon the official danced into the door, cap on his ear, sleeves pushed up, and a half-acre smile on his face.

"Get out your pasteboards!" he shouted, "I'm the high muncky muck that runs this train," and then turning right and left, he continued:

"Right bowers this way—play lively—pass or order up—how's trumps with you—slide you right into Chicago—hurry up, there—trump this ace—what kind of a hand do you hold, old man?"

There was something novel and exhilarating in his style, but yet the Superintendent called the conductor up stairs the next day and told him that he was the best man in America to run a freight train, and that he should have to promote him backward. He was too talented for a passenger conductor.—Detroit Free Press.

The Troubles of Liberia.

The Philadelphia Ledger gives the following explanation of the origin of the difficulties in Liberia, basing its statement on the authority of those well-informed in Liberia affairs: "The President, or late President, of Liberia, being in London, was induced to make an agreement with an English company, whereby that company should have a monopoly of the Liberian trade; the agreement so made was opposed by the Liberians, and a ratification of it was emphatically rejected by the Legislature; thereupon the agents of the company began intriguing with natives on the borders of the Republic, and claimed a right of traffic and transit through the territory of Liberia independently of any regulation by the Government; and this being resisted, the agents of the company stimulated and encouraged the natives to make plundering and murderous forays on the Liberian people and territory."

A large investment in the bonds of the Suez Canal Company by Great Britain is interpreted by the London Times to mean a preparation for important political changes in the East, with the possible collapse of the Turkish Empire. In the event of such change, Great Britain will have a commanding interest in that part of the Sultan's dominions, as the Times says, in which Great Britain is most nearly concerned. The purchase of these bonds, with the intimation that there may be still further investments, signifies that there is no great unwillingness to adopt a new Eastern policy, and allow a rotten Empire, kept together solely by the Great Powers, to drop to pieces. England proposes to make good her share in the fragments, which are important for their relations to her East Indian possessions, by actual purchase.

Moody seems to be badly needed at home. Here is a picture of the Chicago of to-day, painted by the leading Chicago newspaper: "The gamblers, bunko men, and thieves are allowed the absolute freedom of the city. They literally swarm in our public thoroughfares, even blockading up the sidewalks. They carry their pistols openly. Their gambling hells and dens are kept in full operation, not only in the night-time, but also in broad daylight. They insult, swindle, rob, assault and kill people with impunity. They hold the business section of the city in absolute terrorism, and there is no redress for it."

Leaves of the pineapple, now being extensively cultivated in the East Indies, are turned to account by being converted into a kind of wadding which is used for upholstering instead of hair. A sort of flannel is also manufactured from them, from which substantial waistcoats and shirts can be made.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Around the Farm.

A WESTERN farmer says that he discovered many years ago that wood could be made to last longer than iron in the ground. Time and weather, he says, seem to have no effect on it. Posts can be prepared for less than two cents apiece. This is the recipe: Take boiled linseed oil and stir it in pulverized charcoal to the consistency of paint. Put a coat of this over the timber, and, he adds, there is not a man that will live to see it rot.

WASH FOR HOUSES.—Pour boiling water on stone lime, and cover it close. When slaked, press twelve quarts of it through a fine sieve—add to this two quarts of fine salt and two gallons of water. Boil and skim it, and add to every ten gallons two pounds of alum and one pound of copperas. Gradually add one pound and a half of potash and two gallons of fine sand or hardwood ashes sifted. Add the coloring preferred; put it on with a brush. It is as pretty as paint, and very durable.—Prairie Farmer.

THE HEN ROOST.—We had lost several of our choicest fowls, and been kept awake many nights—making flying visits to and from the poultry yard, but still the nuisance did not abate. The owls would sail down, seize their prey, and then mock at us with their taunting "To-hoo!" as they alighted in some neighboring tree to devour their feast. A friend has since come to our relief, and told us to hang up some white sheets about the yard; we did so. The next night the owls came as usual, skirmished around a little, sounded their clarion call, and departed to parts unknown, and have not disturbed us since.—Ohio Farmer.

CONFINING POULTRY.—If we wish to confine our hens, so as to protect the garden and crops, we must necessarily take much more pains than when we allow them to run at large. To confine hens, and have them to do as well as when allowed to run at large, we must observe the following rules: 1. Feed regularly, at least twice a day; not too much, but just enough to satisfy their appetites. 2. Keep pure water before them all the time. 3. Keep plenty of gravel and sand before them. 4. Provide for them a good, warm roosting house, and always keep it free from dirt and vermin. 5. Keep at least half of their park in grass, and plow the remainder occasionally, so as to allow them plenty of wallowing places.—Cor. Country Gentleman.

HOW MUCH TO FATTEN AN ANIMAL.—A farmer made an experiment. He took a sheep that weighed about one hundred pounds, put it in a pen, and after it had become wonted, weighed all its food and found that three pounds per day of fodder and grain was all he could eat. The farmer had verified a rule well known to the much-despised "book-farmers," and arrived at by many and careful experiments, that about three pounds of good food per day for each one hundred weight of live stock is a fattening allowance. For illustration, a sheep weighing one hundred pounds requires three pounds of food per day, and a steer weighing one thousand needs thirty pounds. These rules are approximately correct, being varied somewhat by quality of food and stock. The farmer, knowing the weight of his feed and that of his stock, by applying these rules, can guess closely as to whether he has food enough for his stock—Maryland Ploughman.

HEALTH OF FARMERS.—The Massachusetts Board of Health is out with its fourth annual report, in which is to be found an interesting paper on the longevity of the farmers. It says the evidence collected from the country physicians throughout the State for the last twenty-eight years, shows that the average length of the life of a farmer in that State is 55½ years. This is much longer than that of any other class of citizens. The class most nearly approaching farmers, viz: out-door mechanics, live 52½ years on an average. The almost unanimous belief of those physicians and the compiler of the paper is, that farmers might live much longer than they do, by exercising more care in choosing, cooking and eating their food, in avoiding over-work and exposure to change of weather, and the use of foul drinking water. Their food consists too much of pork, pies and saleratus bread and cakes. The cookery is bad, and meals are eaten too quickly for good digestion, when work hurries. More vegetables and fruit should be eaten, and more rest taken. More cleanliness as regards out-houses, and more care to avoid leaving cess-pools, sinks, etc., nearer to a well than thirty feet at least.

About the House.

WHEN boils make their appearance, take a teaspoonful of soda in a glass of milk every morning and evening.

TO CLEANSE articles from tar, rosin, or any compounds of a resinous character, the use of flaxseed meal, moistened with water, is recommended.

GERMAN TOAST.—To one egg beaten well, and one cup of sweet milk or cream; season with a little salt and pepper. Cut stale bread in slices, dip in the milk to moisten, and fry in butter, on a griddle. This is a nice dish for breakfast.

A NICE GINGERBREAD.—One quart of New Orleans molasses, one quart of thick milk, two eggs, half pound of butter, one ounce of saleratus, two pounds of flour, plenty of ginger. Mix all together in one soft batter, put in pans. Oven not too hot. Soon baked.

WHEN it is not convenient to take a lock apart to fit a new key, the key blank should be smoked over a candle, inserted in the key-hole, and pressed firmly against the opposing wards of the lock. The indentations in the smoked part made by the wards will show where to file.

AUNT MARY'S PUDDING.—Butter a tart-dish, sprinkle the bottom with finely-minced candied peel and a very little shred suet, then a thin layer of light bread, and so on until the dish is full. For a pint dish make a liquid custard of one egg and half a pint of milk, sweeten, pour over the pudding, and bake as slowly as possible for two hours.

PUREE of potatoes differs from mashed potatoes only in the employment of more milk and butter, and in the whole being carefully reduced to a perfectly smooth, thick, cream-like mixture. When economy is a great object, and where rich dishes are not desired, the following is an admirable mode of mashing potatoes: Boil them till thoroughly done, having added a handful of salt to the water, then dry them well, and with two forks placed back to back, beat the whole up till no lumps are left. If done rapidly, potatoes thus cooked are extremely light and digestible.

A Hand-Car Trip.

The Fargo (D. T.) Times has this extraordinary story: "On Tuesday last L. J. Rusk, of La Crosse, Wis.; Father Genin, Catholic Missionary along the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad; Charles A. Morris, of La Crosse; H. Sprague, of Standing Rock, and H. Dodge, of Bismarck, wished to go east from Bismarck. The stage had left on Monday, and would not go again for a week, which would delay them too long to meet engagements in the States. They thought of a hand-car, and then shudderingly considered the job of pumping 200 miles. They finally concluded it could and must be done, and, after getting permission to take the car, they bade adieu to the good people of Bismarck and started on their journey, with full stomachs and light hearts, happy with the thought that in three days they would bring up at Headquarters Hotel, at Fargo, a distance of 200 miles, where they could rest a day before seating themselves in the comfortable coaches of the Northern Pacific, and be whirled along their journey. After being out a few hours and getting pretty tired, an idea suggested itself which proved a blessing during the rest of the journey. Mr. Rusk had an 'A' tent, and with it they made a sail, which relieved them from the hard work of 'pumping,' and gave them leisure to view the objects of interest along the route. Old Boreas proved to have a better supply of wind than they did themselves, and they bowled along at a speed that sometimes made their hair stand on end, making the distance from Bismarck to Fargo in seventeen and a half hours—an average of nearly twelve miles an hour. Mr. Walker, the operator here, informed the operator at Bismarck of the time of their arrival, and the quick trip excited general astonishment among those who are posted on the beauties of hand-car traveling generally."

A Contemptible Boniface.

Mr. Nelson Sargent, who keeps the Sargent House at Denver, Col., is according to a newspaper published in his own city, about the meanest man on record. When Vice-President Wilson visited Denver last summer, Sargent urged the city authorities that he be allowed to entertain him on the score of old friendship, etc., promising that such attentions should neither cost the city nor its guest a cent. The city preferred to pay for Mr. Wilson's entertainment, and a committee went to the depot to meet him, but the wily Sargent was not to be ignored in this way. He intercepted the train at the junction, and, by representing that he 'was a Councilman acting in behalf of the city, took the Vice-President into a carriage and drove him to his hotel, where he remained several days. After Mr. Wilson's departure Sargent sent in his bill for $75 to the City Council. The items were 5¾ days' board, at $10, $57.50; carriage, $12; extras, $5.50. Payment was refused, whereupon Sargent sent the bill to Washington. Two days before his death Mr. Wilson received Sargent's letter, and at once dictated a letter to the Assistant Postmaster at Denver, requesting him to pay the bill and to draw on him in Boston for the amount. The letter was read at a meeting of the City Council of Denver, at which resolutions were passed, profoundly regretting the insult offered to the dying Vice-President by Nelson Sargent. The last resolution is so expressive as to be worth giving entire:

Resolved, That an order be drawn on the City Treasurer to pay the sum of $75 to Mr. Sargent, taking his receipt therefor, and that before paying the bill the Clerk shall require Mr. Sargent to make oath that he has not already collected the bill from any other source.

Premium Oyster Eater.

As an oyster eater Joe Johnson is a success. Last Saturday night Joe made a wager of a half-can of oysters that he could eat one dozen raw oysters rolled in brown sugar. This he accomplished with ease. He then proposed, for another half-can, that he could eat two dozen more seasoned with sugar, vinegar and salt. He was quickly taken up, and in less than three shakes of a sheep's tail Joe swallowed them down, and, unlike the Frenchman's oyster, they stuck. Just for the fun of it, and to satisfy a side bet, he ate up the balance in the can, some three or four dozen, without seasoning of any kind. He then proposed on top of this to eat a can of cove oysters, which he did. He then took his winnings and started home with a handful of peanuts, eating as he went. He is an ex-Bourbon, and of course Craddock will make the usual crow over his remarkable performance with raw oysters.—Flemingsburg (Ky.) Democrat.

Grasshopper Antidote.

Prof. C. V. Riley, State Entomologist of Missouri, has sent to Hon. John Halderman, of Kansas, the draft of a law which the latter proposes to introduce in the Kansas Legislature this winter. The law is for the purpose of preventing the grasshopper pest, or at least to preserve the State, as far as possible, from the ravages of that insect. It provides that persons shall be recompensed for destroying both the eggs and the insect. The Professor recommends $1 per bushel for grasshopper eggs, and fifty cents per bushel for the insects. The law is to be introduced on the principle, "In time of peace prepare for war." Prof. Riley says the people of Missouri or Kansas have no cause to fear a return of the grasshopper next year, or for a number of years. No eggs were deposited in either State during the laying season of 1875.

A ROMANCE OF THE SEA.

A Plucky and Pretty Little Woman—Eighteen Days in a Small Boat Amid Tempests, Snow and Rocky Isles.

[From the San Francisco Chronicle.]

On the steamer Mikado, which arrived in this port on Saturday last, came Capt. Groves and his wife and two children—one a babe—who have had a most remarkable escape from the never-satisfied jaws of old ocean. All that human beings could suffer, endure and live fell to their unfortunate lot. The Captain and his wife are both comparatively young, and look sufficiently careworn to have borne the burdens of many more years than have yet rolled over their heads. The lady is small, delicately formed, and yet plucky, or courageous, and full of animation when detailing the thrilling adventures through which she and her husband has passed. On April 29th they left Antwerp for Callao in the ship Albert Gallatin. They had a prosperous voyage for three months. But Aug. 2d, off Cape Horn, 56 degrees south of 79 degrees west, a heavy sea struck the ship and carried away the rudder at about 10 o'clock, p. m. Then for fourteen days every effort was made to replace it, but the weather continued severe and the rough winds and waves tossed the rudderless ship to and fro like a cork. And all this time, as the heavy seas rolled over the vessel, every soul on board was continually drenched, so that not one of them wore a dry garment for two weeks. At length, Aug. 15th, the over-washed ship was found to be within two miles of the Idlefonso Islands and drifting on to the rocks. Immediately all on board the unmanageable vessel were compelled hastily to abandon her, which they did in two life-boats at about 2 a. m. The Captain, his wife, two children and five seamen took one boat, and the remainder of the crew the other, and the latter have not been heard from since. After all were in the small boat, the Captain's brave little wife rushed on to the ship and snatched the chronometers and charts and brought them away safely. The life-boat soon filled with water and was well-nigh swamped beside the ship. The boat got away with sixty pounds of bread. But this was saturated with salt water when she filled. They brought away no fresh water, and for two days were without a drop while driven about by the boisterous waves and seeking a landing-place. August 17th they got on shore on Hermit Island, but the six days they remained there it thundered and lightninged and snowed, and was so cold that they were little better off than on the ocean. The rocky isle was barren, uninhabited and desolate. August 24th they left this island, hoping to make Staten Land, some hundreds of miles distant, but near the Straits of Lemaire, through which vessels often pass. They were out but a single day, however, when the sea became too heavy for them to proceed and drove them back into Scourfield Bay, on Herschell Island. But the sea was so rough they could not land, and had to stay in the boat all night. Everything was wet, and they had to bail constantly to keep the boat from going down with them. That night was very cold, and the canvas over their heads froze stiff. They could not lie down nor sleep, and had to sit in a stooping position, which Mrs. Groves did with her babe on her lap, while the snow on the awning pressed it down so low and hard upon her head that her attitude was anything but comfortable. Next day they navigated around this island and landed on Wellaston Island. While on these black, barren and rocky islands they often found it difficult to get a fire, and suffered intolerably from the cold. Here they found a little wild celery, which they mixed with their salt sea-soaked bread and preserved meats, which they had served in small quantities. The daily allowance of each one was but a couple of ounces of this coarse fare, which was warmed altogether, and each one took a spoonful. There were nine souls of them in all. They remained in this distressing condition until the following Tuesday, when they again started for Staten Land, with a light wind from the southwest. At midnight they were becalmed an hour or two, after which the wind freshened from the northward. Next day it blew a gale from the north-northwest, and in the evening the tempest became so fierce they were obliged to make a raft of their oars and lash the boat to them and let her drag, while they were kept constantly bailing. They again lost all the fresh water on board, the boat filled and destroyed all their provisions, and Mrs. Groves looked up to her husband and said, sadly, "I guess we are gone this time." That night they drifted back about forty miles from the land they were approaching. Next day was more moderate. Some of the men fell asleep on their oars and lost three of them. But in the heavy seas, whenever a wave came, they were obliged to pull for life. After a week of such voyaging, the Captain's wife one day saw a ship. They pulled for her, but were not observed. The day following, about 3 p. m., they saw an island about twenty-five miles off. At 5 p. m., they sighted a vessel and made for her. She proved to be the ship Syren, from Boston to Honolulu. The shipwrecked wanderers had now been afloat or on frozen islands for eighteen days, in all of which time they had never had a change of garments, having lost everything when they abandoned the ship. When they were taken on board the men were almost blind. All were nearly starved, and one sailor was out of his mind. They had to be raised on board the ship, and not one of them could stand or walk, their knees being almost stiff and their strength nearly exhausted. Yet during all those eighteen days of dreadful suffering Mrs. Groves had managed to nurse her babe and preserve both its life and her own. Capt. Newell, of the Syren, was extremely kind to the sufferers, and they say words can neither portray his goodness nor express their gratitude. When they reached Honolulu, some of the good people there cared for the sufferers, and the Mikado brought them to our city.

SOME years ago a traveling troupe played "Camille" in one of our Western provinces. The gentleman who acted Armand was an advertising agent for Parr's pills. When the curtain fell on the last act, he lifted the curtain, came forward and made his bow, saying: "Ladies and gentlemen: You have seen the death of Camille. She died of consumption. Had she taken Parr's pills, she would be living now." Camille, who overheard him, came rushing out, and exclaimed, "She ain't dead at all, and she never took any of your quack medicine, either."

A Murderer's Confession.

Marshall Crain, one of the Williamson County (Ill.) Ku-Klux, who is now in jail awaiting execution for the murder of Wm. Spence and Capt. Geo. W. Sisney, has made the following written confession. We give it verbatim:

On the morning before Spence was killed that night, me and sam musick went to the back of the widow mary hamptons field. I was expecting to meet alan baker there. Sam musick didont know it was allen who was to meet me there, so i did not tell him. hoo we would meet, as allen did caution me to not tell any one he was in it for fear he was betrayed, so we me and sam music was to brake some weeds or bushes to show him we had Come. me and music got there in the morning; we stayed till 2 o'clock in the evening of the same day. baker did not come at all. music left, said he would go home i staid there till late in the evening started to crainvill, got there where i was to meet music between Mr. pribles and John Crains. I got there about dark, and no one with me. sam music come after I had bin there a few minutes no one was with him but my self. he says to me where is your man. i says he never come. i told music he had went back on us. sam says shall we go ahead? i told him i would do my part so we went to where we had put our guns in a house that no one lived in at that time. we stayed till about 8 or 9 o'clock went from there to spences right up the public road. we got to spences store. he was in bed up stairs in his store house, me and Sam went in front of the door and i called to mr. spence. i hallowed, "helo mr. spence twice. he answered me, ast hoo it was, i told him john sisney. he said he would be down in a few minutes. he come down with the light in his hand Sam music was standing in front of the door about 4 foot from the door. i was standing on the west side of the walk next to the front side of the house with my face towards the west when Mr spence got down the stares and started to the front door. sam music stepped forward one step cocked both barrels of his shot gun and shot spence with both barrels. he turned to me and says "give me your pistol he's coming out." i handed sam my pistol and he shot him through the head. the ball going in under his right eye passing through his head killing him instantly. after he shot him we both went in the howse. we was in over 5 minutes. i went out and left Sam music in the house. i stayed out there a little while not over a minute. then i went back in. sam Music was trying to open a drawer that spence kept his money in. he was hunting for money. i dont no whether he got any or not. he told me he didnt find no money. we both went out where we went in at the window on the east side of the house wher we broke in after spence was shot. we got a pocket or day book. left the store got on the rail road & went up bit about 100 yard. we droped the book there on rail road. there was nothin in hit. we left the rail road. struck a cross leading south. we parted on the road leading from landums mill to rube hills. sam musick said to me we have plaied hell haint we. I told him if he ever hinted it we would be hung with out law or gospel. Sam said he was going home and was going to bed. i left sam and went home. i got home a bout day light. i dont no where sam music went.

MARSHALL T. CRAIN.

P. S.—the above is the statement in substance i made November 9th 1875 and handed to georga young and N E noris and charls denison.

In this connection it may be of interest to add that John Bulliner, who is now in the Joliet Penitentiary on a twenty-five-year sentence, is a raving maniac. Marsh Crain is visited by scores of friends and relatives almost daily, and his situation evidently distresses them greatly. His most constant visitor is his wife, a rather delicate, but fine-looking little woman, who has stuck to him nobly, and who has the Sheriff's permission to see him at almost any time.

Popular Fallacy Concerning Overwork.

The subject of overwork, then, is one of the greatest importance to study, and has to be discussed daily by all of us. My own opinion has already been expressed, that the evils attending it on the community at large are vastly overestimated; and, judging from my own experience, the persons with unstrung nerves who apply to the doctor are, not the Prime Minister, the Bishops, Judges, and hard-working professional men, but merchants and stockbrokers retired from business, Government clerks who work from 10 to 4, women whose domestic duties and bad servants are driving them to the grave, young ladies whose visits to the village school or Sunday performance on the organ are undermining their health, and so on. In short, in my experience I see more ailments arise from want of occupation than from overwork, and taking the various kinds of nervous and dyspeptic ailments which we are constantly treating, I find at least six due to idleness to one from overwork.—Dr. Wilks, in London Lancet.

About Mr. Kerr.

The Erie (Pa.) Observer gives a sketch of Hon. M. C. Kerr, the new Speaker. It appears that he spent his early years in Erie, and received his education at the academy there. His wife was a Miss Coover, an Erie schoolmistress, and the Observer says: "They were privately married directly after he graduated, and when he was about 18 years of age, the lady being a few years older. Immediately after he left for the West, and the marriage was kept secret until he returned for his bride, about two years afterward. In the interval, she had fallen out of a window of Wright's block, and received injuries which blemished her face somewhat, but did not cripple her, as has been reported. The match proved to be extremely fortunate, although at the time, on account of the disparity of years, it was looked upon by those who attend to other people's business better than to their own as an odd and unequal one. Mr. Kerr is a brother of Mrs. Eliot, of this city, and of Col. James K. Kerr, the famous Pittsburgh lawyer."

Advertisements.

The advertisements in a newspaper are more read than the thoughtless imagine. They are the map of a large class of men's capabilities in life. The man who contemplates doing business in a distant town takes up the local paper and in its advertising columns sees a true picture of the men he has to deal with; a complete record of the town, its commerce, its home trade, the facilities of storekeepers, its banks, and in almost every case he can estimate the character of the men who are soliciting the public patronage. The advertising page is a map of the town, a record of its municipal character, a business confession of the citizens, and instead of being the opinionated production of one man, it is freighted with the life-thoughts of a hundred.

TWEED.

How the Great Thief Escaped—The Circumstances in Detail.

[From the New York World.]

William Dunham, the Warden of the jail, made the following statement to a reporter for the World:

"We left here (Ludlow Street Jail) a little after 1 o'clock in a carriage with Edward Hagen, one of the keepers, Tweed, and his son William. We went through Broome street up Bowery, up Fourth street to Tenth street, and thence up Broadway to Fifth avenue and to Fifty-ninth street to Western boulevard to Kingsbridge road, and down the Southern boulevard to the bridge at the head of Third avenue, crossed over to One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street to Sixth avenue, down Sixth avenue to Central Park to the knoll, walked round the knoll to where the horses were; returned to the coach, went down through the park to Fifty-ninth street to his residence in Sixtieth street at 4 p. m. Went into his house; sat down in the front parlor. He said he would slip up stairs to see his wife one moment. Hagen said he would slip outside to wash his hands. Tweed went up stairs. Hagen washed his hands and came in again. Tweed was absent about five minutes. When Tweed had been absent about five minutes, I remarked that it was about time to go. Tweed's son went up stairs. He had been sitting with us all the time. He came down and said his father hadn't gone up stairs. He was gone only a moment. He said his father hadn't been up stairs. Hagen and I then left the house. I told Mr. Hagen that he had better go up stairs, which he did. I went out to the front door and looked into the area. I went down off the steps. I saw no one there. The carriage was around the corner where we could not see it. I saw no one. I went up in the front hall-way again, and Mr. Hagen went all through the lower part of the house. I then went to see if the carriage was there, and it was. I then thought we had done all we could there, and so I took the carriage and went to the Fifty-ninth Street Station. That was 6:35 o'clock. I thought the best thing I could do was to give an alarm at the first moment. I told the driver to drive to the Fifty-ninth Street Station House as fast as he could. In the rear of that house are other houses and yards. I don't think he could have got out without going through one of those houses. After giving the alarm at the station I drove down to police headquarters. I inquired for Superintendent Walling, but he was not there. The alarm had already reached there, and Inspector Dilks, who was in charge, said he would telegraph to Walling at once. I then went to Sheriff Conner. I left word. I stopped at the corner of Fifty-ninth street and Third avenue. He was not at the club room. I left word there for him to come down to Ludlow Street Jail at the earliest moment. I then went to his residence and left the same word there. I then got into a Third avenue car and came right down here. Mr. Conner has not been here (Ludlow Street Jail) since. I have only just arrived here myself. I have no idea how Tweed escaped. I heard Tweed go up stairs, or think he did, to the best of my knowledge. I saw Mrs. Tweed at the head of the stairs, and she seemed to be very much excited. This was after Hagen had been up stairs looking after Tweed. The son was also very excited. The son-in-law of Mr. Tweed was in the house; he came in just after we went in. He staid there until just after we got the alarm. I have done a good many kindnesses to Mr. Tweed—yes, and I am very sorry for it. Yet I don't know; I suppose I have only done my duty as an officer. Generally, as I have been out riding with him, he has been in good spirits. As an old officer and accustomed to the tricks of prisoners, I can't say how Tweed got away. I can't say whether Mrs. Tweed [illegible]d or not."

Tweed has only paid his board bills at the prison and lawyers' fees. At the time when he was removed from Blackwell's Island to Ludlow Street Jail last summer, one or two Deputies from the Order of Arrest Department, having him in charge, permitted him to remain at his residence on Fifth avenue the greater part of one night and a portion of the following forenoon before he was taken to the District Attorney's office. The Deputies who extended this favor to Tweed were paid for it. When Tweed took up his quarters at Ludlow Street Jail he was notified immediately that one of the advantages of his change of prison was unlimited freedom, if he chose to pay for it. For some time Tweed kept close in his room, but after the newspaper talk about him ceased he began to drive about New York considerably. The exact amount paid for the privilege of each visit made to his family or some of his boon companions is not known. The price originally intended to charge him was $100, but it is said that the terms were at least reduced to $25 per visit. One of the deputies assured a World reporter some weeks ago that this seemingly high price was charged because the Jailer or Warden of Ludlow Street Jail took the risks of the prisoner's escape. During the past month Tweed's trips around the city have been very frequent. He has dined twice at the Clairmont Hotel in the upper part of the city lately—once last week. His calls at his home were made very frequently.

A Woman Kills a Lion.

A California lion, which has long been a terror to the solitary African of Indian Bar, was killed by a woman known as "Slim Josie," under the following circumstances: Josie came to the county last spring, and owns a small ranch, occupied by her, a cow and a calf, a pair of pigs and a large dog. The dog and calf are now no more, and their taking off led to the killing of the lion. Two weeks ago Josie's dog, Bully, went out on a hunt and returned no more. Josie, who is strong-minded and fears not the demon man, went out and scoured the woods for three days. On the evening of the third day she found poor Bully, cold and stiff, clasped in the embrace of death. He had been fearfully mangled in the encounter, in which he had come off second best. Josie returned home, and all went well until Saturday night, when she was aroused by the bleating of her calf. She arose, took her trusty rifle, and sallied out to the pen. On her arrival at the pen she paused, and in the bright moonlight she plainly perceived a large lion tearing and eating her calf. The rifle was promptly leveled, and the lion sprang into the air and dropped dead, with a bullet in his brain. As soon as the African heard of the taking off of his enemy, he went and popped the question to Josie, who answered by booting him off the ranch. She now reigns supreme.—Sonora (Cal.) Independent.

A NEW bank will go into operation at Bowling Green, Clay County, on the 1st of January, 1876.

TERRE HAUTE will have a market-house opening on Christmas. The building will cost $32,000.

CHARLES GORBITT, 21 years of age, was killed in the machinery of a mill in Brownstown, lately, where he was working.

COL. B. N. HUDSON has sold the Terre Haute Morning Journal to a company represented by B. F. Havens, Andrew Grimes, and Eli L. Jones.

A SMALL colored war has broken out in Henry county, occasioned by the expulsion of a negro student from Union School, four miles north of Knightstown.

PLEASANT LAWSON, an old citizen of Elizabeth, Harrison County, and a soldier of 1812, died last Saturday week, aged 85 years. He assisted in building Castle Pinckney.

MR. JAMES LILLY, of Bourbon, Marshall County, got $1,500 from the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Company, one day last week, for killing his daughter.

A LETTER has been received stating that the families of Beeghley and Mellinger, of Pipe Creek, Miama County, who were supposed to have been lost in the steamer Pacific, in the Pacific Ocean, did not take passage on that boat, and are safely quartered in San Francisco.

MESSRS. JENKINSON & CULBERTSON, formerly of the Fort Wayne Gazette, have purchased the Richmond Palladium, and secured the exclusive control of the Associated Press day report, and on Jan 3 will commence the publication of an afternoon daily. Two morning papers without press reports are published at Richmond now.

THE State of Indiana has had the honor of furnishing three Speakers of the National House of Representatives within the last thirty years. The first was Hon. John W. Davis, who presided over the Twenty-ninth Congress; the second was Hon. Schuyler Colfax, who presided over the Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth, and Fortieth Congresses; and the third is Hon. M. C. Kerr, the recently-elected Speaker of the present Congress.

O. M. EDDY, Swamp Land Commissioner, died at Indianapolis, on Saturday of last week, of congestion of the brain. He was a clerk in the office of his father, Col. Norman J. Eddy, when the latter was Secretary of State, and was the Democratic candidate for that office in 1872. His popularity was such that he ran considerably ahead of the general ticket, being defeated by only seventy-one votes. He was buried at South Bend. He was 35 years old, and unmarried.

IN 1865 a cattle dealer of New Orleans was drowned near Mount Vernon, in the Ohio River, and Mr. Charles Fouhrer, of that place, was appointed administrator of the drowned man, some $3,000 having been found upon his person. Quite recently a letter was received by the Chief of Police of Evansville, from L. Lambert, of New Orleans, asking for information of the administrator, as numerous letters addressed to him had failed to secure a reply. Mr. Fouhrer has failed, but the amount of the claim can be realized from his bondsmen.

LAST Sunday week a fire occurred on the Poor Farm, four miles east of Goshen, and two women confined in the building were roasted alive. The particulars of the sad occurrence are as follows: Two crazy women were lodged in what was called "the cell," a frame building about 20 feet square. In some unaccountable manner the building caught or was set on fire, and was soon a mass of flames. About 50 persons collected on the grounds, but all efforts to save the unfortunate women were without avail. The names of the women were Maggie McDonough, aged about 24 years, and Ann Shroeber, aged 40.

JAMES FERGUSON, of Madison, convicted last August for the murder of John Stilheimer, in a drunken row at a negro picnic, and sentenced to State's prison for life, was granted a new trial on appeal to the Supreme Court a short time since, which resulted in his being sentenced to the penitentiary for twenty-one years. On Saturday of last week the Sheriff and deputy accompanied him to his mother's house, some six miles from Madison, to see her before going to the penitentiary. While up stairs in her room he leaped out of the window and made his escape. Mrs. Ferguson threw down the blinds so the officers could not see which course he took. Sheriff Gavitt has offered $500 for his arrest.

ON Tuesday of last week the Evansville Journal chronicled the fact that a man named Parker had been arrested in Cannelton for burglary, tried and sentenced to the Penitentiary for seven years. It seems that when Parker was arrested he was minus one eye, very lame, and otherwise quite unwell. During the trial he grew worse and worse, and at the time of his conviction he was supposed to be so near death's door that the Judge, in the kindness of his heart, did not order him sent to the Penitentiary, lest he die in the hands of the Sheriff on the road. Dr. Bemis, a veteran physician of Cannelton, tended to the unfortunate criminal, and pronounced his disease to be paralysis. One of the man's legs was very badly warped, and the doctor, with all his skill, seemed unable to straighten it. In this condition he was watched by the Deputy Sheriff, with the expectation that every day and night would be his last. Sure enough on Wednesday night he did "go off," but not according to expectation. The Deputy Sheriff, weary with watching, went to sleep, at the sight of which the paralytic was suddenly restored to health. He quickly relieved his guard of his pocketbook and gold watch, locked him in the cell, and left for parts so far not ascertained.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN INDIANA, DEC., 23rd, 1875

Gov. Tilden will remove Sheriff Conner for his negligence in allowing Boss Tweed the privilege he enjoyed, and which led to his escape.

Blaine is the acknowledged leader of the Republicans in the house, while Judge Holman of this state,is accorded that position on the democratic side We are glad to see so safe a man at the helm.

It is thought that Congress will repeal the Resumption act, and the National Bank act, and then leave the Finance Question severely alone. For the good of the whole country, we hope that this will prove true.

The Committee on the Opening Ceremonies of the Centennial Exhibition have selected William M. Evarts as Orator, H. W. Longfellow as Poet, and a grandson of Richard Henry Lee of Virginia as Reader of the Declaration of Independence.

The Democrats became a little demoralized at the first of the session, by the peculiar resolutions introduced by the Republicans and for several days they did not make much head way. But on the ninth day, Springer, of Illinois, (Dem,) threw a bomb shell into the Republican camp, by his third term resolution, that sent Blaine into the smoking room and left his followers in the utmost disorder. It was a famous victory.

Bishop Haven writes a pathetic letter to the New York Tribune concerning his alleged nomination of Grant for a third term. He didn't exactly nominate him, but asked the "brethreu" to pray for his nomination The Bishop is no politician, or he would know that in a Republican, National Convention a peck basketful of money or of appointments would discount a camp meetingful of prayers We are not afraid of the prayers, but the Postmasters, &c., are formidable.

The Republican newspapers are making a grate noise about the discharge of a few Union soldiers from menial positions about the National Capitol. They held their places as Republican partisans, and they have gone down with the fortunes of political warfare. As President Grant has appointed a number of Confederate soldiers to positions which might have been filled by Union soldiers, it strikes us that these Administration organs are sweating the oxen.

George Washinton was an Episcopalian, but if he had been nominated for the Presidency as the candidate of the Episcopal Church, he would never have been elected to the office which he adorned. Thomas Jefferson could not have been elected as the skeptical candidate, nor John Quincy Adams as the Unitarian candidate. We have had Presidents of half dozen or more religious denomination but not one of them could have got the office as the condidate of his denominations When Bishop Haven called on the Methodists to vote for the reelection of Boss Grant, he took a new departura in political religion.

The Three Loving Generals.

General McDonald, the convicted whisky ringster in jail at St. Louis, occupies a luxuriously furnished apartment, and is treated with the greatest deference by his keepers. Yet as even this kind of imprisonment must be unpleasant for him in some respects, he might take it into his head to follow the example of Boss Tweed if his confidence in Executive clemency was not so well founded. General McDonald is a man of resources who has been an intimate presonal friend of General Grant for twenty years, and who has also enjoyed the pleasure of close familiarity with General Babcock. General McDona'd Grant, and Badcock are three fraternalizing Generals upon whom an eye should be kept in these times.

Our capital friend, Col. T. M. Stevens formerly connected with the livery business, having bought out the stock of groceries of I. N. Cool, is making extensive preparations to furnish our place with a fine stock, and we beleive he possesses the energy and enterprise to accomplish all he undertakes. A large line of new groceries is to be added immediately, and all kinds of country produce will be bought at the highest price Tom. is a genial, clever fellow, and deserves success.

Lauferty burns out his chimney with powder. Be careful Sam, that you don't walk up to the "beautiful gates" on a pair of crutches.

The large brick and commodious hotel at Garrett, has been christened "Dekalb House," instead of the "Garret House," as was expected by the citizens there.

True courage must ever command admiration. There is one man in town so brave that he dares his wife to get up and build the fires every morning.

The avenues leading to an early grave have often been opened by a cough or cold. Thousands have been cured and saved by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

And now the delightful season is at hand to the young and ardent, when fires are to be kindled in the parlor, and the old folks grow sleepy at an early hour.

Not long till leap year, and then ladies you will have an opportunity to pop the question to some bashful swain who don't make known his heart's desire.

Happiness and prosperity depend to a very great extent upon good health. All those suffering from Hoarseness, Cold, or Cough, should try Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It cures.

The lecture at the Institute last Monday evening by Dr J. B. Casebeer, was a splendid effort, and well received by an attentive audience. The science of Physiology was nobly vindicted, and our law makers properly reproved for the obstacles thrown in the way, for the advancement of this noble science.

On next Monday evening a lecture will be delivered by the Rev. Mr. Shear on natural and cultivated eloquence. All are cordially invited to be present.

FROM ANGOLA.

ANGOLA, Dec., 20th, 1875.

—Our new engine house is completed and occupied.

—A grand time is expected by our young people at the Disciple and Methodist churches on Christmas eve in shape of presents. They don't come on a tree this time, but instead, a ship is loaded with gifts for the boys and girls.

—John Chadwic, has been here from Michigan, visiting his many friends.

—Our neighbors at Fremont are jubilent over the Narrow Gague Railroad almost completed there, will be in running order in a few days, if it don't explode.

—Our old Methodist church is at last in condition to be occupied. This is a good opening for temperance lectures.

—It is an absolute fact, that some of our young men drink and smoke to such an extent that they have became extremely nervous and fast becoming destitute of good judgment and reason. If a change is not effected shortly, they will in a few short years fill a drunkards grave. Yes, young men, just think how often your parents and your sisters have prayed for you to leave off. You think yourself smart to make yourself lower than the lowest. Oh, shame, young man who will borrow money of your mother and sister to buy drinks and cigars with Money that was earned at the wash tub and in every instance failing to return one single cent. There is plenty of young men who have fooled away money enough to buy a good home, who will soon die in the poor house, without friends or anyone to lament departure.

—Victor Hendry, has at last found a drove of wild turkeys, comprised of not less than three hundred. Shot two out of the flock and we couldn't persuade him to drop a single durkey. The drove is located in the S. W. corner of Clear Lake-tp this county. Who can beat that. It is well enough to locate a place where they can be found.

CHILLS AND FEVER.

Simon's Liver Regulator, or Med'e

is eminently a Family Medicine, and by being kept ready for immediate resort will save many an hour if suffering and many a dollar in time and doctors' bills.

After over forty years trial it is still receiving the most unqualified testimonials to its virtue from persons of the highest character and responsibility. Eminent physicians commend it as the most for Constipation, Headache, Pain in the shoulders Dizziness, Sour Stomach, bad taste in the mouth billious attacks, Palpitation of the heart pain in the region of the kidneys, despondency, gloom and forbidings of evil, all of which are the offspring of a diseased liver.

EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, poor appetite and tongue coated you are suffering from torpid liver, or billiousness and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few, but the liver the largest organ in the body is generally the seat of the disease and if not regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and death will come.

Armed with this antidote, all climates and changes of water and food may be faced without fear. As a remedy in Malarious fevers, Bowel complaints, Restlessness, Jaundice, Nausea, it is the cheapest, purest and best family medicine in the world.

CAUTION.—Buy no powders or prepared Simons' Liver Regulator unless in our engraved wrapper, with Trade Mark Stamp, and Signature unbroken. None other is genuine.

The Bank will be closed on Christmas and New Years.

We have a new harness shop in the city, located up stairs on Seventh street

The prizes for the dance on the 24th inst., can be seen at Albright's Jewelry store.

We received a very pleasant call, last week from Mr. Sargent, of Pleasant Lake.

Sheriff Meese is busy now. The cold weather and bad roads make it inconvenient for his business.

The cold chilly winds of December are about ousgaspield, but our wood is entirely so. Who's going to pay up.

We refrain from any extended comments on the roads. Their condition is too rough to allow a description in proper language.

We have been absent in Washington for three weeks, seeing how they do things at that locality. We are emiently satisfied with that city.

Another Garrett rooster in the bars. A fellow by the name of Smith, at Garrett, had a little "set-too." Now he sets to Sheriff Meese's hotel.

The Sheriff and Commissioners of Elkhart county, were in town last Tuesday inspecting our new jail, preparatory to the erection of one at Goshen.

We are glad to know that our friend Hank Altenburg, has been appointed to a route agency on the B. & O. Road, He will run between Grafton and Chicago and left for Chicago Junction yesterday.

By request our dramatic troupe will play the "Streets of New York" again to-night. Mr. Jas. Lowrie will introduce some of his best songs, and the entertainment will be better than last evening.

Some of our subscribers, those who are always prompt, are coming in and pay in advance for the Centennial year. How we wish that all would do this, and that every year was a Centennial.

The Circuit Court has been engaged for two days past in the case of Malpractise, against Dr. Hoopingarner of Butler. When a doctor does well he gets no thanks, when he don't he gets the very devil. Same with an editor.

W. H. Kinsey, Insurance solicitor for Archer & Snow, will be in Auburn to solicit the same during the 1st of Jan. All business entrusted to him will be promptly attended to.

ARCHER & SNOW. 2w.

The public installation of the officers of the Masonic Lodge of this city, at the M. E. Church, last Tuesday evening, was not so well attended, owing to the bad weather. Mr. Marine, of Fort Wayne, officiated.

Fostoria had a scandal scrape last week and the editor of the Democrat told his readers that the story of the girl's suffering brought tears to his eyes Put him down as the boss sympathizing printer in the State.

Several exchanges have been talking about pretty school marms in their localities. Without fear or trembling we put the lady teachers of DeKalb county against the State for beauty. And at the same time we wish to remark that we are a judge of beauty.

Fur Wanted.

Mr. A. E. Swineford will be in the city on each Saturday for the purpose of buying furs. The highest market price will be paid.

Two fellows discussing finance the other day, estimated that there is enough currency in the country to give every person $27.50. If the care of it is at all burdensome, we will relieve the government by taking our share at once.

He peddles maps and wears dog skin gloves and paper shirt fronts. He has been in town a few days and tries hard to get acquainted with all the young ladies. He is snubbed by the girls, but his cheek bears him up and he still lives in hope.

A brace of bull pups were sent east through the express office from this place yesterday. Hank Altenburg also left yesterday to take his place as rout agent on the Baltimore road. Of course the mentioning of these two items is purely incidental.

Mr Jacob Sidle, a resident of Fairfield township, died Dec. 26th, at the residence of Adam Weirick, at the age of 87 years, 9 months and 27 days.

His funeral took place a Fairfield Center, Friday, Dec. 17th. Rev. L. Rice, officiating.

We have received an invitation from the Albion Star Dancing Club, to attend a ball at the above place on Dec 24th. We would very much like to attend, but we are going to have the best dance "in the business" at Ensleys Hall on that night.

Sudden Death.

Mr. Daniel Swander, brother to our townsman Jonathan Swander, died last Monday, He attended church on Sunday morning, and was apparently well on Sunday evening. His funeral services took place at "Sixteen Church," on Tuesday.

It is remarkable what effect wooden toothpicks have on some people. We noticed one young man, who went out after each act at the theater last night His fair partner, toward the close of the entertainment, asked him what made his tongue so thick. Mus' be ze toothpicks. P'int sharper'n sewin chine needle.

What a pleasure it is to deal with a good square man, one whom you can have confidence in, and can meet you in an agreeable way. If we were to pick out two such men in Auburn we would unhesitatingly select our enterprising dry goods merchants Miller & Casebeer, who are doing a fine trade and are offering special bargains for the holidays. They have an immense stock and are selling very low.

There are some cases of consumption in town this winter. We have just heard of one man so severely afflicted hat out of nineteen buckwheat cakes, baked for him every morning there is ver more than one left.

Abright, our enterprising jeweler, is making a most beautiful and extensive display of holiday goods, comprising a nice assortment of silver ware, toys, jewelry, &c. We noticed several tea sets of silver, that would be very appropriate and hadnsome as a present. His stock of toys is unusually large and embraces all the new designs now out. He has also displayed a beautiful line of jewelry that cannot be excelled either in price or quality. It is a most desirable place to go to select presents, while it requires but a small sum to make the hearts of the little ones glad. Be sure to give him a call.

—The Adelphians, the deservedly popular dramatic troupe of Albion, will, by request, produce the finest and most comprehensive play of the season, at Ensley Hall, Christmas night, December 25, 1875, entitled, "The Fireman," followed by the most characteristic and laughable piece, "Dutchman's Ghost." The "Fireman" is a play of and for the people. Our Albion cousins, we feel assured, will, as heretofore, endeavor to please their numerous friends in our city. Go, and spend the holiday evening with them. Tickets and reserved seats can be procured at the Postoffice.

THRILLING ADVENTURES.—We have been shown a most interesting work full of thrilling adventures, and amusing incidents which is now being sold by subscription by Miss Martha Simons, of this county. Dr Livingston's life and discoveries in Africa, are among the historical facts of the day, and no family ought to be without a copy of this valuable book. Miss Simons is well known in our county, bears a good character, and is an industrious and deserving young lady, and everybody should buy a book, and help her along. She is also agent for a fine family Bible, English and German, which possesses features not found in other similar publications. She will take orders for these works in different parts of the county during the winter.

For the benefit of our unmarried readers we would just remark that the race of this terrestial ball is becoming frosted with the flakey dews of winter. The corporation cow advances, gives the countersign, and smouges a dinner from the grangers wagon box. The old family cock picks his corn in the fattening stall having crowed his last crow on the "dung-hill" of liberty, for christmas is nearing, when he shall die. The fattened swine giveth up its life, and enters the scalded vat for the first time and is made] whiter than snow. Man moves on, chained and bound to the duties of life, realizing that the new year is advancing hastily, and he must "up and out," if he doth not enter the new year "single," or fall a victim to the fates of "leap year." He's bound to turn a "new leaf," and float upon a different ripple in the sea of life. His little barque is sciently floating to the shores of '75, and he is nearly ready to anchor, perhaps for the last time.

Spencerville Items.

SPENCERVILLE, Dec. 20, 1875

—Its not as warm as it use to be.

—All is oyster suppers now.

—The Odd Fellows have a mush and milk supper New Years.

—The Spencerville lodge, I. O. O. F. meets now Thursday evening instead of Saturday evenings.

—The proceeds of the mite Friday evening amounted to $6.40.

—B. A. Hadsell's boy was badly hurt Saturday morning by a fall, falling a distance of 25 feet.

—Institute Saturday was well attended Teachers of the towship, all but one being present.

—Report of Spencerville school for the month ending Dec. 10th, No. enrolled during the month, 102. No. of days attendance, 1969. No. of days absect, 71 Average daily attendance, 973. Perc en of attendance, 965.

—Yesterday morning a man by the name of Hartsell near Maysville, tired of life and shuffled off this mortal coil in the coil of a log-chain. We suppose he was an Englishman as he took two chains.

—Satan Zimmerman gave the young folks a party the other evening. We understand it was a pleasant affair.

—We understand that about two of the teachers of Jackson-tp., intend to rebel against the State of Indiana. I wouldn't do it boys, you might cause her trouble, and you young man with that year's certificate, if you do carry one for two years from some place else. Rest assured, you have all you deserve here. If you think not, spout a little more, your papers upon which your answers were written are in safe keeping, and they can be made public; then people need not take your word for it only, but your work, that will show.

"ALPH."

We are glad to state that our friend A. C. Dawson, Esq., has purchased the furniture establishment of Mr. W. Long and will continue that business, adding to such an extent as to make it the largest furniture depot in the county. Mr. Dawson will buy his goods for cash and can therefore sell much lower than those who go on time. He offers special inducements in the way of parlor and bedroom sets, and wants the public to call and see him before buying elsewhere.

The "Streets of New York" will be repeated again to-night.

Notes on Washington.

A brief sojourn of three weeks in the delightfully beautiful city of Washington, is enjoyable in any season, but especially so during the organization of a new Congress. This pleasure is enhanced by being a participator in the exciting scenes attendant upon such an event, and time flies with a rapidity that almost startles one. Hotel, lobbies, and private apartments often, present animated scenes, and amid the bubbling of the political cauldron these places are the common resort. Here the plebian elbows his way through the motley crowd, undismayed in the presence of Governors, Senators, Generals, Commodores and Congressmen. In fact, there is nothing so peculiar in the physiognomy of this class as to make them distinguishable from the common herd. They try to explain this away by the assertion that only our best and most accomplished private citizens visit Washington at this time, but we doubt whether we can induce our readers to believe this, in the light of late events. However, everybody is courteous and generally well dressed, and this you know covers a multitude of sins. But a Congressman isolated and alone, receives more exaltation from the people, than he would enjoy could they look down upon one of these scenes of the lobby.

Active daily life never begins at Washington until about nine o'clock; and there is a disposition upon the part of many to put off an hour later. One from the rural dirtricts finds this regime a sadly demoralizing arrangement. The first morning he awakens at his usual hour and his stomach tells him that seven o'clock has arrived, yet two long hours must intervene before his inner cravings can be satisfied. And then dinner at five o'clock knocks the patience out of a fellow, but his misery is not complete until he gulps down a hearty supper at ten, and tries to sleep afterward. Some easily, fall into this mode of living, but its like the breaking up of a hard winter to others.

There was considerable excitement on Speakership, previous to the nomination, and at one time the fight seemed very close, between Kerr and Randall. The friends of each worked with a will, but the solid worth of Indiana's son, with his splendid political record won for him against that which would have defeated any other man in the country. Among the friends of the former was the unflagingly industrious and persistent Hamilton, the genial and accomplished member from Fort Wayne. Active and engaging, elegant and attractive, he stood in the advance, urging the claims of his Indiana colleague, with a grace an efficiency that others, older in political warfare might be proud of. The old adage that a man don't know what he can do until he tries, struck us with remarkable force. Mr. Hamilton won laurels in this contest, and for a new member he stands in high regard and is generally acquainted with the entire membership. He is perhaps one of the most popular and elegant entertainers in the House, not excepting F. Wood.

We were pleased to meet the member from this district, Hon. John H. Baker, and cannot but speak of the warm and genial manner in which he treated us. Mr Baker done us many favors, and was personally as much interested as our most intimate friend could be. He is a gentleman of great force and decision, active and energetic, and will prove a hard working, and thorough going member. He is not an extreme partizan, and is not one of the few that believes that no good can come out of Israel. We are under many obligations to him, for his kindly interest in our behalf.

But one of the best men in the House is our unassuming, kind hearted, and universally esteemed friend Judge Holman, whose unswerving honesty in the midst of political corruption, has gained for him the respect and admiration of the people. He stands in the front rank of the able men of the House and without ostentation or flourish, plants himself squarely against every measure that is not in the interest of the country. Lobbyists fear him and political schemers have no love for him. He stands high with his political associates, and everybody seems to have the utmost confidence in his ability and integrity.

BUTLER ITEMS.

BUTLER, Dec. 21, 1875.

—Mrs. Dr. Fanning has returned from her Canadian trip.

—Miss Ida Blair, of Waterloo, was in Butler last week.

—Everybody feels as though they had taken a Rip Van Winkle sleep of a couple of months and waking up find Spring is here.

—The Union supper last Friday night cleared about $45 90 for the Christian and Methodist Churches.

—A Centennial concert for the benefit of the Centennial Educational Society of Indiana, was held at Tomlinson's Hall, on Saturday night. Quite a number attended though the weather was bad.

—Lena begs Mrs. Conant's pardon for omitting so important an item, last week, as her presence in town. But she is here and everybody who knows her is glad.

—On Sunday last a son of D. Reyher, of this place, while out skating broke his collar-bone. LENA.

MUSIC.

MISS M McCUTCHAN, teacher of instrumental music, harmony and thorough bass, is prepared to give instruction in music in a thorough and practical manner. For further information call at the residence of E. D. Hartman, near the Eel River depot.

A Happy New Year to All.

As we will not publish any paper next week, we take this occasion to extend the usual greeting of merry Christmas and a happy New Year to our numerous patrons, wishing those who have been prosperous a continuation of the same and those who have been unfortunate a brighter gleam of a more favored day in the near future.

During the year past we have lost several of our veneral patrons by the hand of the Reaper-Death. The family circle has been broken, hearthstones has been made desolate, and yet each succeeding year will bring similar grief and thus the years of time roll on.

Our next issue will begin the sixth year of the COURIER. For five long years we have labored faithfully for the interests of the people, and it gratifies us to know that there are many warm friends, who have appreciated our efforts Though we have not gained much so far financially. We will start out in the next year with some little encouragement, we expect many more to come forward and give us their aid, so that we can give them a local paper not surpassed in the State. To-day we have the largest circulation in the county, making it the best local advertising medium. We are not ungrateful to a generous public, and therefore tender our heartful thanks to those who have stood by us. A few of our subscribers are delinquent. It would please us wonderfully to have them call and pay up. We cannot continue the paper any longer until they do. We hope we will not be forced to place their accounts in the hands of an attorney for collection.

Junction Jottings.

—Mr. Fred Sammons, the jovial car inspector at this point, is permanently located among us, having erected a nice residence near here. Fred is our right-hand man.

—Trains on the roads have been running on good time for the last few days.

—Mr. H. Sheets, General road master at this point, reports the transfer of freight to be larger than has been known for some months.

—Mr. Quigley, of Garrett, who enjoys the happy distinction of being paternal parent of Miss Indiana Garrett Quigley and who is serving the B. & O. R R. as capacity of conductor of fast freight, arriving at this point daily.

—Mr. Cook Ford, general manager of the Auburn transfer company, is making for himself a host of friends in his present capacity. Success to you Cook, and may your shadow never grow less.

—She was young, she way fair and she scrambled her hair and she wanted to know where to find a good hotel. The polite ticket agent informed her that Auburn Junction had no use for "book agents."

"I say, Mr. agent, have you seen anything of my wife? She was coming here to meet me, and I see her not. Now, Mr. agent, if you don't tell me where she is I will go for you strong."

Agent steps out and stranger takes a tumbler having too much of Garrett "Sour Mash."

"ROCK."

All the boys are going to the dance on the 24th of this month, at Ensleys' Hall.

HEAVEN.

BY E. M. WIDNEY.

Some fancy Heaven a beauteous land
With grandeur all o'er spread,
While fairest flowers on every hand,
The richest fragrance shed.
That lovely crystal murmuring rills,
Through shady valleys flow
While on the sides of sloping hills,
Life's spreading trees do grow,
That sweetest songs shall lull to rest
The weary ones below,
And whispering zephyrs fan each breast
And cool each heated brow.
That birds of sweet plumage bright
Shall warble notes of joy.
Eternal day dispel the night,
Nor toil nor care annoy.
That sympathy for erring ones
Shall ne'er be felt again,
Though far beneath unceasing groans
Rise from the souls in pain.
This land of beauty lies, "they say"
beyond the bounds of time,
And we must pass life's fitful day
To reach that happy clime.
I would not check the cheering hope.
Of joys beyond the tomb,
That lifts the fainting spirit up
And drives away its gloom.
Faith points us to that better land
On the eternal shore,
Where kindred ones shall clasp the hand
And meet to part no more.
But is there not on earth below
A heaven we may enjoy.
Where streams of purest pleasure flow.
Unmixed with base alloy.
Oh, yes, there is a chain of gold
That binds humanity,
And brings them into one great fold—
'Tis god-like sympathy.
The heaven below and heaven above
In nature are the same
And holy sympathy and love,
Are the inspiring flames.
Heaven is the smile when others smile
The tear when others weep,
The kindly word where sorrow fills
Like billows dark and deep,
To lend the kindly helping hand
Where those in want repine,
And make the tear of gladness stand
In eyes where rapture shine.
'Tis Heaven to give with willing mind
To cheer the troubled heart;
Heaven to receive the gift so kind
Each share a blissful part.
Who would not bannish paltry self
And cast it to the wind
With all their towering heaps of pelf.
This heaven on earth to find.

A CHRISTMAS GIFT.

BY [illegible]

He was feeble and old, and his figure was drooping
As he sat there watching the boy in his sleep;
And tremulous shadows were waving about him
As the fire burned fitful with flicker and leap.

His hair was scanty and silvered with trouble—
White as the snow that was falling without;
His eyes were dim with an age of sorrow,
Wistful with hoping and anxious with doubt.

Poor old eyes! They were tender and loving,
Watching the feverish child's unrest;
Noting the pain on the delicate features,
That should have been close to a motherly breast.

Burning with fever the boy lay moaning,
His sunken cheeks were aglow with red,
And his little hands with their restless fingers
Wandered uneasily over the bed.

The aged watcher, with pleading anguish
[illegible]
A prayer of importunate, tender yearning
For the sweet young life that is fading there—

The one dear life that is left to care for,
O Blessed Christ! On thy natal day,
Out of thine infinite love and pity,
The hand of the dread destroyer stay!

But the boy sleeps on, and the snow is still falling
Out in the silent and sorrowful night,
And the shadows mock at the old man's figure,
Sitting there in the flickering light.

It is Christmas eve, and the thought came sudden,
Bringing a tear to his faded eye—
"The light of the Christmas sun will show me
If the little one is to live or die."

And his thoughts went back in a rush of feeling
To the Christmas days of the years long past;
Year by year, with their mournful burdens,
The sad procession came thronging past.

He thought of his own far distant childhood,
Careless and happy and gladsome and gay,
Asking no questions of fate or of fortune,
Eagerly looking for Christmas Day.

He thought of his manhood, reliant and fearless,
When Christmas brought him a fond young bride,
With a wealth of love in her eyes of beauty,
That was worth all wealth in the world beside.

And the years went on, and the children gathered
About the hearthstone, happy and bright;
And Christmas eve was a night of rejoicing,
And Christmas morning brought wild delight.

And the youngest child was the household's darling,
With sunny eyes that were bright with joy;
And he sees her well-remembered features
In the fevered face of the motherless boy.

Gone, all gone! and the snow is still falling
Out in the night as the hours go by;
And an ominous Presence within seems waiting—
Waiting to sever the last fond tie.

Gone is the wealth that was hard in winning;
Gone are children and home and wife;
Poor and broken and bent and aged,
He waits for the issue of death or life.

Sudden he stoops, with an anxious gesture—
The little sleeper makes a feeble moan—
His lips are moving, the words come trembling;
The old man listens and stifles a groan.

"Is it Christmas yet? It is long in coming!
Why is it hot? I am burning here!
Christmas comes in the winter weather—
It can't be Christmas yet, grandpa, dear.

"Christmas comes in the winter weather,
When the air is frosty and cold, I know;
You said I would hear the sleigh-bells jingle,
And bundle up and go out in the snow.

"And you said in the beautiful Christmas morning—
But it can't be morning, the room is so dark—
If I was good, so that He could love me,
The Christmas-child might bring me a Noah's ark.

"My throat is so sore!—will it ever be morning?
Grandpa, dear, I should like to pray
That the Christ-child would come and make me better
And take this pain in my head away."

The blue eyes close, but the lips are still moving,
And the little fingers are folded in prayer—
Till again he drops into the restless slumber,
And again the old man is watching him there;

Till he rises to place in a little stocking
A few loving gifts for the Christmas morn;
But, as he thinks, "Will the little one need them?"
The hot tears roll from his eyes forlorn.

And the hours go by, and out in the darkness
The chill white snow drops out of the sky,
Shrouding the world in a ghostly garment—
The dead, cold world, as the hours go by.

While up through the night to the throne of heaven—
Up to the pitying Christ on high—
The angels have carried the old man's prayer
And the broken words of the child's weak cry.

The night is passed and the clouds have vanished;
Cold and clear is the morning's light;
But still the aged eyes are watching,
Dim with the shadows that haunted the night.

But the face of the sleeping child is placid;
The fever is gone—will he waken to die?
The sweet eyes open in tranquil beauty—
Their blue is as clear as the morning sky.

And "Grandpa, dear," said his thin, weak treble,
"I thought my mamma was standing there;
Her face was white, but her eyes were loving,
And I'm sure it was her hand touched my hair.

"And the pain went out of my head that minute
And a pleasant feeling upon me fell;—
Grandpa, dear, did the Christ-child send her
Out of Heaven to make me well?

"And now it is Christmas morning, ain't it?
Is that the jingle of the sleigh-bells? Hark!
And there's my stocking!—Oh, see there, grandpa!
The Christ-child remembered my Noah's ark."

They are tears of joy the old man is shedding,
As his poor eyes blink in the rising sun,
For the blessed gift of that Christmas morning—
The precious life of the little one.

MY CHRISTMAS REVENGE.

I do not think there is any need of my explaining how it happened that I, who when born had expectations of quite a fair fortune, should have found myself, when womanhood came, obliged to earn my daily bread. But so it was; and in one of the large sewing machine emporiums (no matter which one) of a leading American city, I held a position as a teacher for several years.

My duties were very monotonous; but I used to extract a considerable amount of interest and amusement, while engaged in giving instruction, from learning the histories—and they were very varied—of my scholars. If the proverbial cup of tea unlocks the female tongue, I found that a lesson on the machine, and initiation into the mysteries of setting a needle, winding a bobbin, and regulating a tension, were even more conducive to communication. I do not wish to appear egotistical, but I must confess to quite a power which I seemed to possess of gaining the confidence of my pupils, through my habit of taking an interest in them; also that I was very fond of an "ower true tale;" perhaps some malicious critic would call my propensity by no higher name than female curiosity.

Even now, though time has brought its changes to me, and I no longer haunt the old familiar places, I often find myself recalling one and another among the many romances and stories in which I figured as an interested and sympathetic listener, and occasionally an unsuspected actor.

The present recollection always comes back to me at the Christmas time; and, therefore, when the season rolls around again, with its merriment and cheer, its mistletoe and holly, its written and unwritten tragedies and comedies of life, I feel like recounting it to others.

The position of instructress brought me almost entirely in contact with my own sex. Sometimes I had a male pupil—one of a mildly mechanical turn, who would wish to become familiar with the machine, so as to be able to assist some wife or sister; but the instruction room, as a rule, was usually quite free from frequent visits of the sterner sex.

During the fall of a special year I became conscious, however, that a certain Mr. Harry Lee, a gentleman whom I knew to be an intimate acquaintance of one of my employers, and whose face was quite well known to all in the establishment, began to occasionally drop into my department and look on during instruction hours. He was very pleasant and gentlemanly in his manners, and gave as an excuse for the interest he took, that he was a born Yankee, and therefore very fond of inventions.

Although there were other teachers, I discovered that he lingered most frequently in my vicinity, and seemed more interested in my conversation than that of my companions. I was young at the time, and no doubt had the usual desire of my sex to please. I felt flattered, perhaps, at his respectful attention, and took particular pains to make my observations on "what I knew about sewing machines" as intelligent as my limited powers permitted. He soon became a frequent visitor, and sometimes, when business was dull would linger and converse on other subjects besides the technicalities of the trade. I found that he was well educated, had traveled considerably in his own country; and knew, as they say, "men and things." His intimate friendship with one of the firm prevented any remarks as to the frequency of his visits; and he made the additional apology for possible intrusion, that he was very much at his leisure and sometimes thought of connecting himself with the business. I must admit that I was quite interested in him, and felt pleased when sometimes he would bring me some favorite book about which he had conversed and exchanged views, or ask my opinion on some magazine article that was engrossing public attention. I had never given a thought to his relations in life—whether he was married or single; he had simply been to me a pleasant episode among my daily labors; and the flash of his blue eyes and frank smile when he was saluting me, I at first considered as merely among the other usual incidents of my daily life.

It was during a somewhat extended conversation, one day, some weeks after our first acquaintance, that the thought flashed across my mind that he had seen trouble and was unhappy in connection with his affections. His opinions of the female sex, I discovered upon probing him a little, were not very enthusiastic or rose-colored. Sometimes, when speaking of marriage and its relations, I thought his remarks rather cynical and bitter; and once or twice he criticised some of my young and fashionable pupils very severely, seeming to have a very poor opinion of them as to their usefulness as probable wives and mothers. I naturally always defended my sex; and once when I laughingly expressed my belief that if I ever should see the woman destined to be his wife, it would no doubt be one of those same petty, useless, fashionable creatures against whom he railed so bitterly—a look of pain passed across his face, that set me to thinking that I had touched a sore spot in his experience.

We became very good friends, eventually; indeed, I am afraid that should I confess to the truth, we indulged a little in harmless and pleasant flirtation. I know that I was always pleased to see him; and I am sure that he often lingered beside me in a manner savoring a little of devotion. Still this was only on the surface; and I grew more and more certain, from a melancholy that often possessed him, that there was some secret connected with his domestic life of an unhappy character.

At last, from an accidental remark of one of my employers, I discovered the "skeleton in his closet." He was a married man, but separated from his wife. I think that I felt a little pained at the information and I certainly could not help the coldness of my manner when next I met him. He saw the change, and asked with his eyes for an explanation, though not with his tongue. Had he taken the latter liberty, it is very possible that I might have told him, and then—this story would never have been written! As it was, a few hours thoroughly calmed me; showed me something of the imprudence of which I had been guilty, in making so close an acquaintance with a man about whom I knew literally nothing; and roused all the woman within me, in pride and a dim suspicion of revenge.

That revenge was much nearer than I could possibly have dreamed; and unlike most revenges, no sorrow is entailed by the recollection. But of that anon. Following the discovery, the first thing I did was to enlarge it by ascertaining particulars—how, is a matter of no consequence in connection with this story. What I additionally discovered, however, is of consequence.

He had married a petted, wayward, beautiful girl—the only child of wealthy parents, who had by injudicious management fostered every weakness of her character. He had formed her acquaintance and married her after a short courtship, while on a visit to her native town, and after a few months removed to the city, where he now made his residence. He had brought her home to the house of his mother, who, with her sister, was of the true New England type. They were thorough-going, practical women, notable housekeepers, slightly Puritanical in their beliefs, and holding very little sympathy with youth and inexperience. The young wife was impulsive, unused to discipline of any kind, careless, ignorant of any habits of industry, but warm-hearted and affectionate. No doubt a very troublesome relative to the staid, methodical women with whom she took up her residence.

Unfortunately for the wife, also, her husband had been taught to look up to his mother and sister as the best of women, and had fondly fancied that when his new treasure came under their control all those little weaknesses, of which he had soon become aware after marriage, would be cured by their example and advice. But his sanguine hopes were doomed to early disappointment. Instead of his wife growing docile and yielding she became more willful and intractable, rebelled with a high spirit against any rule, and looked upon her husband more as a companion with whom to enjoy the amusements of fashionable society, than as a helpmate and friend with whom to pass through the trials and cares of life. Still she had a kind heart and warm affections; and had more love and sympathy been exhibited in connection with efforts to change her habits, and less cold, severe exactions shown on the part of her husband's relatives, the event might have been better for all. At last the usual result followed. Quarrels became of frequent occurrence; estrangement grew up between husband and wife; and it was only a year after their marriage that the young wife, one day, after a passionate outbreak and most unhappy scene with her husband, left his home and returned to that of her parents. Here she was not only received with open arms, but condoled and sympathized with to her great injury—a divorce proposed, and all chance of reconciliation destroyed.

Such was the painful story, as I gathered the particulars—no rare one in the world, I am quite aware, and yet sad enough as embodying the wreck of two lives. Perhaps a knowledge of the whole softened my pride toward Mr. Lee a trifle, though it by no means cured my wounded self-respect or put me more at ease with myself. What more acquaintance might have followed is uncertain; perhaps none whatever, under the changed conditions; nor have I the clearest idea how my revenge would have been accomplished, had I not been favored by new and unexpected circumstances.

It was in the month of December that one very cold and blustering morning a lady was ushered into the instruction-room by one of the salesmen. She was a young and remarkably pretty woman, as I discovered at the first glance, and dressed very becomingly in the prevailing mode. The usual remarks that "she was afraid she would be stupid," and my reassurance that I had taught pupils from 12 to 80 in age, and from Irish Norah to the Hon. Mrs. Highflyer in position, passed between us; and then, after feet were comfortably warmed, and gloves removed, the lesson began. Upon the raising of her veil, as she seated herself, I discovered that her beautiful brown eyes showed traces of recent tears; and several times as the lesson progressed an unconsciously drawn long sigh or sob proved very plainly that she had lately passed through some strong emotion, and that nature was kindly restoring the equilibrium.

In the course of the lesson, that day, she told me that she was married and the mother of a little boy somewhat over a year old. She hinted at trouble in connection with her marriage relations, and of late news that had caused the past night to be spent very unhappily. She seemed low-spirited, and deeply ashamed of her ignorance as regarded all knowledge of sewing or the construction of the simplest garment. I encouraged her—told her that patience and application were only necessary, as she showed very good natural abilities and would learn easily. But she replied sadly that she was afraid that those were virtues she had never cultivated, nor even until lately deemed at all necessary. She assured me that I could form no idea how useless and helpless she had been. She had never liked to sew, and her mother had never wished her to do so, telling her that there were plenty of poor people who would be glad to do such labor instead. She hoped I would not laugh at some of her no doubt trifling and silly questions, as she had never even made a garment of any kind in her life—not even a little one for her baby! I laughed good-naturedly; I could not help it; and told her that she took too severe a view of her deficiencies—that there were plenty of other ladies just like her; but she said, smiling a little mournfully in return, that if I knew how bitterly she had lately begun to understand what an uneducated woman in useful matters she was, and how inconvenient she had found the position, I would not wonder at her desire to do better.

The first lesson was succeeded by others, for several days following, during which I learned that she had been married between two and three years; that she had always before her marriage led a gay and luxurious existence, perhaps because she had never known of any other, her parents being fashionable butterflies; that she had passed through a great sorrow, been very sick when her babe was born, and was now just beginning to appreciate some of the realities of life. She confessed that it was when recovering from a sick-bed, and among the new and strange feelings that came with the birth of her babe, that she had awakened to the truth, and listened to the promptings, always before ignored, of her more practical nature. That it was through the advice of a kind friend, who had been with her through her sickness, that she had purchased a sewing-machine, the friend believing that it would be a good beginning in her efforts to do something useful.

All this my new pupil did not tell me in so many words, but it was the substance of what I gathered by degrees. I was very much interested (as usual); and one day, as she was leaving, casually remarked that her husband was no doubt pleased at her progress in mastering the mystery. Then I heard what I had almost before suspected, as with tears filling her eyes she said that she had no husband in one sense—that she had separated from him—that it was her own fault—an act done by herself in hot anger and rage, but now bitterly repented. She indicated that there were others to blame, but did not excuse herself; and said that she had spent the night previous to the day on which she had taken her first lesson, in great grief from learning that he was very soon to sail for Europe, and the thought that they would then be utterly and forever separated had nearly driven her to distraction.

I felt very sorry—never more so for any human being; her repentance was so sincere and her sorrow so hopeless. A dim suspicion had been creeping through my mind during this last relation, that I had heard a story something akin to this before; and as she was about leaving I reminded her that although we were well acquainted as teacher and pupil, I had never yet heard her name. Apologizing for her remissness, she handed me a card as she left the room. I will not say that I was very much surprised, for I had half guessed the coincidence by intuition—when I read on the card I held in my hand, "Mrs. Gracie Lee."

Yes, it was Harry Lee's wife who had been my pupil! A great many strange feelings were at work within my breast during the next ten minutes. I had not seen Mr. Lee for some time; he had avoided the instruction room—a course of conduct for which I had been thankful. I had heard nothing of his intention of going to Europe, and felt sure it must be a new project, very suddenly thought of. And why? Had my actions anything to do with it? I felt sorely distressed before I had done thinking out the whole matter; and I might have been even more so had I not possessed a resource always so dear to women and children—that of doing something.

Now the rest of this is going to be very brief. On my bed, that night, the desire to "do something," born of the necessity, took practical shape, and I saw my way to my revenge on Harry Lee. Dickens' Christmas stories were then in the height of their popularity; I had been fascinated by them, and to their influence and that of the approaching holy season perhaps my plans were chiefly due. I hope my imaginary blushes may be spared, when I say that to accomplish it I took occasion to throw myself into Mr. Lee's way (of course by apparent accident), and that within a week I had won him back to the instruction room and the renewal of our friendly chats, though at such hours (late in the afternoon) that there was no chance of his meeting his wife. That I never labored harder with any pupil than with that willing but nervous little lady, to enable her rapidly to become not only proficient at the machine but to seem so. Then that I progressed by making an appointment with Mrs. Lee, on some excuse as to my convenience, at 4 o'clock on the afternoon before Christmas—(Christmas Eve at a very early stage of the anniversary), and meanwhile gained a character for benevolence by telling my companions in teaching that they had better go home early and thus enjoy the gay sights and sounds presented by the streets on that festive season. And then I crowned the whole by making another appointment with Mr. Harry Lee, for the same place, half an hour later, having in view the necessity of bringing him unexpectedly upon his wife at the very moment when she should be sewing away at the top of her ability.

Once upon a time I kept an extraordinary bug that I had captured, under a glass tumbler, for days, to see the change by which it would become something else. It effected the change one night when I could not see it, and I was left very little wiser than before. And I know not much more about the meeting between Harry Lee and his wife, over the sewing machine, that evening before Christmas; as (confound it!) I felt myself obliged to leave them alone together just at the interesting moment, and they had made it all up before I thought it proper to return!

However, I had my revenge. Mr. Lee (I wish to be understood and believed on this point) never flirted any more with me, however mildly—"never no more." He went to Europe, but a little later, and took his wife, leaving his little son with his notable New England mother, who was sure to take good care of him though she might not permit him to romp too hilariously. They were kind enough to believe that I had been of service to them; and I was the recipient of certain rings, one of which Harry Lee gave me with what I thought was rather a conscious look, and the other of which Gracie Lee gave me with no shamefacedness and a hearty kiss.

I saw them together, and at home again, in a pretty new home over which, taught by some mistakes in the past, the wife was sole mistress, apparently very happy, the next Christmas; and I think that Mrs. Lee, under some sort of idea that she owed the recovery of her husband to her sewing machine, looked upon that useful article as a species of good fairy, and her seat at it as a place of refuge, and always was to be found sewing when things went all crooked in the household.

My after acquaintance with them, at all events, showed that the indolent, useless, and self-willed wife had become the busy, useful, and gentle one; and that the husband, who had begun by misunderstanding her, had come fully back to his senses, and grown much wiser as to the quality of the woman with whom he had been intrusted. And something of this, if not all of it, was the result of a little flirtation nipped in the bud, and of My Christmas Revenge.—Aldine.

Madeira-Nut Scent Cases.

For these bright little affairs two large fair Madeira nuts or English walnuts are required. Halve them carefully by forcing the points of your scissors into the soft end. Scrape the inside perfectly clean, heat a hair-pin red-hot in a candle blaze or gas jet, and with it bore two small holes opposite each other at each end of the shell; varnish with gum shellac dissolved in alcohol, then set them in a warm place till perfectly dry. Make a bright-colored silk bag three inches and a half square, with a hem at one end and a place for a drawing-string. Sew on the nuts, at equal distances, a little way above the unhemmed end; run a thread round that edge, draw it up tight and finish with a little bow. Form the other end into a bag by running a narrow ribbon into a drawing hem. Last of all set a tiny bow at the top of each shell, and fill the bag with cotton wool sprinkled thickly with sachet-powder.

A tiny glove or bon-bon case can be made by using two half shells of a Madeira nut, treated in a similar manner, piercing them with holes in the middle as well as top, and tying them together with very narrow colored ribbon. Of course they hold only a very small pair of gloves. They are pretty objects to hang upon a Christmas tree.—St. Nicholas for December.

Alonzo the Brave

Mr. Alonzo Potts occupies the honorable and responsible position of head clerk in a shop in a certain town in Vermont. Now, in that emporium was a skeleton woman used for bringing out the glories of the dry goods, which Mr. Potts had ordered to be removed; but when he came in and thought he saw it still in its place, with that exuberance of spirits which head clerks sometimes exhibit, he threw his arms about the fascinating dummy, pretending to be overcome by its exceeding beauty. Heavens! A scream from the skeleton! Mr. Potts had encircled a lovely and living creature! Fleeing from the mart, she narrated the indignity to her husband. He went to Potts, who soothed him with six pounds of sweet potatoes. We would not be uncharitable, but a stern regard for historical truth impels the query, did Potts really make a mistake? His name even is very suspicious. These Alonzos are always looking out for fair Imogenes; but as for the husband of the embraced-by-mistake, what shall we say of him? Six pounds of sweet potatoes, indeed!

Interesting Testimony at the Trial of the Alleged Murderer of Mabel H. Young, in Boston.

At the trial in Boston of Thomas W. Piper for the murder of Mabel H. Young in the belfry of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, on Sunday, May 23, Dr. Joshua B. Treadwell, who took part in the autopsy, described the injuries of the child, and said that death was caused by the wounds on the head; these must have been produced by a swift, hard blow of a rapidly moving object. Witness described the appearance of the blood spots in the church tower and on the window sill; those on the sill might have been made by a man's hand which was bloody. The witness then described minutely the examination he had made of Piper's clothing; he found a spot on the left sleeve of the coat that looked like blood, on the left lappel, and two others close by, and there were indications that other spots had been washed or rubbed; on opening the coat he found a hair adhering to the breast inside; it was a scalp hair; the bulb was on it and appeared fresh; afterward, in a fortnight, it was shrunken, showing that when he first saw it it had recently been pulled from a head; there is a difference, he continued, in certain heads between the hair of a child and an adult; he had been to No. 50 East Chester Park; was there on the 18th of October; took some hair said to be the hair of Mabel Young; examined it under the microscope; had quite a wad of it; some of it had the bulb attached; [a question of identity of the hair was raised by the defense, but the Court ruled that testimony could be taken. The defense took exception to the same.] The doctor continued: The hair was in the neighborhood of seven and a half inches in length; at autopsy found the hair was longer on the back; the hair at the autopsy was cut close to the scalp; had examined hair several times [witness here defined the characteristics of hair by which hair of different heads can be classified]; he used a power of 500 diameters in his microscopic examination; the hair he took from the coat was a remarkably smooth hair; the transverse lines were not far apart, did not run across the hair, were regular distances apart, the pith extended nearly the whole length, broken at intervals; it was a remarkably large hair; the color was quite light; measured at first 160th of an inch in diameter, it shrank to 240th of an inch; the hair had not been cut for some time, and so tapered at the ends; on the hair was some excretion; on the bunch of hairs taken from East Chester Park found nineteen with a bulb; on three of them found an excretion the same as on the single hair taken from the coat; they corresponded in lines, in smoothness, in size; sixteen showed the pith of the character of the single one; the color under the microscope was the same; the average diameter of these hairs was one 264th of an inch; the smallest was one 333d of an inch; the largest, one 241st part of an inch; had examined hair found in a good many heads, but this hair was so peculiar could identify it as belonging to the hairs taken from Mabel's head; taking 500 of the hairs cut, about 300 had pith well marked; in other words, in this hair was an unusual number that had pith; the hair had the same general, the same special characteristics as that taken from Mr. Hobbs; hairs that fall usually fall with a shrunken bulb, caused by disease; could tell whether a hair was pulled out or had fallen from a head.

A Quill with a History.

A citizen of Lexington, Ky., has in his possession a quill of a condor which has a history. It was given to Henry Clay in 1824, with an injunction never to cut it until he was elected President, when he was to write his first message with it. In case he was not elected it was not to be cut until a "constitutional President wrote a constitutional message for all the States." After Mr. Clay's death it was given to Millard Fillmore, but he was likewise unable to use it. During the last campaign the owner determined to give it to Mr. Greeley should he be elected. The quill, which is still uncut, is over three feet long, and is as large round as a man's thumb.

Christmas Pie.

Christmas pie has succeeded Christmas tree. The pie is a jolly English custom, and very amusing when there is a large company of intimate friends. It is made of sawdust, stuffed with gifts and favors for the German that is to follow, and baked in an enormous wooden tub, decorated with holly berries, gold foil, and gay pictures. It stands in in the center of the drawing-room on a piece of canvas to protect the carpet, and each guest is allowed to take three spoonfuls. If he gets a present with his name on it, there is a shout of applause; but if he fishes out some one else's, back it has to go, and the pie is stirred up again, and that person takes his or her turn.

Old Bozer, up on Pine street, is a mean father. When one of his boys asks him for a pair of skates he inquires: "My son, would you lay your life down for me?" "Yes, father, I would," is the reply. "Then you can't have the skates, for to die for me would be wicked and uncalled for!" says the father. Then when the other boy asks for a sled the father inquires: "My son, would you die for me?" "No, sir," promptly replies the boy. "You wouldn't, eh? Well, a boy who wouldn't die for his father doesn't deserve a sled, and you won't get one!" And by working it that way Old Bozer keeps the whole family on the edge of ragged despair.

AN OLD BOY'S LAMENT.

I hung my stocking to the knob
Upon my chamber door,
And hoped to have it nicely filled
As in the days of yore.
I think it is a crying shame
Old Santy comes no more!

I'm sure I like my candy-horn
As well as when a boy,
And I could ride a hobby horse
And blow a trumpet toy,
Nor do I yet deny myself
One single youthful joy.

I am not growing old! 'Tis false!
I'm younger now than when
Upon a table battle field
I fought my mimic men.
I'm just as fond of ginger-snaps
And cookies, now as then.

I really think it is too bad,
For when I go to see,
With faith in good St. Nicholas,
There is not even a tree
Upspringing through the parlor floor,
As there was wont to be.

What have become of hoops and tops,
Of marbles, balls and sleds,
And all the ruddy waxen dolls,
With tow upon their heads,
Who used to wink facetiously
From out their tiny beds?

Good Santy has deserted me
For boys of lesser size,
And though I think it very hard
To miss the old surprise,
Perhaps, who knows? I am too old,
And Nicholas is wise!

The Prohibitory law being in full force in Maine, a witness before a Belfast Grand Jury was asked if he had drank in a certain saloon. "Yes." "Often?" "Yes." "How much in six months?" "Well, I can't tell exactly. It might be—well—perhaps—well, say a barrel?"

Lady to servant: "Mary, I do not approve of your entertaining your sweetheart in the kitchen." Mary: "Well, ma'am, its very kind o' you to mention it; but he's from the country, you see, ma'am, and I'm afraid he's too shy and orkurd in his manners, ma'am, for you to like him to come up stairs!"

The following anecdote is told of John Philpot Curran. In his last illness he was very restless and unable to sleep. His physician gave him a strong sleeping draught, and after he had taken it, said to him, "There Mr. Curran, now you will sleep like a top." "Ah," said Curran, "I know, just as usual—keep on turning round and round."

The other day a Vicksburg father gently said: "Don't stuff victuals into your mouth in that way, my son; George Washington didn't eat after that fashion." OUGH!

From ocean's briny waste, the sea-bred chough—
His humble pittance draws, and cries enough!

The burly ox, oppressed with husky cough,
Slacks his hot thirst from out the cooling trough.

The rustic, resting from his brightened plough,
The ripe fruit plucks from richly-ladened bough.

The doughty housewife chatters on, although
The light cake rises from the kneaded dough.

The churl, more rude, bewails a pathway rough,
And chants a constant growl, that times are tough.

CHRISTMAS COMING.

Feathery flakes are sifting, sifting,
Through the chill December air—
Here, and there, and yonder drifting,
Making everything more fair;
Laying whiter folds than linen
On the houses and the trees,
Softer than the richest damask
Spread our dainty guests to please.

Soon the bon-bons will be falling,
As the flakes have fallen to-day,
And the children will be calling
To their Patron-Saint so gay;
"Ah! we knew, when came the snow-flakes,
You would come, dear Santa Claus;
For we always (you remember)
Know the wind's way by the straws."

Soon the trees, as fair as any
That the elves have wreathed with snow,
Will be planted—oh! so many
In our many homes—and lo!
Something better far than snow-flakes
Shall be hung about their green—
Candies, toys, and fairy tapers
Lighting up the merry scene.

And the children, dancing, dancing,
Till all tired their little feet,
Shall, with half-shut eyes upglancing,
Wonder, "Why is life so sweet?"
And some tender voice shall whisper—
Flake-like falling from above—
"Christmas is so sweet, my darling,
Just because its King is Love."

The people of Chicago seem to have lost their appetite for the lofty grandeurs of the legitimate drama. The manager of McVicker's Theater recently paid Barry Sullivan, one of the finest actors of the age, the extraordinary sum of $2,100 in gold for seven performances. The result was anything but encouraging to similar ventures. While Sullivan was giving his finished and intellectual entertainments to slim houses, the leg drama and burnt-cork opera at the second-class places of amusement were drawing large audiences. Evidently a padded limb or a stale negro minstrel joke is relished more highly by the average Chicagoan than the grand old plays of Shakespeare in the hands of a master tragedian and elocutionist.

A Tremendous Hog.—The big hog of this or any other season passed along the street Monday evening en route to the slaughter-pen. He weighed 740 pounds, and looked as big as he weighed. He was raised by Mr. Samuel Anderson, on Beaver Creek, in this county, and was sold by him to Giles Y. Buford & Co., of our town. He was a monster, and attracted more than an average share of attention from street-passers and shopkeepers generally.—Glasgow (Ky.) Times.

OCEAN'S PERILS.

Particulars of the Wrecking of the Steamship Deutschland—Frightful Scenes of Suffering in the Fated Ship.

The steamer Deutschland, from Bremen for New York, foundered in a gale on the east coast of England, on the morning of Monday, Dec. 6, and 78 of her passengers and crew perished. The cable gives the following particulars of the disaster:

Quartermaster August, in his statement, says that the name of the Captain of the Deutschland is Busius. The steamer left Bremen on Sunday morning and struck the Kentish Knock on Sunday evening. Every effort was made to get her off, but in vain. The sea washed over the ship, carrying away much of her gear. The Captain kept very cool. Immediately after the ship struck, the Captain ordered the life-belts to be distributed among the passengers and crew. The next morning, as it was thought the ship was about to break up, the order was given to lower the boats. August and two seamen were detailed to man one of the boats, which capsized twice in lowering. When she righted they drifted away from the steamer. They tried to pull back but could not.

A heavy snow-storm prevailed and the weather was piercing cold. His two companions perished from exposure. August says the crew numbered 130. When he last saw the steamer endeavors were being made to launch all the boats. The Deutschland fired rockets all day on Monday and until Tuesday morning, and although they were seen from Harwich, it was impracticable to send assistance until the gale moderated.

At 4 o'clock on Tuesday morning the tug Liverpool brought fifty-one persons, including all the officers except the fourth. One child died on board the tug. The number of dead bodies in the steamer's cabin was fifty, and the others are probably in the boats which are missing. So far only about fifty-four are known to be saved.

Breck, the Quartermaster, is apparently dying, his swollen and blackened appearance indicating frostbite. His narrative was given with great difficulty. He said his boat was attached to the ship by a rope, which broke, and the boat fell to the leeward. There being no oars it was impossible to return, so a sail was rigged and the boat drove before the wind all day, and on the following night the steerage passenger, named Fornstein, being lightly clad and without shoes and stockings, soon died, and the seaman shortly after. The scene at the wreck, on the arrival of the tug defies description. Strong men, women, and children were clinging to the rigging, from which many had been washed away. Some were in their last struggles. In the cabin were seen the corpses of ladies and children just as they retired. One hundred and forty persons were taken off by the tug, with scant clothing. On arriving at Harwich the survivors were taken charge of by the German Consul, Oliver John Williams, who provided them with food, clothing, lodging, and glad rest, after so many hours of exposure to the most severe frost experienced this present winter. According to the Lloyds, the Deutschland had two first, twenty-four second-class, and ninety-seven steerage passengers, and a crew of seventy-five, but others say more.

The Speed of Railway Trains.

Trains are now run at about the rate of forty miles an hour—sometimes much faster, and generally somewhat slower. The fastest trains in England run at sixty miles an hour. To run at this rate, the piston or driving-rod of the locomotive must travel at the speed of 800 feet per minute, or so rapidly that it cannot be seen to move at all. George Stephenson, the first to claim that the locomotive could run at twelve miles an hour, was called insane until he proved it. It was but a few years after this that prominent engineers said that railway trains could be regularly run at the rate of 100 miles an hour; and Stephenson was again called insane because he said that fifty miles an hour was as fast as trains could be regularly and safely run. But it is now discovered that he was nearly right, and locomotive-makers are no longer building engines to run faster than at this rate. But they are trying, instead, to save time lost in taking coal and water for supplying the engines.

On some lines a long open trough, forty feet long, is laid between the rails. This is filled with water. As the locomotive passes at the speed of fifty miles an hour, a pipe or scoop is lowered from it into his trough; the water is thus dipped up and placed in the water-box for use by the engine. Another invention is a huge box raised above the road and filled with coal. As the locomotive passes, it touches a spring, the box turns instantly upside down, and the coal drops into the tender, which runs behind the locomotive. The time which is thus saved will of course make the trips shorter, without calling for an increase of speed. It may be that when you are grown, railway trains will not be run any faster than they are now; but, in spite of what George Stephenson has prophesied, I suspect some future American engineer, who is now a boy, will find means of running them twice as fast as they are now run, and I hope with greater safety to the passengers.—St. Nicholas for December.

African War Tactics

The heathen Africans who are waging war against the Republic of Liberia, that feeble nursling of our old Colonization Society, have adopted an effective method of living off the enemy, as a recent letter shows. When they kill or capture a Liberian, they cut off his head and right hand, which are carefully dried and preserved, and broil and eat the rest of him. This simple plan saves the trouble of guarding prisoners and burying the dead. It greatly simplifies the commissariat department of the army. Instead of the conquerors feeding captives, the captives are made to feed them. There can be no doubt that the assailants feel a stern joy in meeting foemen worthy of their stomach. The little Republic seems to be in a bad way. It deserves sympathy for its gallant fight, especially since the war was begun by an attempt on its part to suppress the Cape Palmas slave trade. England and the United States have both been asked for aid. It is certainly a hard fate for a man to be broiled beneath an African sun for many years, only to be finally broiled for an African stomach. The only possible revenge is to make yourself so tough beforehand that your devourer will have the nightmare for a night and dyspepsia forever after.—Chicago Tribune.

The Home Doctor.

CHILBLAINS.

The best application in the world for frosted feet or chilblains is to pour spirits of turpentine or coal oil on the stockings and in the boots. Almost immediate relief is given.

PIMPLES.

Pimples on the face usually indicate some defect of nutrition or some error in food. Many persons, on the adoption of a wise and reasonable diet, become for the first time free from pimples; therefore, instead of doctoring them with medicines, you should look well to your habits of life, improve your digestion, wisely regulate the diet, and keep the skin active by proper bathing, and much life out of doors. Few people, especially women, appreciate the good effects of outdoor life, unconstrained by tight dresses.

TO AVOID SLEEPLESSNESS.

If you wish to sleep well, eat sparingly of early suppers. Avoid all arguments or contested subjects near night, as well as any train of thoughts rehearsing injuries, even if real, as all of these are likely to have a bad effect upon a person who is apt to be sleepless at night. Avoid having too much company. Many persons become so excited with the meeting of friends that sleep departs for a time. There is probably nothing better, after cultivating a tranquil mind, than exercise in the open air. By observing these simple rules, sleeplessness, in the majority of instances, may be wholly cured.

WARTS.

Warts are very troublesome and disfiguring. The following is a perfect cure, even of the largest, without leaving any scar. It is a Frenchman's prescription, and has been tested by the writer: Take a small piece of raw beef, steep it at night in vinegar, cut as much from it as will cover the wart, and tie it on; if the excrescence is on the forehead, fasten it on with strips of sticking-plaster. It may be removed in the day and put on every night. In one fortnight the wart will die and peel off. The same prescription will cure corns.

HEARTY BREAKFASTS.

In a large majority of cases, says the Journal of Health, it will be found that the best and healthiest meal of the day should be eaten in the morning. If the closing repast of the day has not been eaten too late, or has not been excessive in quantity or indigestible in quality, the stomach will be rested and active in the morning after the individual has enjoyed a cool bath. The stomach will then respond quickly with the necessary gastric juice for the solution of food, and, if a fair amount of exercise is taken during the day, a large mass of food will be assimilated and converted into blood and tissue. With a good, substantial breakfast no great amount of food will be required during the remainder of the day.

HOW TO TREAT WOUNDS.

Every person should know how to treat a flesh wound. Every one is liable to be placed in circumstances away from surgical and veterinary aid, where he may save his own life, the life of a friend or a beast, simply by the exercise of little common sense. In the first place, close the lips of the wound within the hands and hold them firmly together to check the flow of blood until several stitches can be taken and a bandage applied. Then bathe the wound for a long time in cold water. "Should it be painful," a correspondent says, "take a panful of burning coals and sprinkle upon them common brown sugar and hold the wounded part in the smoke. In a minute or two the pain will be allayed, and the recovery proceeds rapidly. In my case a rusty nail had made a bad wound in my foot. The pain and nervous irritation were severe. This was all removed by holding it in smoke fifteen minutes, and I was able to resume my reading in comfort. We have often recommended it to others with like result. Last week one of my men had a finger-nail torn our by a pair of ice-tongs. It became very painful, as was to be expected. Held in sugar smoke twenty minutes, pain ceased, and promised speedy recovery."

TO REMOVE FOREIGN BODIES FROM THE EYE.

A medical correspondent of the London Lancet makes a suggestion which may prove useful on emergency to some of our readers. He says:

"In consequence of the difficulty I experienced in removing from a patient a portion of steel imbedded in the cornea, which did not yield to spud or needle, some other means of removal became necessary. Dry, soft white silk waste suggested itself to me, and was wound round a thin piece of wood, so as to completely envelop the end. This soft application was brushed once backward and forward horizontally over the part of the cornea where the foreign substance was fixed. To my astonishment, it was at once entangled by the delicate but strong meshes of the silk, and was withdrawn with the greatest ease, caught by the same. A gentleman, in turning steel at a lathe, suddenly felt that a portion had entered his eye. He went at once to a surgeon, who, with the most skillful manipulation, failed to extract the same, saying it would soon work out of itself. The next morning the patient saw me, having suffered severely since the accident, and on the first application the portion of steel was extracted."

Mr. Kerr, the new Speaker, is a tall, stately man, more than six feet in height, broad-shouldered, with a head well poised, a full growth of brown hair, and eyes that seem to read you through at a glance. His scholarship is of the highest order; books are his dearest companions, and his judgment of men is keen and discriminating. The man is wholly practical. There is no element of humor or romance about him, and his manners are dignified almost to austerity. He is 47 years old.

The Utica Herald gives the total number of freight cars which have passed a given point on the New York Central Railroad—Little Falls—for the last decade. The total number going West was 2,192,943; going East, 2,178,060, making a grand total of over 4,000,000. The increase is rapid. The amount of business has nearly trebled in ten years.

Permanent Cure for Cancer.

Mrs. M. A. V. gives in the Country Gentleman, this process for curing cancer: A sticking plaster is put over the cancer, with a circular piece cut out of the center a little larger than the cancer, and a small circular rim of healthy skin next to it is exposed. Then a plaster made of chloride of zinc, blood root and wheat flour, is spread on a piece of muslin of the size of the circular opening, and is applied to the cancer for twenty-four hours. On removing it the cancer will be found as though burned into, appearing of the color and hardness of an old shoe, and the circular rim outside of it will appear white and parboiled as if scalded by hot steam. The wound is now dressed, and the outside rim soon suppurates, and the cancer comes out a hard lump, and the place heals up. The plaster kills the cancer, so that it sloughs out like dead flesh, and never grows again. The application is painful, but the pain is of comparatively brief duration, which any one so affected cheerfully endures. Not a case has been known of the reappearance of the cancer where this remedy has been applied. This cure for cancer was published in 1866. Perhaps there are many who can tell more about it.

Why Hans Christian Andersen Didn't Marry.

It was on his journey through Zealand, Funen and Jutland, that he met a young girl with whom he fell deeply in love, but who, unfortunately, at the time was engaged to another man, and as Andersen never met another woman that he could love as he loved this girl, he remained unmarried all his life. Many years later, a peasant girl, who had heard about him as a great and world-renowned poet, whom all men honored—and who, I believe, had also read some of his stories—took it into her head that he was the one man she wanted to marry. So she started out for Copenhagen, where Andersen was then living, went to his house, and told him her errand. You can imagine how astonished he must have been at being told by a young, handsome girl that she wished to marry him. "I should be so very good to you," said she, "and always take good care of you." "But, my dear girl, I don't wish to be married," answered he; and she departed as suddenly as she had come.

The Woman Question.

The woman question is no American question, no national question. It is a question for the whole world, and the best men of every country and of every age have held one view upon it, and the worst men have naturally held the other view. It is not a question of mere taxation; it is a question of thorough humanity; a question not of mere geographical limitation, not of America, not of England, not of France, not of Italy, not of Spain; but were it a question in any of these countries, a woman would stand up to show you that woman can do woman's work of making man truer and purer—and there is no age of the world that you cannot find some woman who has shone out in the darkness of night to show you that, though other stars were obscured, she could still shine; and whenever woman suffrage is debated, my voice is at their service, for the grander woman is made, the purer will man be. —Charles Bradlaugh.

Chicago, with her botch of a new Custom House building, can laugh at more unfortunate Albany, N. Y.; for, according to the report of the committee of master builders appointed by Gov. Tilden to examine the construction of the new Capitol building in that city, the management and manner of construction evince a degree of negligence or want of competent skill to an extent without parallel in the history of their observation, and that the continuance of the work will involve the necessity of tearing down and reconstructing extensive portions of the structure at very great loss.

When the Pawnees emigrated to the Indian Territory, a few weeks ago, they were compelled to leave their dogs behind, not being able to induce them to follow. It is a curious fact, considering that their dogs always lived with them on perfect equality, that they would not leave the reservation. People from the reservation, and travelers through, report that hundreds of howling, yelping curs are running around the old camping grounds of the Pawnees, hunting for something to eat.

Symptoms of Catarrh.

Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody, and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a nasal twang, the breath is offensive, smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, mental depression, hacking cough, and general debility. Only a few of the above-named symptoms are, however, likely to be present in any one case. There is no disease more common than Catarrh, and none less understood by physicians.

DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY

is, beyond all comparison, the best preparation for Catarrh ever discovered. Under the influence of its mild, soothing, and healing properties, the disease soon yields. The Golden Medical Discovery should be taken to correct the blood, which is always at fault, and to act specifically upon the diseased glands and lining membrane of the nose. The Catarrh Remedy should be applied warm with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche—the only instrument by which fluids can be perfectly injected to all the passages and chambers of the nose from which discharges proceed.

These medicines are sold by Druggists.

Perry Anonymous, a colored man, who handled baggage for several years for the Pennsylvania Railroad at Altoona, died recently. The name of his father was never known, and a gentleman who raised him called him Perry Anonymous. At his death he was worth $8,000, which he is said to have bequeathed to Mrs. Sarah Moran, a widow with whom he had resided for many years.

Persons who have become thoroughly chilled from any cause, may have their circulation at once restored by taking into the stomach a teaspoonful of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment mixed in a little cold water, well sweetened.

Every farmer who owns a good stock of horses, cattle and sheep, and intends to keep them through the winter, should get at once a good stock of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders. One dollar's worth will save at least a half ton of hay.

Pimples on the face, rough skin, chapped hands, saltrheum and all cutaneous affections cured, the skin made soft and smooth, by the use of Juniper Tar Soap. That made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, is the only kind that can be relied on, as there are many imitations, made from common tar, which are worthless.

Vegetine has never failed to effect a cure, giving tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease. No medicine has attained such a great reputation as this justly celebrated compound.

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS.

Will be found to possess those qualities necessary to the total eradication of all bilious attacks, prompt to start the secretions of the liver, and give a healthy tone to the entire system. Indeed, it is no ordinary discovery in medical science to have invented a remedy for these stubborn complaints, which develop all the results produced by a heroic use of calomel, a mineral justly dreaded by mankind, and acknowledged to be destructive in the extreme to the human system. That the properties of certain vegetables comprise all the virtues of calomel without its injurious tendencies, is now an admitted fact, rendered indisputable by scientific researches; and those who use the Mandrake Pills will be fully satisfied that the best medicines are those provided by nature in the common herbs and roots of the fields.

These pills open the bowels and correct all bilious derangements without salivation or any of the injurious effects of calomel or other poisons. The secretion of bile is promoted by these pills, as will be seen by the altered color of the stools, and disappearing of the sallow complexion and cleansing of the tongue.

Ample directions for use accompany each box of pills. Prepared only by J. H. Schenck & Son, at their principal office, corner Sixth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, and for sale by all druggists and dealers. Price 25 cents per box.

For 1876. A NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF THE MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS, 24 Quarto Pages, is now ready, with PRICE LIST; and very full information, presenting accurate drawings of these celebrated instruments, with detailed descriptions; including many new styles, with valuable improvements; new stops and elegant cases.

It is not questioned by disinterested judges that these are THE BEST OF ALL INSTRUMENTS OF THIS CLASS; unequaled, and, if judged critically, unapproached by others. Their fame is world-wide. They have ALWAYS obtained highest awards in American Industrial Expositions, and received FOUR FIRST MEDALS and DIPLOMA OF HONOR at the GREAT WORLD'S EXPOSITIONS in PARIS, 1867; VIENNA, 1873; and LINZ (Austria), 1875, being the only American organs which ever received any premium in competition with the best products of European makers. The best musicians in Europe and America pronounce them unequaled.

Prices as low as consistent with best workmanship and material, and lower than those commonly demanded for very inferior instruments. Organs sold for cash or time payments, or rented until rent pays for them.

Every one thinking of buying an organ should at least see this new catalogue. It will be sent free and postpaid. Address the MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN CO., 154 Tremont Street, BOSTON; 25 Union Square, NEW YORK; or 80 and 82 Adams Street, CHICAGO.

The Wonders of Modern Chemistry. Sarsaparillian and Its Associates. Changes as Seen and Felt as They Daily Occur after Using a Few Doses of DR. RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent, THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

1. Good spirits, disappearance of weakness, languor, melancholy; increase and hardness of flesh and muscles, etc.

2. Strength increases, appetite improves, relish for food, no more sour eructations or waterbrash, good digestion, calm and undisturbed sleep, awaken fresh and vigorous.

3. Disappearance of spots, blotches, pimples; the skin looks clear and healthy, the urine changed from its turbid and cloudy appearance to a clear sherry or amber color; water passes freely from the bladder through the urethra without pain or scalding; little or no sediment; no pain or weakness.

4. Marked diminution of quantity and frequency of involuntary weakening discharges (if afflicted that way), with certainty of permanent cure. Increased strength exhibited in the secreting glands, and functional harmony restored to the several organs.

5. Yellow tinge on the white of the eyes, and the swarthy, saffron appearance of the skin changed to a clear, lively and healthy color.

6. Those suffering from weak or ulcerated lungs or tubercles will realize great benefit in expectorating freely the tough phlegm or mucous from the lungs, air cells, bronchi or windpipe, throat or head; diminishing of the frequency of cough; general increase of strength throughout the system; stoppage of night sweats and pains and feeling of weakness around the ankles, legs, shoulders, etc.; cessation of cold and chills, sense of suffocation; hard breathing and paroxysms of cough on lying down or arising in the morning. All these distressing symptoms gradually and surely disappear.

7. As day after day the SARSAPARILLIAN is taken, new signs of returning health will appear; as the blood improves in strength and purity, disease will diminish, and all foreign and impure deposits, nodes, tumors, cancers, hard lumps, etc., be resolved away and the unsound made sound and healthy; ulcers, fever sores, syphilitic sores, chronic skin diseases gradually disappear.

8. In cases where the system has been salivated, and Mercury, Quicksilver, Corrosive Sublimate, (the principal constituent in the advertised Sarsaparillas, associated in some cases with Hyd. of Potassa) have accumulated and become deposited in the bones, joints, etc., causing caries of the bones, rickets, spinal curvatures, contortions, white swellings, varicose veins, etc., the SARSAPARILLIAN will resolve away these deposits and exterminate the virus of the disease from the system.

9. If those who are taking these medicines for the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous or Syphilitic diseases, however slow may be the cure "feel better," and find their general health improving, their flesh and weight increasing or even keeping its own, it is a sure sign that the cure is progressing. In these diseases the patient either gets better or worse—the virus of the disease is not inactive; if not arrested and driven from the blood, it will spread and continue to undermine the constitution. As soon as the SARSAPARILLIAN makes the patient "feel better," every hour you will grow better and increase in health, strength and flesh.

The great power of this remedy is in diseases that threaten death—as in Consumption of the Lungs and Tuberculous Phthisis, Scrofula, Syphiloid Diseases, Wasting, Degeneration, and Ulceration of the Kidneys, Diabetes, Stoppage of Water (instantaneous relief afforded where catheters have to be used, thus doing away with the painful operation of using these instruments), dissolving stone in the bladder, and in all cases of Inflammation of the Bladder and Kidneys, in Chronic cases of Leucorrhœa and Uterine diseases.

In tumors, nodes, hard lumps and syphiloid ulcers; in dropsy and venereal sore throat, ulcers, and in tubercles of the lungs; in gout, dyspepsia, rheumatism, rickets, in mercurial deposits—it is in these terrible forms of disease, where the human body has become a complete wreck, and where every hour of existence is torture, wherein this great remedy challenges the astonishment and admiration of the sick. It is in such cases, where all the pleasures of existence appear cut off from the unfortunate, and by its wonderful, almost supernatural agency, it restores the hopeless to a new life and new existence, where this great remedy stands alone in its might and power.

In the ordinary skin diseases that every one is more or less troubled with, a few doses will in most cases, and a few bottles in the more aggravated forms, work a permanent cure.

Those afflicted with chronic diseases should purchase a package containing one dozen bottles. Price $10 per dozen, or $5 per half dozen bottles, or $1 per bottle. Sold by druggists.

New Fall & Winter Stock

NOW IN

Our stock is very large and prices way down.

Don't Fail to ask Our Prices

Although we honestly believe we are selling goods on the average lower than any other house in Auburn, still we are throwing out no baits. We don't sell Sprague prints that cost from 6½ to 8cts for 6c, and make up the loss on other goods, but we sell every thing in the

DRY GOOD

AND NOTI ON

Line way down. With the largest stock of DRY GOODS in Auburn we can do you good.

Remember the cheap store, one door south of J. L. Davis' Hardware store.

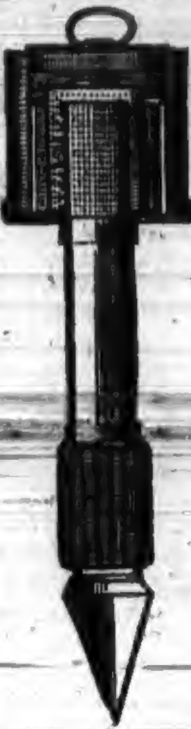
MILLER & CASEBEER.

A New Method of Draining Farms!



YUNDT'S PATENT DRAIN!

FOR DRAINING

Swamps, Ponds & Low Lands.

It sinks the water just where it stands, saving miles of tile drains; keeps the water from cutting up your highways, or flooding your neighbor's, and is as far superior to tile drains as the railroad is to the common wagon.

TESTIMONIAL.

We, the undersigned, having seen one of Yundt's Patent Drains remove a large pond of stagnant water, on Hoyt street, in this city, do cheerfully re[illegible] [illegible] persons who have wet cellars, or are troubled with ponds or wet lands. It will do all that is claimed for it.

DR. B. ATKINSON, HENRY GOLDTHWAIT, J. W. GRIFFITH,
H. B. CROSS, D. V. ROSS, LYMAN CASE,
N. E. RAPER, F. MORTON,

One of the above drains was put down on the premises of J. P. Frenzel, Jr., Cashier of the Merchants' National Bank, of this city, and in less than

Three Hours Had Drained the Cellar

of over 2,000 gallons of water. No better investment can be made of idle capital than in working territory with this Drain. A good, energetic Agent is wanted in every city and county, to whom a liberal commission will be paid. State, County, Township or Farm Rights for sale. Personal property or real estate taken in exchange for territory. Address

PENCIL AND SCISSORS.

Our saloons was closed on Christmas and New Years.

Mrs. L. Jackman has been lying quite ill for several weeks.

Miss Alice McKay, of Fort Wayne, is visiting friends in the city.

"They say" that Garrett is an incorporated town. Good for that.

Harry Rush, of Angola, was visting his parents during the Holiday.

Herman Lobmiller bends over the counter at Lordier's shoe store.

Ed. Picker, of Toledo, is in the city taking a short rest from the case.

Joe. Rainier is acting as deputy Sheriff. He is well qualified for the position.

Mrs. Dr. Swarts, was taken to the insane assylum, at Indianapolis, last Monday.

The Granger store has closed, and we learn will not carry on business in the future.

Jas. Fair, of Iowa, son of Mrs. Fair, of this city, was in town several days last week.

Court was largely attended last week and a considerable amount of business was transacted.

Each of our churches had a Christmas Tree, and many valuable presents were placed thereon.

At the commencement of the new year we received quite a number of new subscibers.

Mr. Joe. Hosack and wife have been visiting their relatives in the city during the holidays.

Don't fail to take the COURIER this year, and get one of the best local papers in the county.

Sammy Pommert is on the war path with sharp raizzors. Give him a call when you want a good shave.

Geo. Bossler, a citizen here some years ago, has been spending the holidays with friends in the city.

Mr. H. Parent, of Allen County, moved his family here last week. He will make the livery business lively.

Mich. Houston has returned from a visit to Hurou, Ohio. He shook hands with old townsman Frank Benedict.

The oldest inhabitant has just made the strange discovery that unless there is snow, we shall have an open winter.

Mr. Beckhoffer, who is preparing to manufacture tobacco and cigars, in this city, has been east securing a stock of tobacco.

The Presbyterian Socsety was entertained by Mrs. F. Picker last week. The mite in the evening was enjoyed by the young.

Santa Clause, the one who promenaded at the M. E. Church on Christmas Eve, has left his photograph at T. B. Totten's. 15 cents buys one.

The Albion Dramatic troup played "The Fireman" at Ensley's Hall last Saturday evening, to a crowded house. The play was rendered in good style.

Our high-toned and joval saloonist, Jno. Heble, Esq., is contemplating a journey through the Eastern States.—John has the "gelt" and is bound to enjoy himself.

A Dutchman, summoned to identify a stolen hog, being asked if the hog had any car-marks, replied: "Te only earmark dat I saw vas his tail vas cut off."

Mike Long's "Black Billy got up and got," last week. There was nothing broke about the horse but one wheel and the axle-tree. Billy ought to draw nothing but a stone-boat.

F. C. Chappin, of the firm of Chappin, Luce & Blass, Toledo, O., lost his little daughter while on a visit at Angola, last week. She was sick but a very short time before death overtook her. The disease was dyphthera.

Mr. Wiseman, editor of a paper in Fostoria, O., was in the city last week. His stay was short. He inquired about the running of trains on the B. & O. and when Joe. Loveland gave him the time (piece) he started for the Buckeye State.

Last week was one in which the boys showed an uncommon alacrity in runing errand and carrying in wood, and girls to be uncommonly pleasant when mother asks them; if they can't wash up the breakfast dishes or play with baby a while.

ANOTHER ACCIDENT.

Sudden Death of an Old Lady.

Mr. & Mrs. Bottle, living near Garrett was on their way to this city, last week, for the purpose of surrounding the bedside of a daughter who was lying at the point of death, when a southeren bound freight train, on the Saginaw road, met them between this place and the Junction. They followed the track until the engine was quite close to them, and on looking upward the head-light dazzled Mrs. B's. eyes so much that she lost her path and stepped off into a culver. She fell the distance of about seven feet He husband hurried to her assisitance, but life had gone, and no mortal man could restore it. The remains were brought to this city and taken to the residence of Mr. Cloy, on Sixth Street where an inquest was held on the body.

Why and When Lamps Explode.

All explosions of lamps are caused by the vapor or gas that collects in the space above the oil. When full of oil, of course a lamp contains no gas, but immediately on lighting the lamp, consumption of oil begins, soon leaving a space for gas, which commences to form as the lamp warms up and, after burning a short time sufficient gas will accumulate to form an explosion. The gas in a lamp will explode only when ignited. In this respect it is like gunpowder. Cheap or inferior oil is always the most dangerous. The flame is communicated to the gas in the following manner: The wick tube in all lamp burners is made larger than the wick which is to pass through it. It would not do to have the wick work tightly in the burner; on the contrary, it is essential that it moves up and down with perfect ease. In this way it is unavoidable that space in the tube is left along the sides of the wick sufficient for the flame from the burner to pass down into the lamp and explode the gas.

Many things may occur to cause the flame to pass down the wick and explode the lamp.

First. A lamp may be standing on a table or mantel, and a slight puff of air from the open window, or the sudden opening of a door cause an explosion.

Second. A lamp may be taken up quickly from a table or mantel and instantly explode.

Third. A lamp is taken into an entry where there is a draft or out of doors, and an explosion ensues.

Fifth. Blowing down the chimney to extinguish it is a frequent cause of explosion.

Sixth. Lamp explosions have been caused by using a chimney broken off at the top, or one that has a piece broken out, whereby the draft is variable and the flame unsteady.

Seventh. Sometimes a thoughtless person puts a small sized wick in a larger burner, leaving considerable space along the edge of the wick.

Eighth. An old burner with its air drafts clogged up, which rightfully should be thrown away, is sometimes continued in use, and the final result is an explosion

The Holidays Have Gone.

To the highly intelligent mind nothing can be sweeter than the contemplation of the wonderous blessings of our highly wrought civilivation so manifest during the holiday season. Looking around over the land, the eye beholds a wilderness of sawdust babies at fifty cents apiece, and drinks in the magnificent spectacle of two sugar mule drivers for only five cents. In what country does the immortal jumping jack so beautifully illustrate the theory of natural selection as in our own, and where else but in own land are doll's legs placed within reach of the most scanty purse? Under what other form of government are such inspiring pantomimic scenes desplayed as in the show windows of our own America? Night after night the bass wood soldiers stands sentenel over a puzzled city, while an eight dollar doll laughs and cries at his bashful silence. A hoarhound general rides a peppermint warhorse at a prepetual gallop, and the chocolate mouse frolics on the floor in the very presence of a whole regiment of paper cats. Between the scenes a company of Darwinian rerobats illustrate the possibilities of progression, for the intellectual entertainment of a composition monkey, that retails at seventyfive cents, on account of his superior antecedents. Enlivening music is furnished by a band of pine minstrels, to the demonstrative delight of sawdust babies, and a mixed assembly of wintergreen animals. And when one thinks that there are countries where these things are not known it almost makes the father of a large family wish he lived there.

Corunna Items.

This village is where it always was, but its appearance would lead one to think that its about to "go under." The sidewalks are as wide as an ordinary lath, and but d—ish few of them at that. The business seems to be pretty lively considering the weather and roads. The grocery fire-side is crowded with the youth and the venerable old gentleman, who are busily engaged on the various topics of conversation.—The "moral law" is refered to about sixty times an hour. They have no saloon and "the boys" have to get "full" on pea-nuts, or catch the breath of some Chicago bruiser as he goes through the town on the fast mail train. The following are a few notes gathered during a brief visit to the town:

—School is in full blast and a large number are in attendance.

—Wm Daily, and Lydia McDonald have "agreed." Good luck be with them

—Barney Dearborn seems to be as young as ever, and can enjoy a joke as well as anybody.

—Mr. Park still continues in the grocery business and demands a good share of the trade.

—Mr. McMellen carries on the meat market. He keeps a good supply and his shop presents a neat and tasty appearance.

—The dance last Friday evening, was a total failure, owing undoubtedly to the bad roads and disagreeable weather.

—We find Lafe Miller, ticket agent, at his post ever ready to inform strangers in any way appertaining to his line of business.

—Dr. Mercer has erected a new frame building which he uses as a drug store. Corunna now has two places where a fellow can get a "dose."

—The United Brethern have been holding a protracted meeting for several weeks, and have had but little success. Why don't they send for Moody and Sanky?

—The M. E. Social met at the residence of Mr. Ed. Orr, last week, on Tuesday evening. A large crowd was in attendence and a "bully" good" time was had by both young and old, great and small.

—The citizens have talked themselves almost to death trying to get "Old Daddy Wyatt" to build a sidewalk in front of his property, and we are sorry to say to no avail. Come, Daddy brace up.

—W. B. Adams, the hardware man, has been making extensive improvements. He has fitted up a beautiful hall, and in the language of the poet, we ask, "where are the Altona minstrels?

—A young lad living with Ed Orr, went through the wonderful feat of turning a sumersalt—by the assistance of another fellow—and now he sits in the house and nurses his leg.

—Our young friend Mike Boland, one of the best operators on the Air Line Road, has taken unto himself a "rib." We heartly wish the new couple a pleasant and successful journey down the path to fortune.

—Dr. Snyder the popular physician in this place, is kept very busy waiting upon his numerous patrons. The doctor met with great success in and about Corunna, and with this and his pleasing and obliging manner he has built up a fine practice.

—The drg goods store on the south side of the bridge, owned and conducted by Mr. Knour, is the popular trading point for the farmers. He has a large stock and sells goods at very reasonable prices.

—Mr. Freed, has erected a large and commodious brick store room, which he will occupy in the spring. At this establishment we find the accomplished and good looking Tommy Hall, busy waiting upon the customers who deal with the firm.

—Mrs. J. Orr, met with a sad accident on Tuesday. She was standing near the stove when she became dizzy, and made the remark that she was going to faint, and in an instant fell, striking her face and arm on the stove inflicting several wounds.

It is sad to hear that a brother-in-law of Fred Douglass has been arrested for robbing the mails. The corruption that prevailst among Radical brothers in law seems to be no respecter of race color, or previous condition of servitude.

Cats foxes and weasels have always enjoyed the reputation of being remarkably sly, and they no doubt deserve it but nothing can surpass the slyness with which a woman, surprised by an unexpected caller, will slip a set of false teath into her mouth.

THE DEATH OF THE OLD YEAR.

BY ALFRED TENNYSON.

Full knee-deep lies the winter snow,
  And the winter winds are wearily sighing,
Toll ye the church bell sad and slow,
And tread softly and speak low,
  For the Old Year lies a-dying.
    Old Year you must not die;
    You came to us so readily,
    You lived with us so steadily,
    Old Year you shall not die.

He lieth still; he doth not move;
  He will not see the dawn of day;
He hath no other life above;
He gave me a friend and a true, true love,
  And the New Year will take 'em away.
    Old Year you must not go;
    So long as you have been with us,
    Such joy as you have seen with us;
    Old Year you shall not go.

He froth'd his bumpers to the brim;
  A jollier year we shall not see;
But though his eyes are waxing dim,
And though his foes speak ill of him,
  He was a friend to me.
    Old Year you shall not die;
    We did so laugh and cry with you;
    I've half a mind to die with you,
    Old Year, if you must die.

He was full of joke and jest,
  But all his merry quips are o'er,
To see him die, across the waste
His son and heir doth ride post haste—
  But he'll be dead before.
    Every one for his own,
    The night is starry and cold, my friend,
    And the New Year blithe and bold, my friend,
    Comes up to take his own.

How hard he breathes! Over the snow
  I heard just now the crowing cock.
The shadows flicker to and fro;
The cricket chirps; the light burns low;
  'Tis nearly twelve o'clock.
    Shake hands before you die,
    Old Year, we'll dearly rue for you;
    What is it we can do for you?
    Speak out before you die.

His face is growing sharp and thin;
  Alack! our friend is gone;
Close up his eyes; tie up his chin;
Step from the corpse, and let him in
  That standeth there alone,
    And waiteth at the door.
    There's a new foot on the floor, my friend,
    And a new face at the door, my friend,
    A new face at the door.

AUNT JERUSHA'S CAT.

A New Year's Story.

Little Bessie Atwood had neither father, mother, sister nor brother. She was all alone in the world, and was about as miserable as any little girl could be. To be sure, she was well and strong, and in full possession of her five senses; but Bessie was twelve years old, and realized fully the unpleasantness of her position. Mrs. Murdock had offered her a home for the chores she could do, and Bessie soon found that she was expected to work hard from early in the morning until the children were all snug in bed at night. The chief cause of Bessie's trouble was not so much the work, for Bessie was an industrious child; but that she was not allowed to go to school. Mrs. Atwood had taught her daughter to read and write a little, and Bessie could do sums in long division and parse easy sentences in her reader. She knew something of geography, too, and had stored away in her little head a clearer knowledge of historical events than is usually possessed by young ladies double her age; but when she came to live at Mrs. Murdock's all these pleasures of study were forbidden her.

"I have no objections to your reading and writing, Bessie," said the mistress, one day, in answer to the child's earnest appeal to be allowed some time to improve herself, "after your work is done. Of course, you know that I only took you in out of charity. I didn't like the idea of a girl as capable as you being sent to the asylum; but Mr. Murdock isn't rich, by any manner of means, and you will have to earn what you eat and the clothes you wear."

"Oh! Mrs. Murdock," continued Bessie, pleadingly, "if you only would let me go to school part of the day I would be willing to work half the night to pay for it. I am losing all my dear mother taught me, and I shall grow up nothing but a poor, ignorant servant."

"Well, I declare!" burst in Mrs. Murdock, with flashing eyes and a very red face. "If ever I heard such impudence! If not a servant, what do you expect to be, Bessie Atwood?"

Mrs. Murdock's tones were intensely irritating, but Bessie replied, quietly, checking the inclination to cry:

"I hoped to be able to fit myself for a teacher, Mrs. Murdock. This is the work my mother commenced."

"Your mother was always too big for her clothes," replied the mistress, coarsely.

For a moment Bessie's eyes flashed with temper. To hear her darling mother thus insultingly spoken of was rather more than she could bear. It was on her lips to say: "My mother was a lady; but you don't know what the word means." But she controlled herself, and went on scouring the knives, her eyes blinded with tears, and her heart so full of pent-up agony that it was all she could do to keep from screaming.

"If you are going to snivel, turn your head the other way," said the hard-hearted woman; and with these miserable words left the kitchen. Bessie tried to compose herself, and went over all the things her mother had said to her about controlling her temper and keeping her conscience void of offense and her heart pure and loving. But the dreadful sentences had sunk deep into Bessie's sensitive soul; and she found it hard even to ask God to help her to be calm and gentle.

"How dare she speak so of my mother? How dare she?" muttered Bessie. Just then the kitchen door opened and Aunt Jerusha entered, all out of breath. Aunt Jerusha was an aged Quaker lady, who lived in a small cottage about a quarter of a mile from the home of the Murdocks. She had evidently walked very fast, and was laboring under considerable excitement.

"Has thee seen anything of my cat, Bessie?" was her first question.

"No, Auntie," said Bessie, smiling through her tears. "I hope you haven't lost him."

Aunt Jerusha's cat was her only companion, and was a big Maltese animal that one of her sons had brought her from over the sea. Some of the boys in the neighborhood, knowing how fond the old lady was of this pet, took every opportunity to annoy her by stealing it and carrying it a great distance out of town, and then leaving it to die or get back just as the poor creature was best able. Tom had returned safe from innumerable excursions of this kind, and might perhaps from this, Aunt Jerusha thought, but the poor old woman had a good deal of doubt about it. The circumstances were unusually aggravating. One of the neighbors had seen Tom in the hands of Hal Murdock, Mrs. Murdock's eldest son; and, as he was a terror to the whole village, the case looked dubious. Aunt Jerusha told Bessie all about it, and Bessie promised if she saw the cat or heard anything of him to let Aunt Jerusha know immediately.

"Thee has been crying, little girl," said the loving old lady. "Is it because thee has so much to do, dear?"

"No, Aunt Jerusha," answered Bessie. "I want to go to school. I don't care so much about the work, but I can't bear to think that I must grow up a poor, good-for-nothing, ignorant girl." And now Bessie was driving back the tears again.

"Thee is both right and wrong this morning, little girl," said Aunt Jerusha. "Right because thee should desire to improve thyself, and should be determined to use all the means in thy power to accomplish it; but when thee sees that all this don't amount to anything then thee should try and remember that our time isn't God's time. Anything that is right and noble we have a perfect right to strive after. If we can't get it just when we want it that don't signify that we are never to get it, only that God knows best. He hasn't forgotten thee, dear. Scour thy knives and wash thy dishes, and be sure that everything thee undertakes to do thee does thoroughly, never mind what it is. Be faithful over a few things, Bessie, and all that is great and good and true in thee will one day, when thy Heavenly Father sees it is time, be brought into perfect light. Bear and forbear, Bessie, but be true to thyself and thy honest convictions. I was about to say even if thee has to fight for it, although fighting is not a part of our creed."

"Oh! Aunt Jerusha, you have done me so much good," exclaimed Bessie. "I never will be impatient and cross again, never mind what happens."

"Oh! yes, thee will. Don't make any such promises," said Auntie, smiling. "The devil is a very wily old rascal, and he creeps into very small places sometimes. Remember, Bessie, if thee see anything of my cat thee is to let me know right away."

Bessie reiterated her promise, and Aunt Jerusha started for home. All the rest of the day Bessie scrubbed, and sang, and wheeled the baby, and washed dishes; and Mrs. Murdock, who had not recovered from the rumpus of the morning, looked on and wondered. She couldn't tell how a girl with any spirit (and she knew Bessie did not lack spirit) could so soon be good-natured again.

Christmas had passed, and Bessie had been quite overlooked. The Christmas tree in the parlor had been loaded down with presents for the young Murdocks, but poor Bessie had had no part nor share in the festivities. True, Mrs. Murdock gave her an old alpaca dress to cut and make over for herself; but this was all. And for this Bessie was not in the least grateful. The next day was New Year's, and about as cold as cold could be. Bessie's poor little fingers were so numb as she made the fire in the kitchen stove that it was as much as she could do to lay the sticks together; but the child kept bravely on, saying over to herself Aunt Jerusha's words of cheer which had done her so much good the day before, and after a little was rewarded with a bright fire and comfortable room. What was that queer sound Bessie heard every once in awhile like something scratching and clawing in the cellar below? She listened and finally opened half of the huge outside door and peered down into the darkness beneath. Just then came a decided and pitiful meaw, and Bessie knew that Aunt Jerusha's cat was down there. Just then she heard the boys coming down stairs and had only time to get back to the kitchen before they were upon her. She heard Hal whisper to Frank as she set the breakfast-table:

"We'll let him be there till after dinner; and then we'll take him to the barn and put on those nut shoes, set a match to the end of his tail and send him kiting. Poor old Aunt Jerush, what do you think she'll say when Mr. Thomas Cat flies past her house?"

The whole plot was thus discovered. How Bessie was to manage to take that cat to Aunt Jerusha or let Aunt Jerusha know that the animal was confined in the Murdocks' cellar was more than she could imagine. She could not leave the house until after breakfast; and not then if the children were anywhere in the vicinity. About half-past 10—a time that seemed an age to poor Bessie—the boys strolled off down the street. Then Bessie concluded she would tell Mrs. Murdock about the cat and ask her permission to take him to his owner. This she did very prettily and frankly, and this was the answer she received:

"If the boys want to have a little fun with that fussy old woman's cat it is certainly none of my business, and if you know when you are well off you won't make it any of yours. Just as sure as you do you'll get yourself into trouble. The boys expect to have a good time New Year's Day. Beat up those eggs now, and get all my things together for the pudding, and I'll be down in half an hour to make it."

Bessie's little feet fairly flew over that kitchen floor. She had decided to keep the promise she made to Aunt Jerusha, at all hazards. She thought the subject over in every light, and decided that it was right; and so, after she had arranged everything for Mrs. Murdock, she tied on her bonnet and shawl, took a large covered basket, and went down into the cellar. Poor Tom was securely tied, and she was compelled to go back to the kitchen for a knife to cut the cord with. All this necessarily consumed some minutes, and when Bessie emerged from the regions below, with poor Tom trembling and bruised in the basket, it seemed to her that she was quite as badly frightened as the animal she had in charge. She heard Mrs. Murdock call after her from an upper window: "Bessie Atwood, where are you going? Come back this minute!" But Bessie turned neither to the right nor left. She didn't even think of what awaited her on her return. She had just begun to congratulate herself that Aunt Jerusha's cottage would be soon reached—indeed, it was in plain sight—when half a dozen boys, blowing tin horns and hooting and bellowing in the rudest and maddest manner, came rushing toward her. Hal and Frank were among the foremost, and immediately suspected what she had in the basket.

"Give me that cat, you hussy," shouted Hal, "or I'll give you a good punch."

All the effect this threat had upon Bessie was to make her hold on to her charge the firmer.

"Meaw, meaw, meaow," squealed Tom, trying his best to get out.

"She heard what we were talking this morning," said Hal. "And the little thief worked her cards pretty well; but just before she did she didn't, eh! Now I tell you, fellers, one of you hold on to her arms from behind, and I'll have the cat out of the bag in a twinkling."

Up to this time Bessie had not spoken a word. Now she said, clearly and calmly: "Boys, stand aside! Aunt Jerusha came to the house for her cat, and I promised her that if I saw him or heard anything of him I would let her know. I am on my way now to keep my promise."

"But you won't be on your way long, not if I know it. Take hold of her, Frank. We'll settle up some old scores now." And with this the young desperado dealt her a ringing blow on the side of her face. At the same time Frank and another boy pulled at the handle of the basket, but without effect.

"Let go," screamed one of them, "or you'll get hurt."

"You may kill me, boys, if you will," said she, holding on with all her might; "but I started for Aunt Jerusha's with this cat, and if you succeed in taking it from me you'll do it when I'm dead, not before."

"That's the talk, little girl, said a friendly voice from the rear. "Got Aunt Jerusha's Maltese cat in that basket, have you? Now tell me who those boys are."

Bessie obeyed. She had never seen this gentleman before, and felt quite sure he was a stranger in the village.

"I'm going to the cottage," continued the gentleman. "Come along with me. I'll see if there's any law in this town after I see you safely housed." And the two walked on, leaving the boys considerably crestfallen and not a little alarmed.

"How does thee do, mother?" said the gentleman, walking straight into the house, leading Bessie by the hand.

"Bless thy heart, boy, is it thee, safe home again?" said Aunt Jerusha. "I expected the Lord was preparing this surprise for me." And the old lady cuddled down in her son's arms as if there was nothing else on earth to wish for.

"And here is thy cat, mother," continued the stranger, "and the bravest little girl I ever heard of. Why, that child would stand at the cannon's mouth without flinching."

In the meantime Bessie had liberated Tom; and he now purred contentedly on his mistress' knee. After hearing a full account of the child's struggle Aunt Jerusha said, suddenly, taking her son's hand:

"William, how much money has thee?"

"Enough and to spare," was the quiet answer.

"Has thee enough to rear this child as she should be reared—enough to secure her a good home with me and all the advantages that active little brain demand?"

"Yes, mother, and nothing would please me so well as to take this responsibility. Little girl," he continued, "what do you want most of anything in this world?"

"To go to school," answered Bessie, simply, "and have somebody to love me."

Aunt Jerusha wiped her eyes and said: "William, this child has been abused. She must never go back. Take off your things, Bessie. This is your home as long as it pleases thee. Thee has done thy best, and God is always as good as His word. Thee is under no obligation to those Murdocks. I will settle all this business for thee." And she did.

Bessie Atwood is now at the head of all her classes, and no girl in the country has a better home or more loving care.

Mrs. Murdock's rage was fearful to witness; but there was nothing she could do, as Bessie was not bound to her by the law. So she vented her spleen on chairs and tables and doors, whipped one or two of her wretchedly-brought-up children, spoiled her New Year's pudding, and finally vowed that when she tried again to be benevolent it would be when her name was something besides Mary Murdock.—Eleanor Kirk. in N. Y. Independent.

Gossip About the Committees.

After the House of Representatives adjourned, immediately upon the announcement of the Committees, there was quite a general interchange of opinions among the members in regard to the selections. Those who had been well provided for commended the Speaker's judgment, or said nothing; but the prevalent impression was one of dissatisfaction. The Speaker's friends account for this by the paucity of prizes and preponderating number of competitors for them. On the other hand there are many among the Democratic members who severely criticise his selections for a considerable number of prominent positions as unsuitable, or as unfair to Congressmen of extended service who have been passed over in the distribution of Chairmanships and important Committee places, to make room for new men without legislative experience. Of forty-seven Chairmanships exclusive of the Committee on Rules, of which the Speaker is ex officio Chairman, twenty-four are given to Western members, ten to Southern, and thirteen to the Middle and Eastern States. Of the latter thirteen, six are of third-rate importance, being the Committees on Expenditures in the various Executive Departments; and of the Chairmanships given to Western members, four are of the same description; four or five of the Southern Chairmanships are also unimportant. The West, therefore, holds the first place in the number of Chairmanships of the first and second-class Committees. Out of the forty-seven, Ohio and Missouri have each five Chairmanships; Illinois, four; Kentucky, four; Indiana, two, and Tennessee, two; Virginia and Pennsylvania have three each; North Carolina has two, and no other State has more than one. The composition of the Pacific Railroad Committee tested on the recent vote on Holman's anti-subsidy resolution is as follows: Chairman Lamar and Messrs. Throckmorton and O'Neill voted against it; Luttrell, Lynde, Thomas, Phillips, Garfield, Kasson and Blair voted for it, and Atkins, of Tennessee, Walker, of Virginia, and Platt were recorded as not voting.—Washington Telegram.

COST OF LEGISLATION.

The Woes of Congressmen—How They are Badgered by Importunate Constituents.

It costs the people of the United States, says a Washington correspondent, about $10,000 a day to support the House of Representatives. A session of the House consumes from three to four hours. Every hour's work is done at an expense of $2,500. Every minute of the session costs $40.

To-day, while bending over the bar of the Reporters' Gallery and studying with much interest the faces and manners of honorable members, I heard a voice, offering a bill to change the name of a steamboat on some Western river from "John Johnson" to "Thomas Jenkins." Some seconds—every one taking from the National Treasury considerably more than half a dollar—were spent in the process of "catching the Speaker's eye." Two minutes were occupied by the Speaker in announcing the bill and by the clerk in reading it. Three minutes more sufficed to pass it. Thus the detention of national legislation in the Chamber by this little local bill to change the name of a steam boat cost the people not less than $200. This is a single instance of the thousand petty matters which prolong the sessions of Congress for weeks and months. There are many other instances in which debate on such little bills has arisen and consumed a whole hour of a session.

While Congress as a body is thus hectored, its individual members suffer from importunities and demands on their time and patience of which most readers have no idea. It is supposed that the people's representatives are elected to do their legislation. On the contrary, most members of the House, and even some Senators, find that they are elected to do their constituents' errands. Every lawyer and editor who wants a public document, every farmer who wants seeds, every bristly-haired inventor seeking a patent, or callow author demanding a copyright to print trash; men who have claims against the Government, and men and women, too, who want places under Government; pensioners, people who have lost money in letters, victims of lottery and confidence circulars sent through the mail; pamphleteers and people with hobbies or schemes of reform—all write or come to their Representative in Congress asking, begging, imploring, and often demanding immediate compliance with their requests for his service, aid, interference. Consequently the time that many a member might and would assign to the study of measures before Congress is occupied in answering letters on subjects wholly disconnected from his legislative duties, or in running about among the department offices and boring secretaries and clerks. The penalty of non-compliance with requests from constituents is so well understood that few Congressmen neglect them. Prompt and successful attention to them secures votes at the next election. To waive such attention is to lose voters. Rich and well-to-do members find it possible to do a great deal of drudgery through hired clerks. Ben Butler, for instance, used to keep two secretaries who did nothing but attend to this kind of work. But the poorer members, who having nothing but their salaries of $5,000 a year, are driven to sit up late at night and rise early in the morning, and consume all their forenoon in attending, without any fee whatever, to the personal interests of thoughtless, selfish, stingy constituents. Here are a plenty of patent lawyers, claim agents and agents of every kind, ready to do almost anything for reasonable fees, and hundreds of clerks in the several departments are employed to answer letters of inquiry and do all business with the people; but members of Congress are selected because they will be afraid to refuse, and will, moreover, work for nothing?

I am asked by several members to protest in the names of Justice and Mercy against so sore an imposition.

Extraordinary Tragedy.

The following strange account of a tragical occurrence at Toulouse is published by the Paris Siecle, of Dec. 1: "Two men, strangers to the place, applied three days back for permission to ascend to the top of the tower of the old Cordeliers Church, formerly used as a store-house for fodder, and which was partly burned in 1871. Leave was granted, but shortly afterward the two men were seen to lean over the parapet, looked in each other's arms—and then to fall to the ground. One, who appeared to be the principal, and wore a decoration in his button-hole, was taken up dead; the other was only stunned, and, on being carried to the hospital, made this extraordinary statement: The deceased, he said, was an engineer, and had formed with him a plan to rob the Bank of Toulouse by means of a subterranean passage leading to the cellars of that establishment, and which had been in course of construction for several months previously. The work was terminated, and the plan was to be carried out an hour later. His accomplice then induced him to go to the top of the tower on some pretext, and then suddenly seized him by the waist and endeavored to throw him from the top, in order, no doubt, to obtain the whole of the booty. A struggle took place between them, in the course of which they both fell over, as described. The cellars of the bank were visited, and the passage was found almost terminated. Another hour's work, and it would have opened into the floor of the strong room."

Decline of the French Population.

The decline in the population of France, while most of the surrounding countries are increasing, has arrested the attention of the Journal des Debats, probably the most intelligent newspaper of Paris. Commenting on the gloomy prospects of its country the Journal says:

"When we think what the civilized people will be in a hundred years, or even in fifty; when we see the United States occupying all North America with a population of a hundred millions; England with its colonies in Africa, Australia and Asia, growing daily in wealth, numbers and civilization; Russia occupying all Northern and Central Asia, and perhaps descending to the Bosphorus, with a compact mass of one hundred and fifty million inhabitants; lastly, the Germans, planted in the middle of Europe, a mass of sixty or eighty million souls—and we Frenchmen, where shall we be? What will be our importance? What weight shall be bear in the world? Where will be the old supremacy, not alone of our statesmanship, but of our customs and our language?"

The Journal sees in its neglect of colonial development the cause of the decline of France.

Dog Stories.

CANINE SUICIDE.

He was born in Springfield, and had in some strange way broken both his hind legs. He lingered in agony, though kindly cared for by many who pitied him. At length, one day, dragging his mutilated legs behind him, indifferent to suffering, he sought the nearest pond and deliberately went into deep water until the water engulfed him. Unable to endure his misery the poor brute had deliberately committed suicide.

A DOG WHO WAS ASHAMED OF HIMSELF.

A retriever dog, whose owner was working in the garden of the Bath Institution, lately killed a favorite cat, a frequenter of the same grounds. Having committed this unprovoked murder, the dog deliberately took the cat in his mouth, carried it some distance, dug a deep hole behind some bushes, and after depositing the cat therein carefully replaced the earth, and had he not been observed there would have been no evidence of the crime.

A DISAPPOINTED DOG.

Philip Gilbert Hampton never told a more beautiful story than the following: "A dog was bereaved of his master, and became old and blind, passing the dark evenings of his existence sadly in some corner, which he hardly ever quitted. One day came a step like that of his lost master, and he suddenly left his place. The man who had just entered wore ribbed stockings; the old dog had lost his scent, and referred at once to the stockings that he remembered rubbing his face against. Believing his master had returned after those weary years of absence, he gave way to the most extravagant delight. The man spoke. The momentary illusion was dispelled; the dog went sadly back to his place, lay down wearily and died."

CURIOUS FREAK OF A DOG.

A Radnorshire lady, who was married in March, and came to reside in Yorkshire, England, recently paid a visit to her father, who, before she was married, had kept two or three sheep-dogs, of which she was very fond. Since then he has retired from business, and disposed of all but one dog. This one met the lady with demonstrations of great delight upon her arrival at her father's house, and that night the dog went a distance of seven miles to a farmhouse where one of the other dogs had been sent (the latter was blind, but kept as being an old favorite). In the morning when the lady went to the door she not only saw the dog which had given her such a glad reception the day previously, but also the old blind one, which had evidently been brought by the other dog to welcome her. When the second night came the old blind one was taken back to its home by the same dog, which afterward returned, having traveled a distance of twenty-eight miles to give pleasure to the old blind one.

A DOG THAT JOINED A LODGE.

If being in possession of the "signs" known only to the Brotherhood of Good Templars, and observing the essential qualification of total abstention from all intoxicating liquors constitute a "brother," Mr. J. Leake's Newfoundland, (assuming of course that he does not indulge in other than the usual canine beverages,) according to the Newcastle Daily Journal, would seem to have a right to the full benefits of membership of that brotherhood. This dog, it is stated, by the above journal, having for some time past attended with his master at the "Pride of the Tyne" Lodge of Good Templars, at Haltwhistle, appears to have found out their mysterious rap for entering the lodge-room during their meetings. On the last lodge night he seems to have lingered by the way, and his master entered the lodge without him and closed the door. "A short time after the inner-guard and part of the members heard the well-known knocks at the inner door, when the guard arose and opened it, and the black brute walked majestically in, greatly to the surprise of the vigilant guard, causing no small amusement to the whole company."

THE MAIL CARRIER.

Who carries the mail from Os-tra-gou-nosh, away up on the Minnesota line, to the nearest frontier settlement in Dakota? Why, Boss, a mongrel kind of dog, an apparent ultimate result of the mingling of every kind of dog found in the Territory. Boss' master a year ago was a drunken half-breed who was paid $3 a trip in summer, and $5 in winter, for taking the mails a distance of some sixty miles. Boss's master was honest, and never purloined a letter, but he had a way of drinking on the road, and the mails were often delayed. Last January the mail carrier never reached his destination, but was found frozen stiff in a snow-bank, three miles beyond Jobley's run. Boss was keeping guard over his master and the mail. Now Boss runs the machine in bad weather. All that has to be done is to take Boss and secure the letters round his neck in an oil-skin wrap, and away goes Boss to the end of the mail route on the biggest kind of a lope. There is no use of starving Boss, like people do pigeons, to get him to work, though he does expect a feed at the conclusion of his journey. No one as yet is intriguing for Boss' place. Sixty-two miles as the crow flies, carrying the mail through the snow, is not a position most office-seekers care for.

"She can't sit down," said a female Custom House Inspector at New York, the other day, as she observed a lady who had just come off a Hamburg steamer standing on the wharf. The new arrival was pretty, but she looked very weary. They took her, protesting against the outrage, into a dressing-room, and, penetrating the mysteries of her make-up, they discovered that from her waist down she was a solid mass of smuggled hair. Luscious golden tresses twined themselves around her dainty limbs and surged up to her waist, mingling with raven locks and auburn ringlets. The officers stripped her, and she was then able to sit down. She was importing the plunder for a fashionable Broadway human hair dealer.

A SONG FOR NEW-YEAR'S EVE.

BY WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Stay yet, my friends, a moment stay—
  Stay till the good old year,
So long companion of our way,
  Shakes hands and leaves us here.
    O, stay! O, stay
One little hour, and then away.

The year whose hopes were high and strong—
  Has now no hopes to wake;
Yet one hour more of jest and song
  For his familiar sake.
    O, stay! O, stay
One mirthful hour, and then away.

The kindly year, his liberal hands
  Have lavished all his store,
And shall we turn from where he stands
  Because he gives no more?
    O, stay! O, stay
One grateful hour, and then away.

Days brightly came and calmly went,
  While yet he was our guest;
How cheerfully the week was spent,
  How sweet the Seventh day's rest!
    O, stay! O, stay
One good hour more, and then away.

Dear friends were with us—some who sleep
  Beneath the coffin-lid—
What pleasant memories we keep
  Of all they said and did.
    O, stay! O, stay
One tender hour, and then away.

Even while we sing he smiles his last,
  And leaves our sphere behind—
The good old year is with the past:
  O, be the new as kind!
    O, stay! O, stay
One parting strain, and then away.

JANUARY.

Called I am Januyere the colde
In Christmas seasons good fyre I love
Yonge Jesu that sometime Judas solde
In me was circumcised for man's belove
Three kings sought the same of God above
They kneeled downe and dyd him homage with love
To God their Lorde that is man's own brother.

Some Pulaski boys undertook to play base-ball in a field where a ram was feeding, recently. He butted the short-stop through a picket-fence, and forced all the rest to make a home-run. The boy who was butted through the fence was the only one who scored, and he carried the score with him, but he cannot see it.

While some boys were skating on one of the slips up the river, a gentleman noticed one on the bank who looked longingly but who had no means of enjoying the sport. "Well, bub, haven't you any skates?" asked the man. "No, sir." "Why not?" "'Cause mother says I ain't prepared to die, and father says he needs the money to buy him some undershirts!" was the lonesome reply.—Detroit Free Press.

EIGHTEEN SEVENTY-SIX.

What babe is waking here?
It is the world's new year,
And came through pain and darkness on the earth;
It's mother lies asleep
With all our secrets deep;
Her dying breath gave this new life its birth.

O smiling, blue-eyed year,
Child of the need so dear;
In joy of hope our sorrows hide away!
The hard world greeting thee
Sinks child-like on the knee,
Wishing its life new-born with thine to-day.

A man in Kilkenny, all alive and well, recently saw a statement of his own death in a newspaper. He wrote to the editor: "Sir: I notice a few errors in the obituary of myself which appeared in your paper of Wednesday last. I was born in Dublin, not Cork, and my retirement from business in 1860 was not owing to ill-health, but to a little trouble I had in connection with a horse. The cause of my death was not small-pox. Please make correction."

NIGHTMARE.

Faint bars of pallid light streak half the sky;
  The lurid sun has sunk into the west;
A dull wind moves with sullen sough and sigh
  Across the flat and solitary waste—
A sodden plain, domed o'er with clouds lead-gray.
  The heavy air is filled with boding gloom.
Close at my feet, swollen with slow decay,
  The face of one who met an awful doom
Stares at the falling night with horrid, rotting eye.

Dank weeds are twined around the crumbling stones
  That mark unhallowed graves of long ago.
The dark expanse is dotted white with bones,
  And lambent lights from hollow sockets glow.
I feel the slow, remorseless clutch of death,
  The thickened blood stands still around my heart.
In agonies of fear my labored breath
  From my weak body seems about to part,
And through my swooning head there rings an eirie groan. —T. B. Aldrich.

Yesterday while fifteen or twenty men were sitting in a saloon at the ferry-dock, toasting their shins and lamenting the hard times, a man opened the door and called out: "Who wants work at twelve shillings a day?" Not a person made answer. Some shut their eyes and pretended to be asleep, and others were busy looking out of the windows. In about five minutes another man opened the door and shouted: "Who wants an easy place in the City Hall?" "I do!" was chorused in tones that made the decanters jar, and every man jumped to his feet. "So do I!" said the man as he shut the door and walked away.—Detroit Free Press.

Infernal Machines.

An attempt similar to that of Thompson to destroy the Mosel, was made in 1856 upon the Vanderbilt steamer Ariel, sailing from Bremerhaven. After the vessel had left port she was signaled to stop, and word was sent to the captain that two cases in the hold, marked as containing silks, held combustibles with a clock-work arrangement to ignite them when the vessel was at sea. An examination proved the truth of the story, which was disclosed by the conscience-stricken mechanic who had made the boxes. The guilty parties were a father and son, the object being to collect insurance. After the detection and arrest of the criminals, the father committed suicide and the son is still in prison for life in Bremen. The story is remarkably similar to the present one.

ONE HUNDRED AND THREE.

A Woman with a Memory—The Great Snow Storm of 1790—How Gen. Washington Looked.

Rev. C. F. McCauley two weeks ago visited A. Schnevly at his home at Mercersburg, in Franklin County, and while there paid a visit to Mrs. Mary Schnevly at her home, six miles from Hagerstown, in Maryland. She is 103 years old, and calls her farm of some 200 acres the "Garden of Eden." Mrs. Schnevly was married in 1791 to Col. David Schnevly, and removed to her present home, where she has ever since resided. At the time of her husband's death she had been wedded just fifty years. She is a very well preserved woman even at this late day, after the storms of 103 winters have passed over her head. Her sight has faded somewhat, but for years no glasses have been used by her. Her hearing is good, and her memory needs but to be revived by questioning.

Of course she remembers Gen. George Washington. At her old home in Williamsport, Pa., the General and his staff in 1789–90 came to examine for a location for the national capital. At that time he wore the conventional buckskin breeches, with the old silver knee-buckles, the body coat with its many fringes and brass buttons, the tight leggins and buckled low shoe. He was a tall, well-built man, and his very presence had its effect on all around. The old lady remembers him well.

In 1790 Reading had the largest snow storm it probably ever had. The snow covered the house tops and only the chimneys were visible. Families had to dig themselves out and in many cases every article of furniture was burned for fuel. Sleighs and four horse teams rode over the house tops on the hard snow. All this Mrs. Schnevly remembers well.

Her visitors remarked that the centennial year was near at hand, and perhaps on her way through to the city she would stop in Reading. "No," replied the lady, "I am anxious to meet with something of former times. I shall pass right through. I want to see all the great men of the country." And she will go to the Centennial in May next.

Col. Schnevly, her husband, was the first person to be baptized in the Hagerstown First Reformed Church, in 1772. This old building had its centennial four years ago and has been handsomely remodeled.

Her portrait, taken by an artist from Lancaster, who was sent up by some friends, represents the old lady to have been at her then age, fifty years, very handsome and more like one at twenty-five. She was of queenly presence, with much beauty of face and form. The portrait looks as when first touched by the artist's pencil—no fading, no dullness, no loss of color.

The old lady never uses a rocking or easy chair, always sitting perfectly straight, generally on the edge of the seat. They had a peep into the parlor. On the floor was an elegant Brussels carpet laid down in 1812, and is still in an excellent state of preservation. The colors are very rich and beautiful, especially the border. The old-fashioned chairs, bright in their vermillion colors, and with their ornamental backs, were the models of fashionable furniture used by the wealthy families of those days. She is an interesting talker, and, during the stay of four hours' duration, richly entertained her guests. Sitting at the head of the table the lady waited upon her visitors, handling the silver and rich chinaware as ably as when a half century ago she sat at meat with her husband.

Funerals in her time were differently conducted from now. Girls, dressed in spotless white, conveyed the corpse to its last resting place, and on account of her height Mrs. Schnevly frequently was called on to assist at burials.

The old lady has many visitors, and transacts her bank business regularly. The newspapers are read to her, and thus she keeps even with the events of the times. Formerly her almanac was made so that every alternate leaf was a blank. In it she kept her diary. Now, at eventide, in a book kept for that purpose, the day's occurrences are noted.—Reading (Pa.) Eagle.

Nominating Presidential Canditates.

The Chicago Tribune thinks it is about time for somebody to suggest a new plan for nominating Presidential candidates. It might be possible, says the Tribune, to improve upon the present system under which a candidate is apt to be strong in proportion to the general ignorance about him, as shown in the nomination of a Polk and a Pierce. A large convention, like all mobs, is very apt to be carried away by sham sentiment or false enthusiasm. The system is by no means aged. At first there were no formal nominations. Persons were voted for by general consent. This was true of Washington and of John Adams, though in 1797, when the latter was chosen President, some intriguers within his own party, headed by Alexander Hamilton, nearly succeeded in defeating him by diverting electoral votes to the nominal candidate of the Federalists for Vice-President. Then a system of nomination by State Legislatures came into play. Jefferson was nominated for a third term by the Legislatures of three New England States. But this was soon superseded by nominations made by a caucus of Congressmen. The latter system prevailed in turn until 1824. The caucus of that year nominated William H. Crawford of Georgia, one of the forgotten worthies of our past. Meanwhile, nomination by State Legislatures had been resorted in the case of Adams, Jackson and Clay. Crawford was beaten by both of the former, and this was the end of the Congressional caucus system of nomination. The first regular National Convention—or rather the first two—met in 1840. Both parties, Whig and Democratic, adopted the custom at the same time.

Remedy for Scarlet Fever.

The San Francisco Chronicle states that Robert Christie, of the Protero, prescribes a remedy for scarlet fever which he says has invariably proved successful. It is as follows: Take an onion and cut it in halves, cut out a portion of the center, and into the cavity put a spoonful of saffron; put the pieces together; then wrap in a cloth and bake in the oven until the onion is cooked so that its juice will run freely. Then squeeze out all the juice and give the patient a teaspoonful, at the same time rubbing the chest and throat with goose grease or rancid butter, if there is any cough or soreness in the throat. In a short time the fever will break out in an eruption all over the body. All that then is necessary is to keep the patient warm and protected from draft, and recovery is certain. Mr. Christie says he has been employing this remedy for many years, and never knew it to fail when proper care was taken of the patient after the application.

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

The Work of an Old Man of Eighty-One.

[New York Cor. Detroit News.]

Mr. Bryant, at the age of 81, assisted by Sidney Howard Gay, who was formerly on the Post, and who was selected by him as his aid, has undertaken to write a history of the United States.

It will be comprised in four large volumes of 600 pages each, and will cost $100,000. The first volume is already under way, and contains much of his writing. This work will probably be his last one of any magnitude, and will contain the efforts of his riper years, which he will leave as his heritage to posterity. It is remarkable that so aged a man should begin an enterprise of so great moment, but Mr. Bryant is a man of the greatest ambition. His history will deal at length with some parts of American history which have been less discussed by previous writers, and will thus have an interest beyond that which it will possess from its literary excellence.

In person Mr. Bryant is of medium size, and slightly bent with age. There is nothing in his appearance to attract particular attention, as some people think there must be in men of genius. His hair, beard and eye-brows are long and white, giving him a very venerable expression. His features are agreeable and kindly. He is always cheerful and pleasant in conversation, and laughs heartily at a joke. When at his country house he visits the office about once a week, and sits and reads the papers without glasses. He is very vigorous for so old a man, and now and then indulges in such gymnastic exercises as raising himself up over the door by his arms, in competition with the younger men. He always walks down from his house when he visits the office during his residence in town. He has one of the editorial rooms of the Post. It is the sanctum sanctorum, but is seldom occupied, as he rarely works in it.

The poet resides, during the summer, at his country house at Roslyn, Long Island. He will be in the city in a week or two for the winter. His place at Roslyn is old and beautiful, with its wealth of trees and vines. It is a fit home for him, and he loves it well. The most distinguished men of the time feel honored when, at his invitation, they enjoy his hospitality. He is a mental autocrat, and his invitations are sparingly given. One of his intimate friends said, the other day: "Mr. Bryant is the proudest man I ever saw, and yet he isn't ashamed to work."

Bret Harte on Death Rates.

Bret Harte was lecturing in Pennsylvania a short time ago. At one of his appointments he felt very much depressed. It is a peculiarity of humorists, we are told, to be unaccountably melancholy and gloomy at times. Harte was in this mood now. One of the committee went in back of the scenes to see him, and the depressed humorist welcomed him as a gleam of unusual good sunshine. They shook hands—Harte earnestly, and the committeeman decorously.

"Mr. Harte," he said gravely, "you will find this an unusually healthy city."

"Ah!" said the pleased humorist.

"Yes. The death rate is only one a day."

At this juncture Harte took the committeeman by the arm and hurriedly asked:

"Is he dead?"

"Dead!" ejaculated the committeeman, "who dead?"

"Why, the man for to-day," was the grave reply.

The committeeman stared with all his might into the immovable face of the lecturer.

"Isn't there a Clerk here, or Register, or Coroner, or something like that, of whom you could find out whether a man for this day had died?"

"Why, yes, I suppose so," slowly replied the committeeman.

"Would you be so good, then, as to find out, and before I commence the lecture, if possible, whether that man is dead? If he is dead, then I am all right, for I am to leave the city early to-morrow morning; but if he isn't dead I cannot help but feel uneasy about myself, and I am not well to-night."

The kind-hearted committeeman immediately hurried away to get the information.

When in his room at the hotel that night a servant told him a gentleman wished him to step down stairs in the hall, as he wanted to see him. Mr. Harte went down, and there met the committeeman.

"I am sorry, Mr. Harte to disturb you," he said, "but I could not get that information earlier. It is all right; that death rate I spoke of was merely the average.—Danbury News.

Ways and Means.

A Congressman vouches for the following as an actual conversation between two new members, which he could not help hearing the other day in the House restaurant. After some comparison of domestic arrangements for the session, A, inquired: "What have you done about your washing?" "Oh," said B., "I have made an excellent arrangement for that. I have got a first-rate negro woman, a real good woman, I think, and have made a bargain with her for the season at a dollar a dozen!" "Well," responded A., "I am not quite certain whether my arrangement is as cheap as that or not. I have made a bargain with a woman to do all my washing for the season for a dollar and a half a month; but I'll watch it for the first month, and if I find your bargain is cheaper, I'll try and get your woman to do mine." Speaker Kerr ought to have been informed of this conversation in time for his committees. If those two men are not put on the Ways and Means, gross injustice will be done to the financial genius of the House.—New York Tribune.

Some Old People.

A LONG-LIVED FAMILY.

The Concord (N. H.) Monitor says: "C. W. Moore received an application for a policy on the life of a man in Lancaster, a few days ago, which furnished the following remarkable record of longevity on both sides of his ancestors: Grandparents—On father's side: Grandfather, 110 years; grandmother, 95 years. On mother's side: Grandfather, 100; grandmother, 98 years. His mother is living, aged 105 years, and the father died at 108 years. He has eight brothers and sisters living, of the following ages: 70, 68, 66, 64, 62, 60, 58 and 45 years respectively. Five children died in infancy."

NEARLY ONE HUNDRED.

The Troy Press contributes the following: "Mr. Peter Hammond, now living with his daughter, Mrs. Alfred Taylor, at Geneseo, Henry County, Ill., was born at Newton, Mass. (then called Newtown), April 9, 1776. His father, Samuel Hammond, was one of the old patriots of the Revolution, and died in 1842 at the age of 94 years. One of his brothers died a year or two ago, aged nearly 90. Mr. Hammond is a member of the Methodist Church, and walks nearly a mile on pleasant Sundays to attend his favorite church. He has been an exceedingly temperate man in all his habits. Though not a teetotaler, he has eaten and drank in great moderation, and has never used tobacco in any form. This venerable gentleman walks around town without a cane, reads without glasses, eats well, sleeps well, and seems as happy as most mortals of half his years."

A LADY ONE HUNDRED AND THREE.

The Reading (Penn.) Times asserts that Mrs. Mary Schnebly, who lives nea Hagerstown, Md., was born on the 15th of February, 1772. It says: "Unlike very aged persons, she has no wrinkles in her face or on her hands, nor has the weight of years caused her form to stoop, but she stands and sits perfectly straight, uses none of the common artificial aids in walking, moving about freely and unassisted. She was married to Col. David Schnebly in 1791, and they lived together just fifty years, and without issue. She was invited by Rev. Mrs. McCauley, of this city, who is connected with her by marriage, to pay her a visit and to remain a day or two to rest herself on her way to the Centennial Exhibition, which she proposes to attend next year if her life is spared. To this Mrs. Schnebly replied that when she made the rip the intended going to Philadelphia without stopping anywhere."

DOUBLE GOLDEN WEDDING.

There was a noteworthy celebration in Millport, Chemung County, on the 7th inst., being the fiftieth wedding anniversary of two couples by the same minister, and both couples being alive. The Elmira Advertiser says that their names are Mr. and Mrs. John Denson, of Millport, and Mr. and Mrs. Bostwick Bement, of Jackson, Bradford County, Pa. December 7, 1825, these gentlemen espoused two step-sisters, Miss Christiana C. Coston and Miss Philana Tanner. They were wedded at the house of George Tanner, who had married the widow Coston, and lived about a mile southerly from the village of Trumansburg, Tompkins County. Elder Oliver Comstock, who performed the ceremony in 1825, being long since dead, Rev. M. F. Dewitt officiated in his stead, and Charles C. Coston, P. S. Tanner, Christopher C. Coston, and Alfred Tanner, four of the witnesses to the marriage, were present at this anniversary.

Scene in the Detroit Police Court.

Lucy Ellis wasn't rigged out in Saratoga style, yet she demeaned herself as became a lady of education and intelligence. She made an impressive bow as she stood before the desk, and smoothing down her rumpled check apron she wiped her nose and remarked:

"Great change in the weather since last July."

"Prisoneress at the bar, you are charged with throwing a pop-bottle through the window of a corner grocery, and then trying to throw a box of soap out of the same window, all of which raised a great row."

"I am the queen of song, Mr. Justice," she replied, bowing again. "I can sing anything, from one of Mozart's farm ballads to one of Joaquin Miller's operatic airs."

"This isn't a singing-bee, Miss Ellis, but you are on trial for disturbing the peace and quietness of a refined neighborhood on Atwater street. Have you anything to say?"

"I am now organizing a musical troupe, and I hope you will forgive me," she replied.

"I can't help your troupe business. I can't have any such rows as you got up last night!"

"And you ought to hear me sing 'Old Log Cabin in the Lane,' Judge. I don't put on any of these high airs when I sing."

"You can sing for the amusement of your fellow-prisoners in the House of Correction. I'll make it two months."

"I will now proceed to sing that beautiful song called 'Sitting in the Garden,' she replied, but before she could do so Bijah had her sitting on the saw-horse, and soon after that he came out with the marks of her finger nails on his hands.—Detroit Free Press.

How to Float.

Men are drowned by raising their arms above water, the unbuoyed weight of which depresses the head. Other animals have neither motion or ability to act in a similar manner, and therefore swim naturally. When a man falls into deep water, he will rise to the surface, and will continue there if he does not elevate his hands. If he moves his hands under water, in any way he pleases, his head will rise so high as to give him full liberty to breathe; and if he will use his legs, as in the act of walking (or rather walking up stairs), his shoulders will rise above the water, so that he may use the less exertion with his hands, or apply them to other purposes. These plain directions are recommended to the recollection of those who have not learned to swim in their youth, as they may be found highlp advantageous in many cases.

MONKEYS are now playing the three-ball carom billiard game in France. They are to be introduced in a Christmas pantomime at one of the London theaters, and their patient tutor purposes exhibiting them at the Centennial, Philadelphia, next summer.

Too Big for His Place.

A good story is told of a man who was appointed "custodian of the flag" of the House of Representatives at Washington. The duties of the office are to hoist the flag over the Hall of Representatives at the hour of meeting and to lower it promptly after the adjournment. The first day after his appointment, promptly on time he grasped the Stars and Stripes and started for the roof of the Capitol to hoist it. Unfortunately, however, on reaching the garret he found that he could not squeeze himself through the small scuttle hole, consequently he had to throw up his appointment, and a little man was appointed in his place. If the first appointee has any influence among the members an appropriation will soon be made for enlarging that scuttle hole.

The Lion a Coward.

Prof. Samuel Haughton says in Nature: "I have proved that the strength of the lion in the fore limbs is only 69.9 per cent. of that of the tiger, and that the strength of the hind limbs is only 65.9 per cent of that of the tiger. I may add that five men can easily hold down a lion, while it requires nine men to control a tiger. Martial also states that the tigers always killed the lions in the amphitheater. The lion is, in truth, a pretentious humbug, and owes his reputation to his imposing mane, and he will run away like a whipped cur under circumstances in which the tiger will boldly attack and kill."

"For the Blood is the Life."

See Deuteronomy, xii: 23. The blood being the source from which the system is built up, and from which we derive our mental as well as physical capabilities, how important that it should be kept pure! If it contain vile, festering poisons, all organic functions become enfeebled. Settling upon important organs, as the lungs, liver, and kidneys, the effect is most disastrous. Hence it behooves all to keep their blood in a perfectly healthy condition, and more especially does this apply at this particular season of the year than any other. No matter what the exciting cause may be, the real cause of a large portion of all diseases is bad blood. Now, Dr. Pierce does not wish to place his Golden Medical Discovery in the catalogue of quack patent nostrums by recommending it to cure every disease, nor does he so recommend it; on the contrary, there are hundreds of diseases that he acknowledges it will not cure; but what he does claim is this, that there is but one form of blood diseases that it will not cure, and that disease is cancer. He does not recommend his Discovery for that disease, yet he knows it to be the most searching blood-cleanser yet discovered, and that it will free the blood and system of all other blood-poisons, be they animal, vegetable, or mineral. The Golden Medical Discovery is warranted by him to cure the worst forms of Skin Diseases, as all forms of Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions; also Glandular Swellings, and the worst form of Scrofulous and Ulcerated Sores of the Neck, Legs, or other parts, and all Scrofulous Diseases of the Bones, as White Swellings, Fever Sores, Hip-joint and Spinal Diseases,—all of which belong to Scrofulous diseases.

CONFIRMED—HIP-JOINT DISEASE CURED.

Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR—My wife first became lame nine years ago. Swellings would appear and disappear on her hip, and she was gradually becoming reduced, and her whole system rotten with disease. In 1871, a swelling broke on her hip, discharging large quantities, and since that time there are several openings. Have had five doctors, at an expense of $125, who say nothing will do any good but a surgical operation.

July 16, 1873, he writes thus: My wife has certainly received a great benefit from the use of your Discovery, for she was not able to get off the bed and was not expected to live a week when she commenced using it, a year ago. She has been doing most of her work for over six months. Has used twenty bottles, and still using it. Her recovery is considered as almost a miracle, and we attribute it all to the use of your valuable medicine. I can cheerfully recommend it as a blood-purifier and strength-restorer. J. M. ROBINSON.

Golden Medical Discovery is sold by Druggists.

CHAPPED hands, face, pimples, ringworm, salt rheum, and other cutaneous affections cured, and rough skin made soft and smooth, by using Juniper Tar Soap. Be careful to get only that made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, as there are many imitations made with common tar, all of which are worthless.

VEGETINE is nourishing and strengthening; purifies the blood; regulates the bowels; quiets the nervous system; acts directly upon the secretions, and arouses the whole system to action.

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS.

Will be found to possess those qualities necessary to the total eradication of all bilious attacks, prompt to start the secretions of the liver, and give a healthy tone to the entire system. Indeed, it is no ordinary discovery in medical science to have invented a remedy for those stubborn complaints, which develop all the results produced by a heretofore free use of calomel, a mineral justly dreaded by mankind, and acknowledged to be destructive in the extreme to the human system. That the properties of certain vegetables comprise all the virtues of calomel without its injurious tendencies, is now an admitted fact, rendered indisputable by scientific researches; and those who use the Mandrake Pills will be fully satisfied that the best medicines are those provided by nature in the common herbs and roots of the fields.

These pills open the bowels and correct all bilious derangements without salivation or any of the injurious effects of calomel or other poisons. The secretion of bile is promoted by these pills, as will be seen by the altered color of the stools, and disappearing of the sallow complexion and cleansing of the tongue.

Ample directions for use accompany each box of pills.

Prepared only by J. H. Schenck & Son, at their principal office, corner Sixth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, and for sale by all druggists and dealers. Price 25 cents per box.

Sarsaparillian and Its Associates.

Changes as Seen and Felt as They Daily Occur after Using a Few Doses of

DR. RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent,

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

1. Good spirits, disappearance of weakness, languor, melancholy; increase and hardness of flesh and muscles, etc.
2. Strength increases, appetite improves, relish for food, no more sour eructations or waterbrash, good digestion, calm and undisturbed sleep, awaken fresh and vigorous.
3. Disappearance of spots, blotches, pimples; the skin looks clear and healthy, the urine changed from its turbid and cloudy appearance to a clear sherry or amber color; water passes freely from the bladder through the urethra without pain or scalding, little or no sediment; no pain or weakness.
4. Marked diminution of quantity and frequency of involuntary weakening discharges (if afflicted that way), with certainty of permanent cure. Increased strength exhibited in the secreting glands, and functional harmony restored to the several organs.
5. Yellow tinge on the white of the eyes, and the swarthy, saffron appearance of the skin changed to a clear, lively and healthy color.
6. Those suffering from weak or ulcerated lungs or tubercles will realize great benefit in expectorating freely the tough phlegm or mucous from the lungs, air cells, bronchi or windpipe, throat or head; diminishing of the frequency of cough; general increase of strength throughout the system; stoppage of night sweats and pains and feeling of weakness around the ankles, legs, shoulders, etc.; cessation of cold and chills, sense of suffocation; hard breathing and paroxysms of cough on lying down or arising in the morning. All these distressing symptoms gradually and surely disappear.
7. As day after day the SARSAPARILLIAN is taken, new signs of returning health will appear; as the blood improves in strength and purity, disease will diminish, and all foreign and impure deposits, nodes, tumors, cancers, hard lumps, etc., be resolved away and the unsound made sound and healthy; ulcers, fever sores, syphilitic sores, chronic skin diseases gradually disappear.
8. In cases where the system has been salivated, and Mercury, Quicksilver, Corrosive Sublimate, (the principal constituent in the advertised Sarsaparillas, associated in some cases with Hyd. of Potass) have accumulated and become deposited in the bones, joints, etc., causing caries of the bones, rickets, spinal curvatures, contortions, white swellings, varicose veins, etc., the SARSAPARILLIAN will resolve away these deposits and exterminate the virus of the disease from the system.
9. If those who are taking these medicines for the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous or Syphilitic diseases, however slow may be the cure "feel better," and find their general health improving, their flesh and weight increasing or even keeping its own, it is a sure sign that the cure is progressing. In these diseases the patient either gets better or worse—the virus of the disease is not inactive; if not arrested and driven from the blood, it will spread and continue to undermine the constitution. As soon as the SARSAPARILLIAN makes the patient "feel better," every hour you will grow better and increase in health, strength and flesh.

The great power of this remedy is in diseases that threaten death—as in Consumption of the Lungs and Tuberculous Phthisis, Scrofula, Syphiloid Diseases, Wasting, Degeneration, and Ulceration of the Kidneys, Diabetes, Stoppage of Water (instantaneous relief afforded where catheters have to be used; thus doing away with the painful operation of using these instruments), dissolving stone in the bladder, and in all cases of Inflammation of the Bladder and Kidneys, in Chronic cases of Leucorrhea and Uterine diseases.

In tumors, nodes, hard lumps and syphiloid ulcers; in dropsy and venereal sore throat, ulcers, and in tubercles of the lungs; in gout, dyspepsia, rheumatism, rickets; in mercurial deposits—it is in these terrible forms of disease, where the human body has become a complete wreck, and where every hour of existence is torture, wherein this great remedy challenges the astonishment and admiration of the sick. It is in such cases, where all the pleasures of existence appear cut off from the unfortunate, and by its wonderful, almost supernatural agency, it restores the hopeless to a new life and new existence where this great remedy stands alone in its might and power.

In the ordinary skin diseases that every one is more or less troubled with, a few doses will in most cases, and a few bottles in the more aggravated forms, work a permanent cure.

Those afflicted with chronic diseases should purchase a package containing one dozen bottles. Price $10 per dozen, or $5 per half dozen bottles, or $1 per bottle. Sold by druggists.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

WILL AFFORD INSTANT EASE.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN INDIANA, JAN., 6th, 1876.

We are sitting quietly by and watching, the increase of candidates for the various, offices in the coming election. We have no pets and shall threfore go for the best man.

The news of a terrible Christmas disaster reaches us from Switzerland. In the midst of a children's festival at the village of Hilliken, in the Canton Aargau, the floor of the building where the audience was congregated gave way, and eighty were killed, while almost an equal number were injured.

Hon. J. H. Baker, we notice, introduced two bills in Congress, last week. One was in relation to Congaessional mileage, reducing the mileage of Congressmen from 20 cents a mile to actual expenses. The object of the other bill has escaped our memory.

The Goverment needs more Fishes and Bristows, and Pierreponts and Tildens, and Kerrs and Hendersons; and fewer Chandlers, and Randals, and Joyces. An ex-rebel is safer to trust than a Republican thief.—Rensselaer Union.

Quite right, friend. That is our stand exactly. While about one half of the Republican officials, from a country post-office to the White House, seems imbued with the spirit of thievery, the cry of Rebels in Congress will touch very lightly.

Referring to Gov. Hendricks' acceptance of an invit tion to deliver the addrres at the opening of the Southern exposition in New Orleans, on the 26th of February. the Times of that city remarks: "It can hardly be said that there is any political significance attached to Gov. Hendricks' visit here, and yet his coming at such a time, and on the eve of the tremendous campaign of 1876, in which he is certain to take an important place, will exert an influence which we cannot now foresee perhaps, but which we may have occasion to remember and be thankful for, long afterward."

Indiana is represented on the House committees as follows: Benons S. Fuller on Public Lands; James D. Williams, Chairman of Accounts; Speaker Kerr on Rules, Jephtha D. New on War Claims; Holman on Appropriations, and Clairman of Public Buildings and Grounds Landers either on Patents or Railways and Canals; General Hunter on Commerce; W. S. Haymond on Banking and Currency; James L. Evans on Mines and Mining: A. H. Hamilton on Foreign Affairs and on Enrolled Bills: and John H. Baker on Elections.

"We must have 'outrages' or we must perish." This is the song of the "bloody shirt," and Morton is already waving that "banner with a strange device" in the disgusted sight of the Senate. Constitutional limitations are as nothing to him. He would take Sheridan and a regiment or two of infantry, a squadron of cavalry and a convenient, battery of artillery and sail into Mississippi to see why the niggers vote the Democratic ticket and why a Democrats comes to this Senate. He would have the Senate know, would Morton, why there had been no outrages recently. The carpetbaggers should manage better. Here was a presidential election coming on in which he was to figure as a possible candidate and so outrageous, as it was and the Senate must put a stop to it before that body* became democratic also.

During the funeral of the Vice-President at the City Hall at Baltimore on the 26th ultimo. Major Harry Gilmer, a well-known ex-confederate cavalry officer. was introduced to Fred. Douglass, when, as a morning paper says, the following conversation occurred: The Major "Mr. Douglass let us shake hands over the bloody chasm." Mr. Douglass "No Major Gilmer, there is no bloody chasm. Let us shake hands across a free country."

"Fred. Douglass is quite right," says the Philadelphia Times. It is a free country, rather then a bloody chasm, across which the North and South are shaking hands. Arkansas, more impoverished then all her neighbors, has just voted fifteen thousand dollars for the Centennial. Now then old comrades a long shake, and hearty!"

This thing of "crooked whisky" is becoming popular with the Republican party. The Democratic however takes theirs "straight."

The Cheyenne Leader, of Dec. 17th says: Messrs. John Phillips and Frank G. Oliver arrived in town yesterday the latter direct from the Black Hills. Mr. Oliver is located in the Buckeye mining district, of which Mr. Mallory the original discoverer of the district, gave our readers an interesting description through the columns of the Leader a few months ago. Messrs. Mallory, Oliver, and three others have been at work in the Buckeye district for almost sixty days, and, notwithstanding the cold weather, have met with fine success. As the result of their labors Mr. Oliver has brought to Cheyenne gold dust and nuggets worth $927 in gold coin. We were shown yesterday two beautiful large nuggets, one valued at $28 50 and the other at $41; these are the best and largest specimens we have seen brought from the Black Hills Mr. Oliver will return in a few days with supplies for his mining camp. The Buckeye District it will be remembered is located on the northwestern slope of the Black Hills in Crook County, Wyoming Territory. Mr. Mallory predicted last fall, when he returned to Cheyenne from his propecting tour that the Buckeye district and the entire western slope of the Black Hills in Wyoming, would prove by far the richest portion of the mining region. Thus, day by day, we get more encouraging news from our gold fields in the north; very soon it will be admitted even by Prof. Winchell and the Denve newspapers that gold in paying quantities is being found in the Black Hills of Wyoming.

Mr. Mallory spoken of about is a son of our townsman Mr. Wm. Mallory, and a brother to Mrs. Mays and Gross.

Mr. Ed. Fosdick, of Butler, has been the guest of T. B, Totten for several days.

Mr. M. Kline had the bad luck to lose several fine Brahma chickens, by some disease unknown.

Mrs. Shaw, and daughter, of Ohio, have been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. L. Jackman for the past week or two.

Many are the boys who were waiting last christmas night for the back doors of the saloons to open up.

We take our pen in hand to let those know who attended theaters the past month, that this is the week of prayer.

Dry Houghton, Marshal, has the tax duplicate in his hands, and is ready to receive taxes from those who are delinquent.

O. J. Wilson, Esq., of Fort Wayne, gave us a call last Saturday. He was present at the Cantata and pronounced it good.

The roads being so bad that the editor could'nt drive White Stocking, he took the iron horse last Monday and will not return for a couple of weeks.

Miss Mattie Nickols and her guest, the accomplished and beautiful Miss Allie Whiting, of Ashland, Ohio, visited our sanctum during the holidays.

We think some of offering a $800 chromo, to the subscriber who will bring us in that wood he has promised.

The Rev. C. B. Shear, is desirous to return thanks to the unknown parties for the beautiful present received from the christmas tree.

Reub Williams of the Fort Wayne "Gazette," has received the appointment of deputy, under the second conptroller at Washington. We congratulate the general on his promotion.

A correct barometer of the market value of clothing, can be gleaned from this days price list furnished by Sam, Pete & Max, managers of the famous Star Clothing House.

Old and young, rich and poor, all unite in testifying to the true merit Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. For over a quarter of a century it has proved itself a true, tried and trusted friend.

We have received a fine piece of work printed at the "Democrat" office, Defiance, Ohio, and sent out as a centennial greeting, and a happy new year. This office does the handsomest job work of any in Ohio.

Mr. Carter, has been putting down a good, substantial sidewalk on Ninth street, and also having a tasty sign painted on the front of his business house. He is brim full of enterprise, and will soon have everything tasty and convenient.

We presume there are but very few members of the human family but what step out into the new year with high hopes of a better future. In this step in business, we hope they will not forget to step up to the Courier office and pay up. D'ye mind that, now.

Who Wants a Sleigh.

One of the finest cutters ever exhibited in Auburn will be given to the lucky man on next Thursday evening. Some of our best citizens are at the head of the sport. For further particulars call on D. D. Snyder, Esq.

We are much obliged to our brethern, for their kindly notices, and wish we deserved them, but we regret to say that we are not clerk to the Committee on public grounds, and Buildings in the House. That Committee has no clerk.

The best place in the city to get oysters is at Williams & McDougal's restaurant, on Main-st. They serve any kind of a lunch, and make reasonable charges. Farmers should bear this in mind when in town.

There will be preaching every night next week at the Baptist church except Monday and Saturday nights. Prayer meeting at 6½ o'clock, preaching at 7 o'clock. All christian workers will be gladly welcomed to participate in this work of salvation.

We congratulate our popular friend, D. Olney, Esq., conductor on the Saginaw road on his being the recipent of a magnificent silver lantern by the employees of the road. Mr. O. is a square boy and is deserving of this token of esteem.

Chas. T. Murray, editor of the South Bend Herald, who was killed a few weeks ago with a "hoss-pis-tol" wrote his first article last week since his death, and it road as natural as life. Its hard to kill an editor, for if otherwise hundreds of them would have been starved to death long ago.

We see that our popular friend Nicholas Ensley, present County Treasurer, is favorably mentioned as a candidate for State Treasurer. Nick. is a genial, clever gentleman, and as a Republican infliction, we would be more resigned at his nomination than any other man they could name, and we believe he would make a strong candidate.

Notice to Contractors.

Mr. Eli Walker, of Waterloo, will receive bids for the building of a church, at the above place, until Jan. 10th, 1876 The building is to be frame 35x45 and 16 ft high, and built on the same plan of the German Methodist Church at Auburn. Material furnished. Address, Eli Walker, Waterloo, Ind.

Nearly every city and village on God's foot stool had some way of bidding the old year adieu and welcoming the new, except Auburn. In large cities every bell chimed, steam whistles sounded on the stilly air. In smaller towns canons were fired, bonfires and the shooting of guns were had. We are sorry that some one did not take hold of the matter.—Many of us will never see another hundred years and our chance is gone.

Garrett Items.

—There was considerable excitement here over the arrest of a tramp for stealing $20.00 from a fireman on the B. & O. but at the close of the trial the man got clear.

—James Jones was sent to the county jail to await the next session of the circuit court. The charge against him is grand larceny at our election.

At the election to incoporate Garrett, there were 76 votes cast in favor and 000 against it.

—Three Garrett roosters are now in the Auburn jail, but we learn are having lots of fun, by singing and dancing to the tune of a mouth-organ. B.

For School Boys.

We publish the name of each scholar who did'nt whisper last month. Now, we don't want any naughty boys to raise a row about it, and say that Jim Sunflower asked them for their bulls-eye marble to plump-for-keeps with Julia Cornstock, when the teacher was talking to Bill Johnson's big sister in the hall—and that they saw Liza Jane Jones looking at the wax dolls in a show-window long after the bell rang. The first boy we hear of saying anything of this kind, will have to stand on the rostrum, head down and heels up, and balance a black-board pointer on his left toe while the other boys are out at recess playing tag.

Now is the time to burn wood. If ever a man needed wood to burn it is now. Wood will buy any-thing. The farmer who has a large stack of wood to sell is well off. One load of wood buys a thousand dollars worth of goods and a copy of the COURIER one year. The merchant who lives in the city can sell anything in his store if he will permit the wood man to take the article in advance and bring in the wood in a few days after the said wood man has killed his hogs, or the roads are frozen over a little. He of the wood then strikes another trade with the boot and shoe man, and by the same promise gets a pair of shoes for that same load of wood," and so on adinfntum, ad nauseum. We'll bet an old boot-jack that one million dollars worth of wood is now due the merchants for goods sold and delivered." And another boot-jerker that we could buy the entire acount for ten dollars if we had the money. The stench of wood never delivared is simply putrid, and has become so deleterious to the nostrils of some that they have "gone back" on it.

Another Check Almost Passed In.

Mr. Jno. Moore, of this city, was coming up the Baltimore road, last Sunday, and accidently fell into a cattle gaurd, and was unable to free himself, one limb being fastened so tightly. A train was coming and Mr. Moore could do nothing but look into the dark future and prepare for his everlasting home.—As luck would have it Mr. F. Bungey happened along and by prying the rails apart he was relieved. We are told that he got away just in time to save himself.

Billiard Match.

The billiard tournament at Butler last Thursday evening, was not attended by many of our amateur players, yet a large audience assembled to witness the contest for the championship. The Tournament was opened by a game of 200 points, between Greenamyer and Shobe, the former running out while the latter made 142.

Best runs,—Greenamyer 21; Shobe 19; winner's average 6, 36-29.

Paul Clifford and Greenamyer, followed in a game of 200 points which stood at the close, Clifford, 200; Greenamyer, 154.

Best runs,—Clifford, 26; Greenamyer, 25. Winners average, 9, 1-11.

The third game of 200 points was played by Clifford and Shobe, the former winning against 122 points by the latter.

Best runs,—Clifford, 43; Shobe, 31. Winner's average, 6. 26-29.

The following is the award of the prizes.

Clifford, Waterloo, 1st prize.	$15.00.
Greenamyer, Butler, 2nd "	10.00
Shobe, Albion, 3rd "	5.00

Still Another Accident.

Mrs. Bottles, who fell through a culvert on the Saginaw road, and killed herself, a full account of which will be found in another column, when another of our citizens, Adam Lizey, is horribly mangled, but a few rods distance on the same road. The mail train going south last Feiday evening, had been delayed nearly an hour with a hot journal, and when it left Waterloo, the lamp in the headlight was lighted, but not turned up so as to give much light. Darkness came on rapidly and before the train reached Auburn it was somewhat dark. Just before it reached the crossing beyond the stave factory, it struck the form of Mr. Lizey, in an upright or prostrate condition, it is not known, and crushed it terribly. The body was nearly cut in two about the loins, and his forhead was crushed in. Rev. Mr. Jones, coming along soon after discovered the corpse, and gave the alarm, when it was taken to the station before the freight came along. We were on the train, but no one there seemed conscious of what had been done. Had the headlight been turned up full, the engineer would certainly have seen him. Mr. Lizey has led a dissipated life for years, but aside from this was rather an industrious, good natured German.

THE BEAUTIFUL QUEEN.

Fine Rendition of Esther.

Our local singers won for themselves considerable praise, in their fine rendition of the beautiful Cantata of "Queen Esther," on last Friday and Saturday evenings. Its presentations was surrounded with many difficulties, yet these were all surmounted by the indomitable energy and perseverence of each individual member, and hence their great success. Only several days were had for thorough practice, and nearly all were strangers to the place, yet their rendition pleased every one who attended. Prof. Heath, of Fort Wayne, who so ably assisted the class, could be with them but three evening in their rehearsals, yet he was much pleased with the performance of each. The Professor is persistent, and to his untiring efforts are the class greatly indebted. Mr. Stabler, of Fort Wayne, as the King, did splendidly through his first attempt. The Queen, by Miss Alice Widney, was much admired, and her solos, though difficult, were finely given. Haman, by Mr. Peterson, could not have been better, and his fine voice was heard to great advantage. The most difficult part, Mordecai, was taken by Mr. H. Casebeer the first night and Porf. Heath the second, both doing fine zeresh. Miss Orpha Bodine, won golden opinions in her excellent persenation of that character. Mis Nettie Williams, as Mordecai's sister, was superb, it being rendered with a grace and pathos that was charming. Mr. M. Long, did the High Priest to perfection, rendering the solo in good style. But we have no time to comment upon the good singing of all. The choruses were splendid, and the whole was really a delightful treat to our citizens. We must not omit to speak of the excellent service rendered by Miss McCutchon, who presided so admirably and gracefully at the piano. She labored zealously for success, and she contributed largely to that end. The Cantata was not as largely patronized as was expected, as great expense was engendered in getting it up but the receipts were very fair. It will be given again in a few week at this place and perhaps at other points, in the future.

To hom it May Concern.

This is to notify the public generally that my wife, Sophia Whitmore, left my bed and board in August 1875, without cause or provocation; and all persons are hereby notified not to harbor or trust her on my account, as I will neither pay nor cause to be paid any debts of her contracting.

1f E. R. WHITMORE.

Daring Forgery.

The Ligonier "Banner" gives an extended account of a daring forgery perpetrated by one L. F. Fisher, on the citizens bank of that place last week. Fisher made a draft on the citizens bank of Peru, for $2,180 and got a drover named Sackett, to present it at the Ligonier bank. There being some doubt as to its genuiness, the cashier sent a dispatch to Peru, to ascertain whether the bank there had issued such a draft. As the messenger was taking the answer from the telegraph office to the bank, he was intercepted by Fisher, who asked him if he had a message for Straus, the cashier, and said "they wanted it quick. Give it to me." The messenger not suspecting, handed it over. He managed to substitute another dispatch he had prepared which he handed back the messenger, telling him he had business at the freight office, and left the messenger who therefore delivered the bogus dispatch which said "It is correct" The drover then drew $1,500, and handed it to Fisher, together with a certificate for the balance, $680, who gave the latter to his father whom he owed $200. Then Fisher lit out, and his father presented the clerk soon after, but a letter had been received from Peru pronouncing the whole a forgery. It is claimed that the drover knew nothing about the fraudulent of the draft, but presented it as a favor to Fisher, who claimed he owed the bank and they would deduct the same if he presented it. It was an ingenious trick and the telegraph Co., will be held responsible for the bogus draft.

Something Reliable.

In this age of humbug and cheap show, it is a great relief to turn to something in our vicinity that has real merit, and shows up, not mere vanity, but those features that commend themselves to the good judgment of everyone. Cheap John may succeed for a while to hood-wink the public, but he is soon found out and goes down with a crash, while his less pretentious neighbor actuated by good business principles that every one should have the full value of their money, goes and finally wins the race. The house that possesses the merit of being reliable in its dealings, should be popular with the people. We believe there are none more so than the large millinery establishment now under the management of J. R. Lanning, Esq., one of our most popular citizens. He has taken great pride in this department of trade, and has now on display a really beautiful and extensive assortment. The ladies will be surprised to find every department complete, and a visit will convince them that they can find here equally as fine dress goods and trimmings as they have heretofore secured abroad, at less cost. A fine line of silks, delaines, alpaccas, calicos, merinoes, &c., can always be found in great variety and quality. A large assortment of made goods for ladies and children, is also to be found here, such as dresses, cloaks, under garments, hats bonnets, &c. In fact the millinery department is unusually attractive, while the display cannot fail to interest every one. What you purchase here can be relied upon, as being up to every representation. Our lady friends will find it to their advantage to call at this store before purchasing elsewhere.

Cheap Notoriety.

We noticed a few days ago some of our would-be-leading men soliciting money to buy a cane for a healthy able-bodied citizen of this place, who needs such an article just as much as a dog does two tails. Now, we have no objection to people using their money as they please in making gifts or presents, but when it is done to obtain a little notoriety, or get their names in the papers, to advertise their acts, it is not only very cheap but cheeky. We have in our midst many worthy needy ones, whom these men would scarcely give a cent, because their names would not be published. There are poor persons in our place who, if they could get the am't to be paid for that cane, would be made happy and comfortable the present winter, and whose hearts would overflow with prayers and gratitude to the giver of such an amount. There are women and children who almost daily are pinched with want and cold, who would shower blessings on the head of these givers for even a pittance, yet they cannot get it. Is there not an old, honest and hard working man in our midst, seen almost daily on our streets, carrying his buck and saw and so lame that, with the aid of a crutch, he scarcely moves, who while sawing wood must lean on his crutch, to whom it would be a christian duty to give the value of that cane rather than the man who is to be the recipient. We believe in charity rather than ostentation. R

Stop that Cough.

No pulmonary complaint however obstinate, can resist the healing influence of Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Cherry and Horehound.—Nothing that we have ever sold acts so promptly and effectually in coughs, colds, hoarseness, sore throat, asthma and all diseases of the throat lungs and chest, leading to consumption. It is a certain cure for Hooping Cough and Croup. Contains no opium and is pleasant to take.—Cough worn victims whose lungs are racked and torn with paroxysms that threatened to choke them, find speedy relief in its use. Trial size 10 cents. About Margaret.

One of our local poets has sent us the following little poem about Margaret, and we should judge from the text that Margaret had mittened him and he did'nt feel good. He is not equal to Longfellow or Carlysle as a rhymester, but he takes hold of the English language as though he meant business. Hear him:

Margaret! Margaret! Margaret!
I come to say farewell,
And for why I should at all come,
I do not know if I can tell;
Except I was not quite woke up
Out of my beautiful, beautiful dream.
Which suddenly to a night-mare has shared
Which make things all di[illegible]

Marg! Marg! Marg!
How could you treat me so,
How could you hoist me in heaven so high
Only to sling me so low.
How could you change the face of the earth,
And leave me not happiness there,
Take the sun, moon and stars all away
And make it all dark with dispair.

Margaret, the red, red rose,
Evermore not so sweet shall be
For it will make me think on those red lips,
So cruel and false to me,
And never more in the summer time
Will I love to look at the blue sky,
I'll be afraid 'twas a fraud, for its color was blue
Most so blue like false Margaret's eye.

Margaret, when the little birds sing,
At his music to listen I'll fear,
For the sweeter he sings 'twas the more like that voice
Which has stolen my heart out of my ear.
I cannot trust any more
That's above or below the green sod,
When the face of the angels, like yours prove a lie,
That was hard, I believe in God.

Margaret you know that good book says
You will reap the same that you sow
And my heart gets full of fear about you
So I warn you before I go.
Some fellow will come that you like pretty well
And you will think that he loves you some too,
Remember that time about the way you treated me,
And look out that he don't treat you (ditto)

Spencerville Items.

SPENCERVILLE, Dec. 27, 1875.

—The Weekly "News" did not appear Saturday.

—In last week's items the letter L was turned into an S, making a bad blunder changing "Laten" to "Saten." A similar mistake occured last fall, transfering Lock, of St. Joe to Sock, of St. Joe. In the report of the school, the decimal points were omitted in the per cent of attendance and daily average. It should read, daily average 97.3, per cent. of attendance, 96.5.

—The concert Christmas eve was a nice treat.

—Young fellow you had better bring Sol. Barney's knife back, or folks may hear about that butter you sold Al. Bishop.

—Charley went to the oyster supper with a Rush and many went home that way.

—The other night while Elex. Bartz was returning from Auburn, when a stranger jumped into the wagon, said he was going to ride. He rode as far as he wished, knocked Mr. Bartz down and attempted to rob him. Bartz finally succeeded in throwing him out of the wagon saving his money. When Mr. Bartz received the blow, he had his hand in his pocket hold of his pocket-book. In falling he drew his hands out and with it the pocket-book, letting it fall in the wagon box. In the struggle he had his clothes cut up badly around the breast.

—Linen was cheap at Barney's, but it soon went up—up stairs—Don't call so late any more. It places one in bad circumstances.

Marriages.

FULLER—SEIBERT—On the 2nd inst, by Justice Walborn, at the residence of Justice Altenburg. Mr. Samuel Fuller, and Miss Mary Seibert, all of this county.

Miss Eliza Fluke, only daughter of our fellow townsman, Mr. Philip Fluke, was married on last Tuesday week to Mr. S. L. Gibson of this place.

Geo. Crane, of Sedan, and Miss Lotta Griffith, of Corunna, has come together, and will "forever after" keep house for themselves. We are glad to know that Geo. has settled down, and also that he has chose a handsome and beautiful wife. Shake.

Coroner's Inquest.

The following is the inquest held over the body of A. Lizey.

We the undersigned Jurors, empanneled and sworn on the 31st day of Dec in the year 1875 at the township of Union in the County of DeKalb, Ind., by J. J. Latson, Corenor, in and for the township of Union in said county, to inquire and true presentment made; in what manner and by whom Adam Lizey, whose body was found about one half mile North of the F. W. J. & S. Depot, on the 31st day of December, A. D. 1875, came to his death. After hearing the evidence and examining the body, we do find that the descesed came to his death by being intoxicated, in consequence of which he sat down on the track of the aforsaid R. R. and was run over by the mail trian going south about five o'clock P. M. of said day.

James E. Johnson, W. S. Thomas,
John Gross, Thom Baldock,
G. Rhodenbaugh, S. U. Tarney,
Jurors.

ASTRONOMY FOR 1876.

The year 1876 will be a leap year, its Dominical letters being B A. The epact is the number of days between the last new moon and the first day of the new year. The epact is used to tell Easter Sunday. This year the epact is 4, and Easter Sunday falls on April 16, Ash Wednesday being March 1.

There are two eclipses of the sun during the year. The first is an annular eclipse March 25, visible only in its perfect phenomenon on a line from Vancouver's Island to the northwestern shore of Hudson's Bay. Outside that limit it will be visible throughout the United States as a partial eclipse. A total eclipse of the sun occurs on the afternoon of Sept. 17, not visible on any part of the American continent.

The eclipses of the moon in 1876 are also two. The first occurs shortly after 10 o'clock on the night of March 9. It will be visible in every part of the United States and Canada. The second eclipse of the moon will take place on Sept. 3. It will be invisible in this country.

The earth is in perihelion, or nearest to the sun, January 2, and in its aphelion, or greatest distance from the sun, July 1. The earth is again in perihelion December 31.

THE SUN.

The vernal equinox, or sun's entrance into Aries, occurs March 20; the summer solstice, or sun's entrance into Cancer, occurs June 20; the autumnal equinox, or sun's entrance into Libra, occurs September 22; and the winter solstice, or sun's entrance into Capricorn, occurs December 21.

THE PLANETS.

Mercury will be at his greatest elongations from the sun January 28, after sunset, and March 20, before sunrise. If the weather is clear he may be seen as a small disk like burnished silver for one or two days after these dates.

Venus will be an evening star till July 14, and rise before the sun during the remainder of the year. She will be at her greatest brilliancy August 30.

Mars will be an evening star till Aug. 12, and rise before the sun for the remainder of the year.

Jupiter will be a morning star till May 17, and an evening star after that date till Dec. 14. He will be stationary in the head of Scorpio nearly all the year. At 1 o'clock on the morning of Feb. 26 he will pass so close to Beta in Scorpio that the distance between the edge of the planet and the star will be only one-ninth of the apparent diameter of Jupiter.

Saturn will be an evening star till Feb. 17, when he will rise before the sun till Aug. 27, when he will be on the meridian at midnight, and again an evening star (in Aquarius) during the rest of the year.

Uranus will be on the meridian at midnight Feb. 6. He will be in the head of Leo.

Neptune will be on the meridian at midnight Oct. 26.

OCCULTATIONS.

Feb. 3, from twenty minutes to 9 p. m. to about half-past 11 p. m., the moon being near her first quarter, will pass over the Pleiades, occulting in succession all the prominent members of the group except one. She will again pass through the Pleiades Nov. 2, from eleven to twenty minutes past 11 in the evening, occulting three of the six that are ordinarily visible.

SUNDAYS IN 1876.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

THE liabilities of the Providence (R. I.) Tool Company, which recently failed, are stated at $2,783,000; assets, $4,145,000. Creditors have granted an extension, and the business of the company will go on without interruption.

HENRY C. BOWEN sued the Brooklyn Eagle for libel, claiming $100,000 damages. The case has just been tried, the jury awarding him $1,000.

A SHORT time ago Leodica Fredenburgh, and Albert Fredenburgh, her son, were condemned to be executed at Herkimer, N. Y., Dec. 31, for the murder of Orlo Davis, an aged cripple. They were committed on the evidence of a young married daughter of Albert Fredenburgh. A day or two before the day set for their execution the daughter confessed that she testified falsely on the trial; that she and her grandmother committed the murder, and that her father had nothing to do with it....Patrick Gallicher, of Providence, R. I., getting drunk on Christmas night, attempted to strike his wife, but struck his infant child killing it instantly....The ninety-eighth anniversary of the battle of Trenton, which occurred Dec. 26, 1777, was celebrated with considerable spirit at Trenton, N. J., on the 26th ult....The Hudson River Sugar Refinery, at Hastings, N. Y., was burned last week. Loss, $500,000....A Mutual Council is to be called by Plymouth Church and Mrs. Moulton to consider the two questions submitted by that lady—the sufficiency and validity of the reasons of the church for dropping her name from the roll; and the sufficiency and validity of Mrs. Moulton's reasons for abstaining so long from the services and sacraments of the church.

THOMAS R. HOUSTON, of the Pittsburgh Gazette, is dead....Several heavy failures are reported from the East, among others the following: Cipperly & Collins, hat dealers in New York, with liabilities of $300,000; G. N. & J. A. Smith, woolen manufacturers, of Worcester, Mass., liabilities, $500,000 to $600,000; Lee & Walker, of Philadelphia, liabilities, $200,000. ....Harvard and Yale have withdrawn from the Inter-Collegiate Rowing Association and will not hereafter take part in the annual rowing contests....Recognizances on seven indictments for felony against Tweed have been declared forfeited. It is stated that the sureties will claim exemption from the forfeiture of the bonds upon the ground that the escape was due to the negligence or connivance of the law officers, and that the sureties cannot therefore be held accountable....Frank Moulton has brought suit against Mr. Beecher for malicious prosecution, laying damages at $50,000....Three men lost their lives in a mine near Wilkesbarre, Pa., last week by the explosion of fire-damp.

NATHANIEL CARR, a Boston merchant, took a box containing $60,000 worth of bonds and papers from the vaults of a bank in that city, and, while examining its contents at the bank, had his attention diverted by a stranger, when a confederate stole the box....New York papers announce the death near that city of Rev. Henry Boehm, the oldest Methodist preacher in the country, and probably the oldest clergyman in the world. He was born June 8, 1775.

THE WEST.

THE trial of W. W. Embry for shooting Col. D. R. Anthony, at Leavenworth, Kan., has resulted in a verdict of acquittal.

ST. LOUIS celebrated Christmas in a lively manner. In a fight between some boys, one shot the other in the mouth. In a domestic row a woman chopped up a man with a hatchet. Another boy was stabbed in the knee by a bootblack. Two women got on a Christmas drunk, and one slashed the other with a razor. The list of festivities closes with another domestic affray, in which one man beats another with a club almost to death....Hon. William A. Richardson, a leading Democratic politician of Illinois, and an ex-United States Senator, died at his home in Quincy, on the 27th ult., aged 64. His disease was paralysis.

A MONSTER aerolite, emitting a light almost as great as that of day, passed over St. Louis a few nights ago, and exploded near the city. The concussion caused by the explosion was distinctly felt, and was sufficient to shake the windows of houses, and, in some instances, to shake entire buildings....Supreme Judge Wilson, of Idaho, is dead.

THE campaign against the Chicago whisky ring has been reopened, and four more distilleries have been seized. The seized distilleries aggregated a daily capacity of about 14,000 gallons of spirits....Mrs. Rachel Gordon and three children, aged 12, 10 and 8 years, were burned to death in their dwelling, 10 miles north of Rising Sun, Ind., on Christmas....A strange double suicide is reported by telegraph from Los Angeles, Cal. E. G. Foster and Celia Foot, married the previous evening, were found dead in each other's arms on a public street, having taken strychnine. Another man had claimed the woman as his wife. This caused the act.

POLITICAL.

A WASHINGTON dispatch states that Pinchback has given up his fight and will resign before the Louisiana Legislature adjourns, in order that a successor may be elected.

SPEAKER KERR passed the holidays with a friend in Iowa....The St. Louis police have commenced a vigorous war against the policy shops of that city.

THE Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune telegraphs: "A number of Republicans are preparing to make vigorous opposition to the proposition of the Democrats to reduce the army. The political argument used quietly among members will be that it is a device of the Democrats to deplete the army while it is strongly Republican, and to fill it up again if the Democrats carry the next election, mainly from the South."

THE Indianapolis Journal nominates Oliver P. Morton for President....A national labor convention has been called to meet at Pittsburgh in April.

THE SOUTH.

WITHIN the past week the revenue officers have captured fifteen illicit distillers, destroyed ten stills, and secured 10,000 gallons of sour mash, in the neighborhood of Greensboro, S. C....Extensive arrangements are being made for the Mardi Gras festival in New Orleans and other Southern cities.

WOODWARD, the dishonest School Trustee of Shelby County, Tenn., who some time ago embezzled $160,000 of the school fund, has been arrested in San Francisco and taken back to Memphis for trial.

E. L. PATTERSON, member of the Legislature from Natchitoches Parish, La., was recently shot and killed by one Cosgrove, editor of the Natchitoches Vindicator....The Alabama Legislature met on the 28th ult....Fisk University of Nashville, Tenn., a magnificent new building for the education of colored youth, was dedicated on New Year's Day.

A TERRIFIC hurricane, demolishing everything in its pathway, and killing a number of persons, visited the vicinity of Hickman, Ky., one day last week. Death and destruction was sowed along the entire track of the tornado, which made a noise which was heard for miles and miles.

WASHINGTON.

GEN. BABCOCK returned to Washington last week. It is stated that the President firmly believes in his innocence, and has no doubt that the forthcoming trial will fully vindicate his secretary....The Chicago Times' Washington correspondent telegraphs that "the Government people are getting ready for a good hard fight in Chicago. They regard the whisky men of that city as more powerful socially and financially, than those of St. Louis. They know also that Chicago men in a fight have better staying qualities, and it will not be reasonable to expect that there will be any pleading guilty in advance of trials, as there has been in St. Louis. The men of Chicago are banded together for a desperate resistance, and will use every means to defeat the Government." The ball opens in Chicago on the 11th of January. There are whispers in the air that some startling disclosures are in store for the public, compared with which the St. Louis developments will fall into insignificance....Information has been filed with the authorities at Washington that Spanish agents have violated the neutrality laws by enlisting Italians in New York for service in Spanish regiments in Cuba. The matter is to be investigated.

A DELEGATION of Texans recently called upon President Grant to urge him to take some effective measures to protect the Rio Grande frontier from Mexican depredations. The President, in reply, referred to the proposed reduction of the army, and said that the present force was not sufficient to occupy all the territory needing protection; and, if the army is reduced, it will be necessary to withdraw troops from Territories where new mines are about to be opened, and where new comers need protection. A greater force on the Rio Grande, he said, is out of the question.

THE Comptroller of the Currency has called upon the National Banks for their reports showing their condition at the close of business on Friday, the 17th of December.

SECRETARY FISH says there is not a word of truth in the stories of impending troubles with Spain, but, on the contrary, that the countries are on good terms, with every prospect of every question pending between them being peacefully settled....A Washington dispatch says: "It is asserted in prominent circles that if, as reported from London, 'There is a near advent of European intervention in Cuba,' our Government would inform such powers as might combine for this purpose that their course would be highly offensive to the United States, as it would imply a design of controlling affairs in localities contiguous to this country, thereby injuriously affecting our commercial and political interests, and for this reason, apart from other considerations, the United States should continue to act in the spirit of the Monroe doctrine."....The work of consolidating the revenue collection districts throughout the country has been completed, and the number is reduced from 209 to 163. The annual saving to the Government by this consolidation will be about $250,000.... The Secretary of the Treasury has given directions for the retirement of $644,550 legal-tender notes on account of national bank circulation issued during December. This will leave outstanding legal-tenders, until a further reduction, $37,182,722. The amount of additional national bank notes issued since Nov. 1 is $1,761,280, and the total amount issued since the passage of the act of June 14, 1874, is $12,715,975. The amount of legal-tender notes deposited by national banks for the purpose of retiring circulation since Nov. 1 is $2,987,206.

CREDENCE is quite generally given in Washington to a cable dispatch from Vienna, alleging that Secretary Fish has officially requested of all the European Governments an expression of views regarding American intervention in Cuba, such expression being desired as data for President Grant's supplementary message to Congress. The Vienna dispatch further states that, while a satisfactory reply has been received from all the Governments, Great Britain is especially eager to further the proposed step, and that the other powers, though agreed as to its propriety, hesitate to take the initiative....Under a decision of the Attorney-General, $176,000 illegally collected as income tax from the Illinois Central Railroad Company, is to be repaid to the company itself, and not to the alien stockholders. The latter, Mr. Pierrepont says, may present their claims against the company through the courts.

GENERAL.

AT a recent meeting of coal merchants in Pittsburgh, who are interested in the improvement of the Ohio River, a report was read by a committee appointed at a former meeting, in which it was set forth that the best method of improving the Ohio would be to keep it near to its unobstructed normal condition; to remove the wrecks, snags and other impediments; to place wing-dams where the water spreads too much, and at the head of some of the islands, to turn the water and increase the depth in the channel side; and to require channel spans of 400 feet length in all bridges.

THERE has been received in Philadelphia a formal acceptance by Pope Pius IX. of an invitation by the Centennial authorities requesting his Holiness to give his recognition to the enterprise by contribution to the Exposition works of art from the galleries of the Vatican or from the workshops over which he has control. The letters of the Pope are couched in the warmest terms of friendship for the United States....The Philadelphia parties who made the recent shipment of fresh beef to Europe have received word that it reached Liverpool in good condition. Another shipment has since been made....The Dominion Government have under consideration the subject of extending the provisions of the extradition treaty, so as to prevent criminals within Canada or the United States from taking advantage of the facilities of escape afforded by a long line of boundary.

THE Mark Lane Express reports the European breadstuffs market dull and declining. ....The Secretary of the Centennial Commission has received a letter announcing that the editors of Indiana, with their wives, numbering in all about 200 persons, will visit Philadelphia about the 16th of January, for the purpose of viewing the Centennial buildings....Susan B. Anthony refuses to go to Brooklyn to testify in the Loader perjury case.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL JEWELL has notified the British postal authorities that from and after the 1st of January his department will demand the payment of the full cost of transporting all Australian mails across this continent, which are now transported at an actual loss, under Great Britain's construction of the Postal Union requirements.

A BATTLE was recently fought between Mexican troops and Pesquiera's revolutionary forces in the State of Sonora, in which the former were badly defeated. At last accounts the insurgents were marching on Hermosillo.

FOREIGN.

TWEED is reported to be in Havana....The Sultan of Turkey is spending all his available cash in hastily arming his forces on sea and land....The Prince of Wales was at Calcutta at last accounts, where he had a magnificent reception....A serious revolution is in progress in Sonora, Northern Mexico, and anarchy reigns supreme.

A CABLE dispatch announces the death of Earl Stanhope, the English historian and essayist, aged 70 years....Ex-President Thiers has consented to stand for election as a Senator in the new branch of the French Legislature. ....A Vienna dispatch says that Turkey has sent a circular to the Powers pledging herself to the execution of the reforms promised by the Sultan.... Russia, it is said, will shortly annex the whole of Khokand....Late advices from Abyssinia state that a force of 2,000 Egyptian troops sent by the Khedive to subjugate the Abyssinians were drawn into ambush and nearly every man slaughtered. The bodies of the officers were literally hacked to pieces and their heads stuck on spears and thrown to the wild beasts. The Khedive will send a force of 12,000 men, accompanied by all the American officers, to avenge the massacre.

THE work of restoring the Column Vendome, in Paris, destroyed by the Communists, was completed on the 27th ult., and the statue of Napoleon was replaced on the top of the column. No public ceremonies attended the proceedings....A Christmas gathering in the village of Hallikon, Switzerland, was overtaken by a fearful calamity. The festivities were being held in a school house, when the flooring gave way, and 80 persons were killed and 50 wounded....Advices from the seat of war in Herzegovina report a great battle at Nitchitza, lasting nearly all day. Fifteen thousand troops were engaged. The Turkish forces claim a decisive victory. The fighting on both sides was desperate, and the losses were severe. ....Ex-Queen Isabella, of Spain, is down with the measles.

FROM the Philippine Islands comes news of a dreadful hurricane, resulting in an appalling destruction of lives and property. Two hundred and fifty lives were lost, and 3,800 dwellings were destroyed. Many cattle perished, and the crops in all directions ruined....The little unpleasantness between China and Great Britain, growing out of the murder of some of the latter's subjects, has been settled by negotiation, but the terms are very unsatisfactory to the Mongolians, and a war between the two countries is not improbable....Advices from India report that the British troops have completely quelled the Malay insurrection.

A MADRID dispatch reports that the Alfonsists have concentrated 80,000 men in Navarre and Alava....The French Assembly has passed, after an exciting debate, a bill providing for a continuance of the state of siege in the cities of Paris, Versailles, Lyons, and Marseilles.... Ex-Queen Isabella strenuously insists upon taking up her residence in Spain. The Ministry, however, are violently opposed to it, and a serious split among the Royalists is threatened in consequence....The Kingdom of Portugal is making preparations to be represented in a proper manner at our Centennial.... Certain German newspapers, taking the horrible crime of Thomassen at Bremerhaven for their text, have seen fit to descant unfavorably upon American civilization, some of them holding up this exhibition of brutality as one of the natural outgrowths of our form of government. American residents in Berlin, not willing to remain silent under such groundless aspersions of their national honor, held a meeting the other day, and entered a solemn protest against the unwarrantable utterances of the German press, declaring that Thomassen's crime affects the honor of the human race, not that of any particular nationality.

Dead-Letter Auction.

The Postmaster General has authorized a "dead-letter office auction" sale in Washington, beginning on the 19th of January next. The catalogue embraces 8,600 different articles, sent through the mails, but unredeemed, including books, papers, music, engravings, jewelry, neckties, baby clothes, socks, scarfs, violin strings, scissors, knives, shoe brushes, gloves, stockings, corn crushers, scythe stones, toothpicks, charms, asthmatic fumigators, nightcaps, sheetings, ribbons, saws and corn huskers.

THE gamins of London, being forbidden to beg in the streets, have neatly circumvented the law. They purchase a bundle of straw, commerce of all kinds being free, and, sitting at the corner of a street, entreat pedestrians to buy a single whisk. It is said that some urchins by this traffic make a profit of over ten dollars a day.

THAT the French are rapidly rising to prosperity may be seen from the following figures representing the income of Paris theaters for the last eight years: In 1868 it amounted to 16,000,000 francs, in '69 to 17,000,000, in '70 (war) to 9,000,000, in '71 (war) to 7,000,000, in '72 to 18,000,000, in '73 to 20,000,000, in '74 to 23,000,000, and this year it will amount to 25,000,000 francs.

IT is now positively asserted that Paul Morphy, the famous chess player, is not insane, but is merely suffering from ill health.

DOGGING A DEFAULTER.

A Detective's Singular, but Successful, Method of Capturing a Runaway Bank Teller.

On Saturday evening two men and a woman arrived in the city by the Savannah train, and registered at the Charleston Hotel under the names of H. W. Davies, Thomas Nichols and Mrs. Joseph H. Nichols. Nichols is the absconding teller of the Canadian Bank of Montreal, who, on the 11th of September last, stole from that bank quite a large amount of money, and, in company with his father, levanted to St. Augustine, Fla. A reward of $10,000 was offered for the delivery of Thomas Nichols at any place in the British dominions, and Henry W. Davies, a well-known detective, was sent in pursuit of him. The detective has been in St. Augustine, Fla., at the same hotel with Nichols, for several weeks, but could not arrest him, there being no extradition treaty for that class of offenses between the United States and the British provinces. But he kept his man in sight, and finally worried him into a surrender. This was accomplished by advertising. In every portion of the city a circular was posted, setting forth the theft, and offering $10,000 reward for the arrest of the fugitive. Every morning the following circular was placed in a conspicuous place in the hotel at which Nichols and his family boarded:

THIEF!—$10,000 reward. On Sept. 11, 1875, Thomas Nichols, Teller of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, at Montreal, Dominion of Canada, stole from said bank a large quantity of Canadian legal-tender notes of the denominations of $500 and $1,000, and, accompanied by his father, Joseph H. Nichols, fled from Montreal, and these two fugitives from British justice are now at the Oriental Hotel, city of St. Augustine, State of Florida, United States of America. I hereby offer the following rewards: $5,000, gold, for the recovery of the amount stolen, or pro rata for what is recovered, and $5,000 gold for the delivery of the said Thomas Nichols at any place in the British Dominion, or Davies' Detective Agency, 17 and 19 Williams street, New York, U. S. A.

HENRY W. DAVIES,
Agent and Attorney of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, St. Augustine, Florida, U. S. A.

Five weeks of this kind of conspicuous and persistent advertising effected what the law could not. The defaulting teller, unable to shake off the detective, voluntarily surrendered himself, and offered to return to Montreal to stand his trial. The parties left on the northern-bound train on Saturday evening, en route for the British Provinces.—Charleston (S. C.) News.

The Good Boy Who Disobeyed His Mother.

Last Wednesday, Eddie House, George Mayberry and Frederick Pray, each about eight years of age, living at Quincy Point, went out on Town River on the ice, to slide. Eddie, in sliding too near the channel fell through an ice hole, and the other two, after fruitless efforts to rescue him called out for help. Herbert Nott, aged about twelve years, who had just arrived home from school, hearing the cries, dashed off at full speed, to the great chagrin of his mother, who had charged him to return home immediately at the close of school, to go on an errand. She saw him run toward the river, and was planning a punishment for the disobedient but hitherto very obedient Herbert, who, however, had satisfied himself that he was needed more on the river. When little Eddie saw him coming, he cried out, "Oh, save me, Herbert; I shall drown." Herbert replied, "No you won't unless I drown with you." Then taking George's sled and pushing it into the water, telling Eddy to lay hold of it, he drew him safely out and took him to his fond mother. Probably Eddie will be more careful in the future.—Boston Traveler.

THE Arizona Citizen says that there is in that Territory a monster named Sheridan, who makes it a business to entice men to go with him to the mountains upon the pretense of showing them rich mines, and it is seldom that persons so enticed are ever heard from afterward. It is believed that he has lured away and murdered eight victims within the past year. Gov. Safford offers $500 reward for his capture and conviction.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Helping Papa and Mamma.

Planting the corn and potatoes,
Helping to scatter the seeds,
Feeding the hens and the chickens,
Freeing the garden from weeds,
Driving the cows to the pasture,
Feeding the horse in the stall—
We little children are busy;
Sure there's work for us all,
Helping papa.

Spreading the hay in the sunshine,
Raking it up when 'tis dry,
Plucking the apples and peaches,
Down in the orchard hard by,
Picking the grapes in the vineyard,
Gathering the nuts in the fall—
We little children are busy;
Yes, there is work for us all,
Helping papa.

Sweeping, and washing the dishes,
Bring the wood from the shed,
Ironing, sewing and knitting,
Helping to make up the bed,
Taking good care of the baby,
Watching her lest she should fall—
We little children are busy;
Oh, there is work for us all,
Helping mamma.

Work makes us cheerful and happy,
Makes us both active and strong;
Play we enjoy all the better
When we have labored so long;
Gladly we help our kind parents,
Quickly we come to their call—
Children should love to be busy,
There is so much work for us all,
Helping papa and mamma.

Around the Farm.

To keep cabbage through the winter, pack in sawdust in the barn and allow the whole to freeze, the sawdust being such a non-conductor of heat, once frozen through, it will not thaw out until well into April, and cabbage will come out almost as nice as when put in.

A bailing accusation is brought against the poultry dealers that, with long pliers, break the breast bone of an old hen about one and a half inches from the point where nature would make it prominent, and when the sagacious housekeeper feels for the same she murmurs "young," and pays the price of chicken without a grumble.

Paper prepared after the following recipe is said to render the use of the razor-strop unnecessary. By merely wiping the razor on the paper to remove the lather after shaving, a keen edge is maintained without further trouble. The razor must be well sharpened at the outset. First, procure oxide of iron (by addition of carbonate of soda to a solution of persulphate of iron), well wash the precipitate, and finally leave it of the consistency of cream. Spread this over soft paper very thinly with a soft brush. Cut the paper in pieces two inches square, dry, and it is ready for use.

To determine the weight of live cattle, measure in inches the girth around the breast just behind the shoulder blade, and the back from the tail to the forepart of the shoulder blade. Multiply the girth by the length and divide by 144. If the girth is less than three feet, multiply the quotient by 11; if between three and five feet, multiply by 16; if between five and seven feet, by 23; or if between seven and nine feet, by 31. If the animal is lean, deduct 1-20 of the result, and the answer is the weight in pounds. This multiplied by 0.605 gives the net weight.

Last year, after every storm of rain during the summer, I observed that our cow would have an attack of garget in the udder. In some instances only one section or quarter of the udder would be inflamed and tender, and the teat of that part of the udder would yield purulent matter and clotted milk. It was conjectured that the cow took more or less cold which centered in her udder. During the stormy days, and cold and wet nights, she was afterward taken to the stable, which prevented the garget. The present summer, whenever she has not been taken to the stable during a wet and cold day or night, the garget would appear.—Christian at Work.

With the increasing cost of fencing material, it becomes a more interesting question to the farmer, How can I economically build new and repair old fences? A Western man suggests the use of sods, and writes: "In England and Ireland they have the 'sod fence.' I have seen it in this country occasionally, but I think if our farmers knew its practical merits we should see it oftener. Only dig two ditches four feet apart, three feet wide, and two feet deep; throw the dirt from the ditches on the space between; beat it down till it has some hardness, and give it enough slant to prevent 'caving,' and you have a fence for a lifetime. In most cases here we need no turf or 'whin-bushes' as they do, for in a year the bank will be covered by a luxuriant growth of blackberry bushes, answering every purpose. Even where timber is plenty, we can make this fence cheaper than almost any other."

About the House.

To drive away ants, wrap a piece of gum camphor in cloth or paper to keep it from dissolving and put it in or about your cupboard.

Vermin on Canaries.—It is said that if a piece of clean white paper be spread over the cage at night the vermin will collect upon it, and may be destroyed by burning the paper. A few drops of carbolic acid in a gill of water in which the birds bathe will remove them and keep them from the cage.

The best paste for a scrap-book is made of common starch. Take half or two-thirds of a teaspoonful, pour on to it a little boiling water, let it stand a minute, add more water, and cook it until it is thick enough to starch a shirt bosom. It spreads smooth, sticks well, and never will mold or discolor paper.

A small clean potato, with the end cut off, is a very convenient medium for applying brick-dust to knives, keeping it about the right moisture, while the juice of the potato assists in removing stains from the surface. A better polish can be obtained by this method than by any other we have tried, and with less labor.

Tomato Pie.—Take fully ripe tomatoes, scald and peel the skin off, then cut in slices and lay in a shallow dish, sprinkle with sugar, add a little butter, cover with a crust, and bake till the crust is done. Then turn the pie on a plate crust downward, and spread over the tomatoes the white of an egg beaten with sugar. Set in the oven till the egg stiffens. This is more wholesome than lemon pie and almost as good.

Fruit Skins.—The majority of country people I have observed eating fruit, eat the skin of it also. Their children eat it in the same manner and seem never to have been taught that the skin of fruit—be it apple, peach, pear, plum, or grape—should never be eaten, especially if uncooked. Fruit skins are so difficult of digestion that there is probably not more than one stomach in a hundred capable of performing the difficult task. The skin is to fruit what shells are to nuts, hides to animals, and husks to grain. To oblige or allow a child to eat his apple or pear unpeeled, is unkind and wrong, for it is no question of daintiness, but of health.—Mary A. E. Wager, in Rural New Yorker.

Light on Liberia's War.

The friends of African colonization met last evening to listen to a presentment of the claims of the American Colonization Society upon the zeal and pecuniary support of philanthropists. The Rev. Dr. John Orcutt described the late war between the Liberians and the natives, from imperfect accounts of which the opponents of colonization are endeavoring to prove the lapse of the colonized negroes toward barbarism.

The war, he said, is a question of the title of Liberia to the territory constituting the County of Maryland, the southernmost colony. That county, once independent of Liberia, was lately annexed, but the natives are unwilling to submit to the trade restrictions of customs officials. They claim the right of free trade on the ground of prior possession of the territory, and on that issue they went to war. Between September and Oct. 15 eight battles were fought. Six of them were almost bloodless, and resulted in victory for the Liberian army, which had Cape Palmas for its base of supplies, and having fought the earliest struggle far inland, fought each succeeding one a day's march nearer its base, despite its victories. The last victory left the Liberians 1,100 strong, cantoned in Cape Palmas, where they lay for a month, while the native forces were repairing their defeats in Tubman Town, four miles out.

One Gen. Crawford, of the Liberians, suggested a night attack upon the native forces, but to this Gen. Gardner, the Commander-in-Chief, did not consent, as he seemed content with the glory of reporting every morning that his army had not been attacked on the previous night. At the end of a month, however, a forward movement was ordered. The natives were attacked near Tubman Town, and the Liberians were badly beaten, after losing seventy-nine men killed and wounded. They withdrew again to Cape Palmas, leaving a small force in the defenses of Tubman Town. The latter was attacked by a strong body of natives, but the assailants were handsomely repulsed after a protracted battle, in which few or none were hurt. That bloodless contest ended the war in favor of the Liberians.—New York Sun.

A Puzzle for the Boys and Girls.

[From the Boston Advertiser.]

A few days ago the "fifteen young ladies problem" was printed in this column. It is as follows:

In a school of fifteen girls a rule has been laid down that they shall walk out every day in each week in rows of threes, but that the same two girls shall never come together twice in the same row. The rule is supposed to have been carried out correctly during the six working days of the week, but when the time comes for their going to church together on Sunday, it is found to be absolutely impossible to continue it any further. Can the rule have been carried out correctly during the six previous days?

A correspondent writes that twenty years ago he spent many hours over the problem, convinced that it must be capable of solution, but had to "give it up." He propounded it to several persons and received two solutions to it, one of which is given below. Our correspondent believes there are many solutions to it, for the fifteen young ladies, while continuing to observe the conditions of walking once daily for a week in rows of three, may, by a system of weekly exchanges, arrange themselves so that the rows of three shall be composed of different combinations of individuals each succeeding week for a long time. The solution sent us is as follows:

1st day	2d day	3d day	4th day	5th day	6th day	7'h d'y
A B C	A G M	A D J	F A O	A N K	A I L	E A H
D E F	B F L	E C K	B H K	B J M	B E N	B D G

Tea and Coffee.

The researches made by Maurice Block show that the leading European nations consume tea and coffee in about the following proportions per annum and per head of the population:

COFFEE.	Pounds.	TEA.	Pounds.
Belgium	16⅞	Great Britain	6⅝
Netherlands	13⅝	Netherlands	1½
Switzerland	10⅓	Germany	1-16
Germany	7⅛	France	1-32
France	4½	Belgium	1-32
Austria	2⅜	Austria	1-64
Great Britain	1⅜	Switzerland	1-320
Italy	1⅜	Italy	1-320
Spain	⅝	Spain	1-320
Russia	⅛	Russia	1-320

This table is uncommonly eloquent. It shows at the first glance that the countries where civilization and prosperity in the mass of the people are at their lowest, the consumption of both tea and coffee is also the least. These countries are Austria, Spain and Russia.—New York Sun.

Death Before Surrender.

Two brothers, Thomas and Melvin March, had a bitter quarrel at Charlemont, Mass., the othe day, during which Melvin threatened Thomas' life. The latter procured a warrant for Melvin's arrest, and Deputy-Sheriff Gould attempted to serve it, but Melvin threatened to shoot. The Sheriff went for aid, when Melvin deliberately burned the Sheriff's barn, and then fled to the mountains. A large posse started in pursuit, and after a long and exciting chase came up with him. He threatened death to any one who approached him, but, seeing that no less than seven rifles covered him, he shot himself in the breast and fell mortally wounded.

Two Americans have bought and will exhibit the stone sarcophagus in which it was intended to bury Guibord.

NECROLOGY OF CENTENARIANS.

During the year just closed Death came to a number of centenarians, the names of the most noteworthy being here given, with the date and place, as far as could be ascertained: In March died Gen. Joseph Francis, Chief of the Passamaquoddy tribe of Indians in Maine, aged 110. In Philadelphia, in June, Thomas Taylor, a veteran of Waterloo, aged 103. George Wilson, another veteran of European wars, died at Zanesville, Ohio, aged 100. At Morrisville, Vt., during the first week in March, an old soldier named Dell, who served under the first Napoleon, aged 101. Capt. Enos Scott, a soldier of 1812, died at Lyons, Mich., near the end of August, aged 101. On the 26th of August, at the Home for Aged Women, in Boston, Ethan Allen DeWolf died, lacking a few weeks of 100; his father, a Revolutionary soldier, lived to the age of 107. In the first week of January died Thomas Thornton, of Boston, 105, and Richard Cottrill, of Columbia, S. C., 119. In the first week of February the pale specter visited Wm. Knapp, of Woodford, Vt., 100, and Elias Truax, of Franklin, Mass., 102. At Maquoketa, Iowa, a worthy citizen was prematurely cut off at the age of 107; he persisted in the use of tobacco to the day of his death, which latter event is supposed to have been hastened by "a kick of a pet mule;" we are unable to give his name. About the first of May Ralph Price, 104, died at Armstrong, Pa. Thos. Card died at Dover Point, N. H., Sept. 8, aged 100; had never been ill until his last and only sickness. In Daviess County, Ky., three persons died at the advanced ages of 101, 105, and 115 years respectively. At Holyoke, Mass., March 19, at the age of 100, died Bartholomew Dowling, who emigrated from Ireland in 1793. At Indianapolis, early in January, "the father of Michael O'Leary, of Holyoke," died at the age of 105; and another Irishman, two years younger, whose name is not recorded, died at Haverhill, Mass., on the 25th of July. A month before that Moses Long, a Kentucky negro, died at the age of 111.

In regard to several venerable ladies who passed away during 1875 we have more particulars. At Brookfield, Mass., Jan. 1, the seventy-fifth anniversary of her marriage, Mrs. Alice Cooley breathed her last at the age of 99 years 8 months and 21 days. At Amherst, N. H., March 19, died Mrs. Anna Goss, aged 105. In the latter part of July Mrs. Helen Stansbury died at Louisville, Ky., aged 100; she was the oldest of eleven children, and outlived them all. At Kinderhook, N. Y., at the age of 106, Mrs. Mary Killerhouse died in the same house in which she was born. She was married four times—the last at the age of 88.

Other deaths took place as follows: At Columbia, S. C., in January, Mrs. Rosenburg, 103; at Essex, Vt., Mrs. Pepin, 104. In March, at Baltimore, Mary Smith, 117. In May, at Brookville, Me., Mrs. Katherine Bolton, 100 years and 7 months; Mrs. Little, at Moncton, Vt., 107; and in Johnson, Vt., Mrs. Mary Pike, 100. Mrs. Orphemia Temple, 103, died at Woodbury, Ct., July 1. In Freetown, Aug. 15, Mrs. Joanna Strange died at the age of 103. Mrs. Betsy Clark, at Auburn, N. H., Aug. 22, aged 100 years and 7 months; Sept. 1, in Southbridge, Mass., Marian Garceau, 103; Sept. 22, in Brooklyn, Mary Burns, Irish, 105; Sept. 28, in Hartford, Ct., Mrs. Madden, 106, and May 15, in Mansfield, Mass., Mrs. Margaret Leonard, Irish, 109 years and 4 months.

Six venerable colored women died during the year, as follows: March 1, in Washington, D. C., Lucy Hawkins, 115 years and 7 months, and May 28, in the same city, Hester Digger, 110; March 1, in Baltimore, Mrs. Susan Carr, 105, and in Louisville, Ky., the same week, Grandmother Flora Dupuy, 104; April 18, in Boston, Mrs. Keziah Gray, 106 years and 6 months; finally, Aug. 25, in Summerville, Tenn., Polly Cos, 115, who was cook in the American army in the War of 1812.

At Paris, April 30, died the Count de Waldeck at the age of 110. He was probably the most famous of all the centenarians, [illegible] a number of civic societies, and author of some merit. In England, in March, Mr. Peacock died at the age of 103; and in April Mrs. Leatherland, a gypsy, 112. The Widow Domine died in the Department of the Gironde, France, in May, aged 107, leaving two sisters aged 103 and 101. John Paparrhegopoulas, Russian Consul at Athens, died in that city in February, aged 100; and a few weeks subsequently a Russian who was six feet six inches high died at the age of 115. Father Nicephorus, to whom Byron referred in "Childe Harold," died at a convent on Mount Athos, in June, aged 117. In Cuba, in August, Don Rafael Gonzalez died at the age of 105, leaving descendants in the fourth generation. In Brazil a midwife reached the age of 111; a man of the province of San Jose De Leonissa lived 120 years, and Manuel Jose Alfonso was gathered to his fathers at the ripe old age of 150.

A Hundred Years Ago.

The year 1876 will be the centennial anniversary of other important events in the world's history, beside the act which made the United States an independent Republic. It will interest the lovers of exploration to recall the fact that just one hundred years ago, the present time, Capt. James Cook was engaged in his successful circumnavigation of the world in the ships Resolute and Adventure, and that the year 1776 saw him bedecked with medals and elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of England for his remarkable courage and nautical skill. That same year also he started on the expedition for the discovery of the "Northern Passage"—a trip which proved fatal to him and almost bootless of good results, as similar adventures have to so many since.

While the English and other Governments are now endeavoring to complete the Arctic explorations which Cook commenced a century ago, it may be interesting to scientific minds to remember that at that time the systematic study of the ocean current began, and that the Gulf Stream was first scientifically investigated by the use of thermometers.

The study of the earth's surface was a pet subject for European scholars, when our forefathers were most engaged in "trusting in God and keeping their powder dry." In the year of the Declaration of Independence, Gatterer introduced the descriptive geography, and by marking out the peculiar features of each country, tracing the courses of rivers and philosophizing upon the system of watersheds, gave a primary impetus to the study of natural history. At the same time Blumenbach, another scholastic German, gave the world his "Varieties of the Human Race," and first taught men, what children now learn, that "the human race is divided into five classes, namely, the Caucasian, the Mongolian, the Malay, the American and the African or Ethopian."

The year 1876, among other things, will be the centennial of an important chapter in the history of the science of botany—the compilation of Karl Peter Thunberg's vocabulary of Japanese flora, the result of labors much more dangerous and difficult than the efforts of the late great Agassiz, in his pursuit of natural science in South America.

The events noted are only a few of the multitude which were transpiring 100 years ago, while our forefathers were fighting for liberty, but they are notable guide-posts in the cycle of time, upon which we may gaze and try to realize what strides have been made since their day in research, in science, in human advancement and in government, and indulge in the proud thought that in all these things the spirit of the new nation of the New World has not been a drawback.—Chicago Journal.

Young Lions Nursed by a Terrier.

Carefully caged in the dimly-lighted lower regions of the Central Park Museum are two young lion cubs. They are three weeks old, a pair, a lion and lioness, fine healthy little creatures, and in two weeks more will be old enough to be shown to the public. They are the progeny of the pair of beasts known as Lincoln and Jenny in the Museum. But the mother being, from confinement or some other cause, unable to nurse them, they were at once given to a large terrier, whose puppies were taken away, and who plays the part of a foster-mother. She seems, indeed, as fond of the cubs as if they were her own offspring, and covers them with caresses, though they are already half as big as she is. It is a curious fact that lions reared in captivity are not as gentle as those captured and tamed. The parents of these cubs, which were caught when wild, and tamed, are very tractable, while some of the other lions, which were born and brought up here, are sullen and ferocious.—New York Times.

A Bankrupt State.

Gov. Porter, of Tennessee, has addressed a letter to a large holder of Tennessee bonds in New York, stating that the January interest on said bonds will not be paid. He says that the public revenues, as fast as paid into the Treasury, will be applied to the liquidation of the loan account of $255,000 contracted in meeting the January interest last year and redeeming outstanding Treasury warrants, which amount to $425,000. The State's inability to pay is attributed to the postponement by the Legislature of the payment of taxes and to the hard times. The Governor further says he has reason to believe that most of the large holders of Tennessee bonds would be willing to fund them at a lower rate of interest if a guarantee be given that the interest shall be promptly paid in future. He expresses the opinion that the present rate is higher than the people are able to pay, but suggests no basis of compromise.

France would like to annex Belgium, but refrains, because Germany has not yet pounced on Holland. Of course, when the time comes, it will be tit for tat in the transaction of those two jobs.

INDIANA ITEMS.

A poultry association has been formed at Fort Wayne.

The hog epizootic is rapidly depleting the pens of Union County.

The South Bend wagon works are making a lot of wheels to go to Germany.

L. H. Bellus, of Clinton, has been sued for $10,000, on account of breach of promise.

A live dog was recently chloroformed and dissected alive before the physiology class at the high school in Attica. It was done to show the circulation of the blood.

Gov. Hendricks has accepted an invitation to deliver the opening address of the Southern States Agricultural and Industrial Exposition, at New Orleans, February 6.

Mrs. Case, of Peru, blew out the gas in her room at the St. Nicholas, at Lafayette, on Wednesday night, and when discovered was on the floor in convulsions. Physicians restored her with difficulty.

The Christian Record, of Bedford, has moved to Oskaloosa, Iowa, and consolidated with the Evangelist, under the title of the Record and Evangelist, dated from Oskaloosa, Iowa, and Bedford, Ind.

Jim Chapman, a desperado who was under indictment for tearing up a rail of the O. and M. track near Huron, in Lawrence County, was shot Friday afternoon and killed by Deputy Sheriff Robert Palmer, of that county, at Willow Valley, Martin County, while attempting to arrest him.

Mrs. Sarah C. Thompson has just recovered $1,000 by compromise from Drs. Mitchell and Reagan, of Mooresville, for malpractice in the treatment of a broken leg which left her a cripple for life. She once obtained a judgment of $4,720, but it was set aside by the Court on account of some irregularity.

Geo. W. Saddler, of Cotton Township, Jay County, has a Chester-White-Poland hog which is nine feet long, six feet and ten inches in circumference, and each of his fore feet are twenty-three inches in circumference. He is estimated to weigh between 900 and 1,000 pounds. It is supposed to be the largest hog in the State.

The body of George Williams, a traveling thief, who is supposed to have been a resident of Iona, Wis., was found in a barn loft, two miles south of Rockville, Parke County recently, with a bullet in his forehead and a revolver clenched in one hand, with one chamber empty. He is supposed to have been dead about two days when found. Six hundred dollars and three gold watches were found on his person.

A few evenings since a pastor in one of the churches in Madison, who, to use his own expression, "can't read writin'," was presented with a couple of notices to be read to the congregation. When the time came for reading them he called upon the Secretary, who read them off. After a short time a brother requested that the notices be read again. The pastor looked fiercely at him a moment, picked up the two notices, and proceeded in a slow, deliberate voice: "Bredren, if anybody wants dem notizes read again, just come up an' read 'em yourself; 'taint the pastor's duty to read notizes nohow; and the Secretary havin' stepped out, I don't keer 'bout callin' on any odder brudder."

In the United States Court at Indianapolis on last Saturday a man was tried for passing counterfeit money. The evidence was conclusive, and the Judge, when about to sentence him, thinking to impress upon the prisoner a realizing sense of the enormity of his guilt, said, "I think you are a bad man, and deserve a heavy punishment for your crime. I will sentence you to the Penitentiary for two years." Imagine his disgust and surprise when the prisoner jumped forward, seized his hand and shook it warmly, saying, "Well, now, Judge, do you know that, under the circumstances, I think that's mighty kind of you? Let's shake!" And shake they did, although there wasn't much warmth in the Judge's manner.

At Evansville last week, Henry Ayers, Chief of Police, arrested a farmer named Peter Kirsch, charged with manufacturing counterfeit nickels. The man had in his possession a large quantity of spurious money, and his arrest led to the arrest of others, supposed to belong to the gang that the police have been watching for months past. The gang exists in Warrick County, where the nickels are manufactured. The Kirsch house was searched, and another lot of nickels discovered, but the officers could not find any trace of dies or materials for manufacturing. A preliminary examination was had before United States Commissioner Wartman, and Kirch was sent to jail in default of one thousand dollars bail. The Government offered a reward of five hundred dollars for the capture of the gang.

The report of the Auditor of State has been filed with the Governor. The tables of receipts, expenditures, etc., balance with those of the State Treasurer heretofore published. The Auditor, however, calls attention to the fact that an aggregate sum of $145,234.55, which appears as received and expended, is merely represented by the transfer of certain sums from one fund to another, making the actual receipts for the year $3,748,214, and the expenditures $3,571,023. The tables of the State Board of Education show that the taxable value of the real and personal property of the State is $897,739,783, or $57,117,602 less than by the assessment of 1784. The Auditor has instituted suits against certain citizens of Indianapolis who, in 1871, brought suit to enjoin the distribution of the school fund, and by this means deprived the State of interest on that fund to the amount of $50,000. Suit has also been brought against the American Express Company, to test the validity of the law requiring such corporations to file semi-annual reports of their business within the State, and to pay 3 per cent. on their receipts for passage-fare, and 1 per cent. on receipts for transferring freight. The report of the Trustee of the Wabash and Erie Canal, which accompanies the Auditor's report, shows that the receipts for the year were $71,188, and the disbursements $6,678. The report of the Insurance Department shows the gross receipts of foreign insurance companies in the State for the year to have been $1,710,076; losses paid, $932,355; tax paid, $25,829; gross receipts of foreign life insurance companies, $1,382,509; losses paid, $770,732; taxes paid, $20,311.

THE DYING YEAR.

Ding-dong! the Old Year's dying—
It is weary;
Hark! the night-wind's sighing,
Miserere!
Ding-dong! the bells are pealing—
Soft its last hours stealing;
Human souls are feeling
Sad and dreary.

Ding-dong! the moments flying,
Drawing nearer;
Youth is worth the buying
When it's dearer!
But no wealth can ever
Stay the flowing river—
Life comes from the Giver,
Not the sharer.

Ding-dong! the night is waning,
Almost vanished—
A few short breaths remaining
Ere it is fled.
Hush! the bells are ceasing;
New tenants now are leasing;
The Past is still increasing;
The Old Year's dead!

Church Pews.

There is a speck of history connected with the origin of church pews that cannot but help prove interesting. In the early days of the Anglo-Saxon and some of the Norman churches a stone bench afforded the only sitting accommodations for members or visitors. In the year 1319 they are spoken of as sitting on the ground or in a standing posture. At a later period the people introduced low three-legged stools, and they were placed in no uniform order in the church. Directly after the Norman conquest wooden seats came in fashion. In 1387 a decree was issued that none should call any seat in the church his own except noblemen and patrons, each entering and holding the one he first found.

From 1530 to 1540 seats were more appropriated, and a crowbar guarded the entrance, bearing the initial of the owner. It was in 1608 that galleries were thought of. And as early as 1614 pews were ranged to afford comfort by being baized or cushioned, while the sides around were so high as to hide the occupants—a device of the Puritans to avoid being seen by the officer, who reported those who did not stand when the name of Jesus was mentioned.

Kerr.

Mr. Kerr, being relieved from the great pressure of the last few weeks, is in better health and spirits to-day than at any time before during the session. Speaking of his committees, Mr. Kerr says he believed it right and proper to transfer the power of the House from the Northeast to the West and South, and that he did so deliberately. He calls attention to the fact that for the first time in fifty years New England is cut down to her due proportion of power in the House of Representatives. The only New England Democrat who complains is Mr. Barnum, of Connecticut, who wanted the District of Columbia Committee. Fernando Wood will not decline serving under his assignment. He feels very much disgruntled, however.—Washington Telegram.

FOR CHRISTMAS & NEW YEARS!

The Holidays Will Soon be on us!

NOW IS THE TIME TO LOOK AROUND FOR YOUR

HOLIDAY GOODS!

As usual we have an immense stock for the occasion.

We have 10 casts of New Turkish Prunes at 10c per pound. This is a reduction of 3c per pound.—And 500 case of Peaches at 15c der can. Just think of that price, with all the scarcity of Peaches this season. They never sold at such prices, and the only reason we can do so is we purchased a Bankrupt stock at half price.

So on TEAS—We bought out the whole stock of McDougal's, formerly J. M. Flingers, and his $1,50 Tea! We have put down to 1.10. Other qualities from 30c to 50c.

Sugars.

SUGARS! SUGARS!

We have reduced 1c per pound, and got a stock sufficient to last over the holidays. So you need not fear their advancing.

Coffee A,	10½c	N. O, Genuine,	9c
Coffee C,	9½c	Good Yellow	8c

When we first commenced selling Teas there was very little sold in this place; the reason was they were sold so high that parties clubbed together and sent to New York to get their Teas because they could save 20c to 5 on the pound. This we have all challenged, we not only sell teas and sugars as cheap as they do in New York, but cheaper. The freight is but a trifle and our immense sales of 40 to 50 chests a month enables us to undersell all competitors. No 3 or 4 profits with us. No middle men to handle our goods. We purchase of the Imorters and sell direct to consumers, there saving our customers the profits of the Speculator, Jobber and Wholesale Merchant, which is at least 15 to 25 per cent.

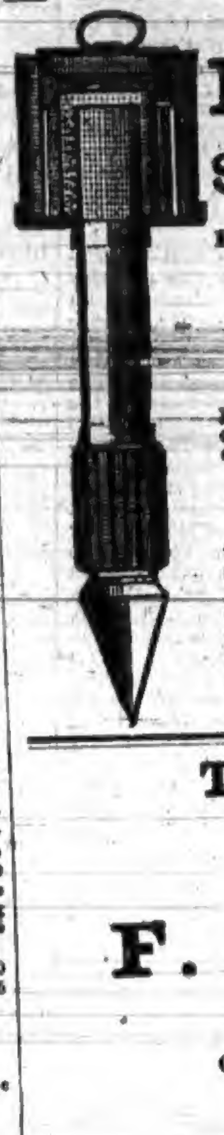
A New Method of Draining Farms!



YUNDT'S PATENT DRAIN!

FOR DRAINING

Swamps, Ponds & Low Lands.

It sinks the water just where it stands, saving miles of tile drains; keeps the water from cutting up your highways, or flooding your neighbor's, and is as far superior to tile drains as the railroad is to the common wagon.

TESTIMONIAL.

We, the undersigned, having seen one of Yundt's Patent Drains remove a large pond of stagnant water, on Hoyt street, in this city, do cheerfully recommend it to all persons who have wet cellars, or are troubled with ponds or wet lands. It will do all that is claimed for it.

N. R. RAPER, F. MORTON.

One of the above drains was put down on the premises of J. P. Frenzel, Jr., Cashier of the Merchants' National Bank, of this city, and in less than

Three Hours Had Drained the Cellar

of over 3,000 gallons of water. No better investment can be made of idle capital than in working territory with this Drain. A good, energetic Agent is wanted in every city and county, to whom a liberal commission will be paid. State, County, Township or Farm Rights for sale. Personal property or real estate taken in exchange for territory. Address

PENCIL AND SCISSORS.

Last Saturday was a real summer day, indeed.

A law-suit among our attorneys accupied their time all last week.

Several of the farmers in this locality have been plowing for corn during the recent warm weather.

Steam is reconed to be ninety times cheaper than manual power, seventy times cheaper than horse power.

Our livery men have their horses out for exercise, the roads being a little better than for several weeks past.

Mr. Goodman has just placed upon his building, on 7th st., a very handsome sign. It is somewhat overdone, however.

We see from the papers that Westville has a saloon keeper by the name of Saint. Evidently he has fallen from grace.

Several Hiskville sports have been here for a few days playing the new "corner game" for cider. Come again boys.

There are one hundred and twenty negroes in the South Carolina Legislature, only seventy-two of whom can read and write. This is one of the "glorious results" of Radical supremacy.

"Straight whisky" used to be a popular beverage, but somehow the friends of certain prominent officials leave off the "straight" when they ask for a drink nowadays.

The billiard hall on Eight street is open again. Every man who wishes to play is requesed to bring a bottle of pain killer along to occasionally bathe his shoulder.

A drunken basket by some chance lost a sober man Friday night in the East end of town. They found each other about noon the next day, in time to have the contents of the former cooked for a family gathering.

"Have you any nice fresh farmer's eggs?" inquired a precise old lady at a Main street grocery store yesterday. "No ma'am," replied the practical clerk "but we have some very good hens eggs She took three to try.

The other day when a grocer spelled sugar "s-h-u-g-e-r," a friend pointed out the word and remarked, "That word isn't spelled quite right." "Ha I see," laughed the grocer, "a person would think I had no education." And he crossed it out and worte it "s-h-u-g-o-r."

"Excuse me, sir," said a distinguished divine, as he jostled against a stalwart granger on Main street, last week. Certainly," replied the honest farmer, "it's all right; I've been drunk myself." The parson has exchanged a blue necktie for a white chocker.

He sat in a grocery. His head was thickly covered with a mass of red hair. Behind him in a chair sat a man with hardly any hair on his head. He said to him: "I guess you wasn't around when they dealt out hair." "Oh, yes I was," replied bald head, "but they offered me a lot of red hair, and I told them to throw it into the ash bin.

DAVENPORT.

Not the one with fifteen faces but the good-looking and obliging Frank Davenport, proprietor of the corner drug store, has been re-arranging his store, adding new goods and making changes for the centennial year the same as any-one of his energy and enterprise would do. Frank is controlling a large trade and through his pleasing and courteous manner has made many warm friends in our county. We would advise one and all, to give him a call, and see if he don't sell cheaper than 'em all.

The outlook is decidedly gloomy for the ice dealers. Here it is the 12th of January and not a particle of ice on the lakes and most of the houses empty. The dealers who carried large stocks over the summer are comparatively happy.

An exchange says: "How many business men are there in the world earnest, plodding but unfortunate fellow creatures who go about their work day after day without ever seeming to know that the Bible contains the work "advertise."

The Government having issued new 50 cent notes which are about an inch longer then the old ones, it is moved and seconded now that the Government also furnish every man a larger pocket-book, long enough to hold the new notes without doubling up!

Our people should have all kind of notices for the paper at the office by at least, Wednesday morning to insure publication. We go to press Wednesday afternoon about 5 oclock and after this notice appears will not unlock our forms for any one. Now, please bear this in mind.

G. C. Ralston, Esq., of the firm of Ralston & Son, has resigned. Cooper thinks of being a drummer, and all we have to say is, that the firm who gets his services will have a man that is sober, industrious and honest, always obliging and a capital [illegible]

The best remedy for [illegible] is to rub whiskey on your head until the hairs grow out, and then take it inwardly to clinch the roots. Judging from what we very frequently see on our streets, this is a very popular remedy in our city.

The latest news indicates that Vanderbilt has secured a controlling interest in the Canada Southern railroad, and instead of completing the Western portion of the road, will make connection with the Lake Shore tract at Butler, Indiana, and secure a Chicago connection by that means.

Last week one of our churches held prayer meeting for all denominations, and in another they were practicing for a Cantata. To an outside observer it looks as though our church people seem to have their entire aim for money fine churches and splendid choirs. It connot be contradicted, fashion leads the world.

"Balance all!" is not only heard in the ball-room among the merry terpsichoreans but the expression is quite as popular, and doubly significant, when it comes with imperative emphisis from prudent business men, as they urge their customers to "balance" and commence the new year with a new account.

Young men of this age, the destiny of the country rests with you. Its future happiness and prosperiety, yes, its very countenance, depends upon your action dissipation and fast living will not make you happy, will not make you prosperous. Remember that "economy is wealth" and that industry alone leads to prosperity.

'Twas night. They stopped at the door of the young lady's father's residence. She looked into his face. He looked into her face. He was very close by her. She felt his head bend down to her. His nose touched her cheek. She was silent; his arm stole around her very slowly, and yet she was still silent. He drew her athwart his other arm and kissed those cheek. Only this and nothing more." We saw it, and passed on dreaming on the happy days gone to meet the others.

The crusade made by some papers on "striped stockings" is getting stale, so stale that it "smells to heaven." Men laugh at striped stockings. Men sneer at striped stockings. Well, let them laugh, let them sneer. There are hours in the experience of every man when he longs for a pair of stockings of any kind. Wait for that hour, and in the meantime furnish your readers higher thoughts.

Always read the local on this page of the paper.

Wanted a Free Ride.

Last Thursday a silver-haired and rather respectable looking rustic walked into the Eel River road's headquarters and inquired for the man who bossed the road. Before any one could answer he said, "Well never mind; I guess any of you fellows will do. I just want to know if you are going to run a free train Forth of July, and if you are, I want to make arrangements to have fifteen seats reserved in one of the cars for my family Last time you run your free train there was only nine of 'em that could get in. We are going to have a family re-union Forth of July an' 'twould be mighty accommodatin' to us, if we could have seats kept for us so we could all get on at Moorsville and come down to Adamsboror; and then if it is all the same to you folks, some of us would like to stay a few days I recken its all the same to you what day you haul us back."

When the old gentleman was informed that no free train would be run on the Forth of July he felt very much chopfallen, and immediately telegraphed to his family to postpone the re-union until next Thanksgiving day. Later in the day he had something to say about "grinding monopolies" and "heartless corporations" interfering with natural rights of the people.

Extract from an English clergyman's sermon, on "Noah and the Ark:" "But time would fail me my bretheren, to describe all the animals that went into the ark-ah. Your patience and my strenght would give out before I got half through-ah. We talk, my bretheren, about the father of Abraham and the patience of Job; but it stikes me they don't go much ahead of old Noah-ah. It took a right smart chance 'o both to gather up that gopher-wood, pitch and other truck for to build that chraft-ah. I am a sort of carpenter myself, and have some idea of the job-ah. But hammer, and saw, and maul, and split away on that old thing a hundred and twenty years-ah and lookin' for his pay in another world I tell you my brothren, if the Lord had sot Job at that, it's my opinion he would a'tuck his first wife's advice inside of fifty years-ah. Besides, no doubt his righteous soul was vexed every day, hand runnin,' with the filthy communications of the blasphemious that was always a-loaferin' and a-saunterin' around-ah, a-pickin' up his tools and a-misplacin' 'em, and a callin' him an old fool or somethin' worse-ah; and to cap the climax, he was a preacher, and had that ungodly gineration on his hands every Sun-day."

Politeness in Church.

It has been suggested to a COURIER reporter by a lady, that it would be a good idea to have some young lady of this city write a book on church etiquette, or rather the etiquette that people should observe in church, especially if the church is one to whose faith they occasionally appear as visitors only. It is evident that old fashioned rules of politeness are not considered applicable to their conduct in church by young ladies whose standing in society is proof sufficient that they know something about them. Perhaps it would be a good thing to write a little work for local circulation, in which the privileges now indulged in by young ladies in churches in opposition to all authorities on the subject now known, should be accorded them. The author should not forget to give them the privilege of talking all the time of service, nor should he abridge their right to turn clear around and gaze into the faces of those behind them, but above all he should not forget to allow them to leave their pews in droves in the middle of service and go shuffling down the aisles much to the annoyance and disgust of more polite and much less pretentious people.

Last Saturday was a good day for selling small loads of wood at big prices The much needed fuel was in demand on Monday and Tuesday, also. Just here we would remark that the average load of wood brought into this market is a good deal smaller then the price asked for it; say about 32 feet short of a cord, and yet the way some men will lie about the little pile they may be trying to sell to a poor shivering widow's little boy, convinces us that those woodmen are not thinking of a hotter atmosphere on the other side of Jordon.

Auburn greatly needs additional manufacturing interests; and if the proper effort were made, they might be obtained. Our railroad facilities, both for shipping and receiving freight, are unsurpassed by any other town in Northern Indiana, except Ft. Wayne; and all materials for manufacturing purposes can be obtained as cheaply here as elsewhere. The opportunity is one which should not be allowed to slip as such another may not soon again present itself.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 13, 1876.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

Joseph Bork, City Treasurer of Buffalo, has defaulted in the sum of $350,000 and fled to Canada....A terrible tragedy occurred in New York last week, resulting probably in the death of three persons, two by murder and the third by suicide. A man named Monroe S. Minster, having retired to bed with his wife and child, first shot the little one, then the mother, and then himself. Poverty and disagreements prompted the crime.

A heavy robbery of diamonds and jewelry was one of the closing episodes of the Old Year in New York City. Benedict Bros. were the sufferers, and $20,000 was the size of the haul. This firm were robbed of $60,000 worth of goods in 1866, and seem to have been especially singled out as the victims of theft involving an extraordinary amount of skill and daring. In the last instance chloroform was successfully employed in dealing with the attendants in charge of the establishment.....Ex-Gov. John H. Clifford of Massachusetts, is dead.

Bork, the defaulting Buffalo Treasurer, has returned from Canada and surrendered himself to the authorities.

Two murderers were hanged at Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 6th inst—Fred. Myers and William Murray, convicted of the murder of Gottshardt Wahl, a German farmer, near Allegheny City, in November last....John Stephenson & Co., the well-known car-builders of New York, have failed.

THE WEST.

An idea of the immense frauds perpetrated by the Chicago whisky ring may be gleaned by the statement that one distillery alone—that of Roelle, Junker & Co.—has stolen over $2,000,000 from the Government....Reports of prospective Indian troubles come from the West.

The Chicago Tribune prints a detailed review and summary of the business of Chicago during the year 1875, from which it appears that the aggregate wholesale business in produce, merchandise, and manufactured goods is $657,000,000, against $639,000,000 in 1874. ....A. C. Hesing, publisher of the Staats-Zeitung; Jacob Rehm, ex-Superintendent of the Chicago Police, and "Buffalo" Miller, late Treasurer of Cook County, have been arrested at Chicago, and held in heavy bonds, for defrauding the revenue in connection with the illicit distillation of whisky....Work has been suspended on the new St. Louis Custom House, the appropriation having been exhausted.

The indictments against Loader and Price, charged with perjury in connection with the Brooklyn scandal, have been quashed.

Ten million dollars worth of new buildings were erected in Chicago in 1875, making a frontage of over ten miles....J. R. Bensley has been elected President of the Chicago Board of Trade.

A family of four children, colored, were drowned in a lake near St. Joseph, Mo., one day last week, by the sinking of a skiff.... Gen. Babcock's trial has been set for Feb 31, at St. Louis....A case involving the possession of 6,000,000 acres of land, valued at $15,000,000, is being argued in the Federal Court at Jefferson City, Mo.

United States Paymaster Spaulding, of San Francisco, whose Chief Clerk, Pinney, was so remarkably successful in defrauding the Government, has been arrested and imprisoned on Mare Island. It is supposed that suspicions of complicity in the Pinney peculations have led to the arrest of Paymaster Spaulding.

THE SOUTH.

The telegraph furnishes the report of a "little unpleasantness" in Mississippi: "The Caldwell brothers (colored), of Clinton, one of whom is State Senator, appeared on the streets of Clinton to-day drunk, and a quarrel ensued. Senator Caldwell then went into the cellar of a store, and was pursued by whites, when Caldwell commenced firing. Dr. Banks was shot the second fire in the knee. Joint firing continued until Caldwell was fatally wounded." ....At Little Rock, Ark., a few days ago, a negro named Hockersmith shot his wife and another negro named George Scott, killing both. Jealousy.

Three persons were instantly killed by the explosion of a boiler in a steam mill at Leesburg, Ky., last week....The Louisiana Legislature met and was quietly organized on the 3d inst.

Southern papers announce the death of A. M. Holbrook, for nearly thirty years one of the editors of the New Orleans Picayune. He was 68 years old, and a native of Vermont.

POLITICAL.

The Committee of the Alabama Legislature, appointed to investigate the case of United States Senator Spencer, report that they find that the Senator's election was secured by fraud and bribery. The report is signed by all the members, irrespective of party....The "Independent" party of Illinois have called a State Convention, to meet at Decatur, on Feb. 16, to nominate candidates for State officers.

A Washington dispatch says members of the National Republican Committee now confidentially expect that the Committee will decide to call the Republican Nominating Convention for June 15, at Chicago....The Kentucky Legislature has instructed the Senators and Representatives in Congress from that State to vote for aid to the Southern Pacific Railroad.

The Republican State Convention of New Hampshire met at Concord last week and nominated P. C. Cheney, of Manchester, for Governor, and William A. Pierce, of Portsmouth, for Railroad Commissioner. A platform was adopted favoring a resumption of specie payments, opposing a third term, and advocating the adoption of Mr. Blaine's nonsectarian constitutional amendment.

The President has sent the following nominations to the Senate: Cyrus C. Carpenter, of Iowa, Second Comptroller of the Treasury; Reuben Williams, of Indiana, Deputy Second Comptroller. Indian Agents—John Young, of New York, Fort Peck, Montana; S. W. Marston, of Missouri, for the Consolidated Indian Agencies, Indian Territory; George L. Betts, of Michigan, for the Michigan Agency in Michigan. Receivers of Public Money—D. L. Quan, Wausau, Wis.; O. M. Ballard, Indianapolis, Ind. Registers of Land Offices—S. H. Allan, Wausau, Wis.; Edmund Brown, Indianapolis, Ind. ....The Democrats of Louisiana held their State Convention at New Orleans last week, and adopted a platform which, in brief, declares eternal war upon the Kellogg government. Of all the ills that Commonwealth is heir to, they consider the present Governor the chiefest, and the one for the eradication of which they will devote all their energies. They also adopted a memorial to Congress, praying for the removal of Kellogg, and the seating of John McEnery in the gubernatorial chair.... L. Q. C. Lamar has been elected United States Senator from Mississippi. In the Democratic caucus he was nominated by acclamation, all the other aspirants having withdrawn.

WASHINGTON.

It is said that the President is fully alive to the necessity of doing something to put an end to the outlawed condition of affairs on the Rio Grande, and that he will at an early day send a special message on this subject to Congress.... Attorney-General Pierrepont is of the opinion that Congress has ample power to compel the Pacific Railway corporations to pay the interest on the bonds loaned them by the United States, notwithstanding the adverse decision of the Supreme Court....It is given out from Washington that President Grant is strenuously opposed to the proposed reduction of the army, and that he will flatly veto any measure looking to that end.... A little breeze was caused at the Capital the other day by Secretary Bristow's summary removal of the Second Comptroller, Third Auditor and three leading clerks in the Treasury Department. Carelessness and inefficiency were the crimes for which they were bounced. ....The Secretary of the Treasury declines to receive checks and drafts in payment of debts due to the Government. This will prevent the National Banks from paying their semi-annual dues in anything else than lawful money.... Congressman Atkins, of Tennessee, second on the Committee of Pacific Railroads, has prepared a bill which will create considerable talk and commotion among the friends of the present Texas Pacific measures. He proposes the incorporation of a new company, and chartering of three branches of the Texas Pacific Railroad, with a western terminus at Marshall, and reaching respectively New Orleans, Vicksburg, and Memphis.

Senator Boutwell is preparing a speech, which he will shortly deliver in the Senate, advocating an entire revolution in the naval expenditures. He will take the ground that no new ships should be built, and no preparations of any kind made except for defensive purposes, and that these should consist principally of torpedoes and the necessary coast defenses. ....The counsel who have business before the United States and Mexican Commission say the sum awarded to Mexican citizens will be probably $2,000,000 and to citizens of the United States between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

A Washington dispatch says there seems to be a purpose on the part of certain Eastern Senators to make a serious effort to oust Senator Ferry from the Vice-Presidency pro-tem. of the Senate, and that there is no doubt that this question will be brought up as a subject of discussion in the Senate.... ....Gov. Carpenter, of Iowa, has been appointed Second Comptroller of the Treasury.

A Washington correspondent states that Congressman Holman has prepared a programme for reducing appropriation bills $40,000,000 over last year. He cuts public buildings down $10,000,000, and allows no more to be started; abolishes the letter-carrier system in cities of less than 80,000 inhabitants; abolishes the Marine Corps and closes up all the Navy Yards but one or two; cuts the army and navy down one-third or one-half; stops river and harbor improvements almost entirely; reduces the salaries of Postmasters one-half....George W. Ingalls, Indian Agent at Muskoqu, I. T., has been suspended by Secretary Chandler.

GENERAL.

The Anglo-American Cable Company has made a material reduction in rates. The tariff for political and general news other than commercial dispatches to the press, unabbreviated and not in cypher, will be one shilling (25 cents in gold) per word.

The year 1875 was a good year for the precious metals. A statement of the production in the States and Territories west of the Missouri River, including British Columbia and the western coast of Mexico, places the aggregate yield at $80,899,037, an increase of $6,487,982 over the product of 1874, and the greatest yield ever known. There was a decrease in California, Idaho, Utah, and Washington Territory, and an increase in the other districts. An aggregate yield of $90,000,000 is anticipated for 1876.

The official debt statement for Jan. 1, printed below, shows an increase of the public indebtedness for the month of December of $1,915,062:

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

Wednesday, Jan. 5.—Senate.—Bills were introduced as follows: By Morrill (Vt.), to further provide for the redemption of United States legal tender notes; by Allison, to divide the State of Iowa into two judicial districts; by Harvey, to provide for an investigation of the habits of the grasshoppers....The Chair (Ferry) and Christiancy presented various memorials of citizens of Michigan in favor of a law giving $200 bounty to each Union soldier and sailor in lieu of a homestead donation without actual settlement; for an amendment to the Pension law so as to grant pensions to the soldiers of the war of 1812 who served five days and were honorably discharged; and that the Homestead law be so amended that soldiers and sailors who, by the loss of a limb or equivalent disability, are prevented from making settlement, shall be entitled to an amount of land equal to that which they would have obtained with settlement. All of which were referred.

House.—A large number of bills were introduced. Among the more prominent ones were the following: By Frye, to provide for an early payment of the Geneva award; by Milliken, authorizing tobacco producers to retail tobacco in the leaf; by Whitthorne, fixing the rate of postage on written local matter....Several investigating resolutions were introduced and adopted....Cason offered a resolution declaring that in all cases of public employment (all other things being equal) the soldier shall have preference over the civilian. Adopted, 142 to 9. ....Fort offered a resolution declaring that the officers of the House, in filling positions under them, ought to give preference to Union soldiers. Wood (N. Y.) moved its reference to the Centennial Committee—agreed to, 121 to 91....Harrison offered a resolution declaring that in the distribution of patronage those who have the appointment of subordinates should only regard the Jeffersonian test, is he honest, faithful, and capable. Adopted.... Caulfield introduced a resolution authorizing an investigation into the alleged frauds in the construction of the Chicago Custom House. Adopted.

Thursday, Jan. 6.—The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections reported on the question of the Presidency pro tem. of the Senate, that, as this officer was chosen by the Senate, he could be removed or changed at will. The minority of the committee (the Democrats) dissented and took the view that as Mr. Ferry was President pro tem. when the Vice-President died, he cannot now be divested of that office.... Sherman presented 896 petitions, signed by 20,896 persons, praying for the abolition of the bank-check stamp tax....Morton presented several petitions for the appointment of a commission to inquire as to the alcoholic liquor traffic....Wright introduced a bill fixing the salary of the President of the United States....Morrill addressed the Senate in support of his bill for the redemption of legal-tenders. An animated debate followed, Senators Thurman, Sherman, Edmunds, Bogy and Bayard taking part in the discussion....Dorsey introduced a bill authorizing the sale of the Hot Springs reservation, in Arkansas.

House—Bills introduced: By Hopkins, appropriating $1,500,000 to complete the Centennial building; by W. B. Williams (Mich.), for the survey of a ship-canal across the State of Michigan; also, for the improvement of the harbors of White River, Muskegon, Grand Haven, Black Lake, and Saugatuck; by Durand, a resolution condemning the practice of making assessments on Government employes for political purposes, (adopted); by A. S. Williams (Mich.), for the improvement of Thunder Bay, and for a range of lights at the mouth of the Cheboygan River; by McCrary, to regulate commerce by railroad among the several States, and to establish a Bureau of Commerce; by Oliver—an amendment to the Constitution to elect a President, Vice-President and Senators by a direct vote of the people; by Maginnis—for the sale of timber lands in the Territories; also, to promote education in the Territories.... A resolution was adopted authorizing a select committee to inquire into the Mexican outrages along the Rio Grande in Texas....New offered a resolution declaring that the fraternal feeling and good will existing in all sections of the country, and the manifest disposition and purpose of the men who battled against each other in the late civil war to join hands as one people in the future, is a most auspicious ushering in of the Centennial year, and that while the people are thus making an honest effort to live together in peace, and to uphold the same flag of an undivided country, their representatives in Congress should do no act which would unnecessarily disturb the patriotic concord now existing and increasing, nor wantonly revive the bitter memories of the past. Unanimously adopted....Several new investigations were ordered by resolution; among them one to ascertain whether the pay of army officers can be reduced; one to learn what custom houses do not pay expenses and can be abolished; one inquiring into the management of the War Department; one into the character of the obligations of the District of Columbia; and one into the present condition of the Indian service....Adjourned to Monday, Jan. 10.

To Tea-Drinkers.

Green tea is nothing more nor less than a poisonous humbug, manufactured to meet the demands of a vitiated taste. Black tea is the leaf in its natural state. Most of the varieties are, however, too mild to satisfy a palate used to pickles and mustard, and pepper-sauces and like condiments. The dealers, therefore, kindly poison the leaf and produce what they are pleased to advertise as "a superior quality of green tea." At one time ten pounds of green tea were sold in the American market for every pound imported. The process of adulteration was performed at the seaboard. A long cylinder, turning slowly over a fire, was half filled with black tea. Then handfuls of turmeric, indigo and other poisonous matters, were thrown in. After the whole had been cooked together the stuff came out as green tea. Each leaf was perhaps coated with copper. Since then "Chinese cheap labor" has supplanted Caucasian cunning. The Mongolian ships the tea already greened, and so saves the importer trouble. Unfortunately for us, the almond-eyed Mongolian, who surpasses his Christian brethren in so many things, excels in the art of adulteration; the coloring matter used by him is a filthy compound of silicate of magnesium, Prussian blue and other dirt, and the leaves colored are faded and old, and mixed with the leaves of a plant bearing the suggestive name of "lie tea." The "lie tea," we may add, flourishes in New Jersey, and is carefully cultivated there—it is not difficult to surmise why. There is such a thing as pure green tea, but it is much weaker than the artificial stuff, and has to be prepared by a process of drying that is long and costly. It is rarely exported from China. No wonder that excessive tea drinking does almost as much harm as excessive liquor drinking. People are not apt to thrive on poisons.

An Old Couple.

We find the following credited to a paper in Illinois: "Dr. Wilkins, of Farmount, recently visited a man and woman in Montgomery County, Ind., whose ages are respectively 113 and 111 years, and who have lived together in the marriage state 85 years. The name of this ancient couple is Fruits, and they are the parents of Mrs. Thomas Williams, of Carlin Township. The old man stands up as straight as a ramrod, and does quite a good deal of work every day. He has always been a moderate liver, and uses no tobacco, which is an argument against tobacco-users. But his wife has been a steady smoker for sixty years, which is an argument in favor of tobacco. The old lady is afflicted with a cancer, which made its appearance upon her forehead forty years ago, and which she is now doctoring with coal. At one time in her life she weighed 225 pounds, but gradually shrunk away till she now tips the beam at 125.

A Georgia man borrowed a horse to tend a farm, and after the crop was in he had the check to charge the owner for what the horse had eaten while in his possession.

GRASSHOPPER WISDOM.

What Shall be Done with the 'Hopper in 1876.

Although the people of Kansas, Nebraska, and adjacent Western States possess many virtues indispensable to success in agricultural life, the gift of foresight does not appear on the list of their endowments. Though foreknowledge is beyond their reach, precalculation is not, or should not be, and the severe lessons of the past two or three years from the various forms of insect pests should have been enough to render the people thoughtful for the future as long as they lived. But it seems this has not been the case, and thinking men of the sections overrun last year and the year before by the grasshoppers are surveying the prospect for 1876 with anxiety, at least, not to say alarm.

In brief, the case is this: Good authorities, who have had opportunities for extended observation in Idaho, Montana, Utah, and Wyoming, as well as other Western States, declare that in all this section the crops of last summer and fall were very good. Though in some districts the grasshoppers destroyed almost half the crop, yet the farmers were able safely to come through their difficulties, and are tolerably well prepared for next year. Before the insects died they deposited untold millions of eggs in the ground along the course of their march. Persons, whose experience in such matters entitles their opinions to respectful consideration, declare that the summer of 1876 will hatch such swarms of grasshoppers in the West as have never before been seen, and that the tract of country in which they will prevail will be wider than ever before, reaching from a long distance west of the Black Hills to the center of Missouri and Iowa.

In view of this probable visitation next year, Brigham Young, after due conference with the leading saints, has promulgated from the Mormon pulpit a scheme for allaying the prospective danger of inconvenience or suffering, by ordering his people to retain their grain in store, and not, on any account, to sell or barter it. The common sense of this requirement is so manifest that the only wonder is some one did not see it before and place the credit with Kansas or Nebraska farmers, where we might have been proud of it. But as a good idea should be acted upon, regardless of the source whence it comes, we must hail the lucky notion of Brigham and his saints as the true solution of the grasshopper difficulty, and one which our Western people must accept and put in practice, if they would be free from the great danger of outright starvation, to which for some years they have been, at intervals, exposed. Though the policy is not novel among the Mormons, it is new to our people, and, in certain bounds, will prove the perfect solution to the absorbing grasshopper question.

At present the Kansas and Nebraska farmers are selling their grain at the highest rates, for cash, and as rapidly as possible spending the money. If this policy be continued, next summer will find them with little money, with less credit, and with barely enough seed for sowing their farms in the spring. If the "hoppers" come, the growing crops will be destroyed, and again the farmers will be calling for seed grain and enough provision to last them until another crop can be raised. There is no necessity for this. Precautions are much better than any possible means of mending evil already done, and when the danger is so imminent as this is stated to be, no means of averting the foreboding famine should be neglected. The farmers of Western Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, and other threatened districts should hoard either all or enough of their grain and provisions to last their families a year, so that, if the crops really fail from the ravages of the insects next year, entire communities may not be reduced to starvation, as was the case last summer.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Immigrants and Immigrating Criminals.

Mr. Conger, of Michigan, has introduced in the United States House of Representatives a bill for the better protection of immigrants, and to prevent the importation of criminals into the United States. It provides that the Secretary of the Treasury shall appoint no more than five immigration agents, whose duty it shall be, under such rules as may be prescribed by said Secretary, to supervise the execution of the laws relating to immigrants, to protect immigrants from imposition and frauds, to guard against the importation of paupers and criminals, and to furnish them with such information as will enable them to proceed in the cheapest and most expeditious manner to the place of their destination; such commissioners to receive $5 per day when actually employed, and necessary traveling expenses. Such information is to be printed in several languages, and distributed where it will do the most good. And the provisions of the act of March 3d, 1855, to regulate the carriage of passengers in steamships and other vessels, is amended so as to apply to all foreign or domestic vessels transporting or attempting to transport fifty or more steerage passengers to the United States from any foreign port or place other than foreign contiguous territory, or from the United States to any such foreign port or place, or between ports or places on the Atlantic coast of the United States, and ports in the United States on the Pacific coast.

Terrible Death by a Furious Bull.

Mr. Jabez Hodson, a farmer living near Knightstown, Ind., recently met his death in the following shocking manner: He had just recovered from a broken leg so as to be able to go about by the use of one crutch, and had gone to the cattle sheds to lead the bull to the pump for water. It is supposed the bull attacked him from the rear, and knocked him down before he was aware of any danger. His back was broken in two places, his ribs broken from the spinal column and his breast bone crushed, and although there was evidence that he had been pushed and dragged about, and his clothing was almost entirely stripped from his person, he was not gored. He was entirely alone at the time, but was found by his son in about twenty minutes after it had occurred, thrown up against the fence, where the bull had left him and gone to the field. Mr. Hodson lived about four hours after they found him.

The bull was one of a lot of blooded stock that Mr. H. had bought at the sale of the late Gen. Sol. Meridith, at Cambridge, Ind., and is considered a very valuable animal.

STATES OF THE UNION.

The Distribution of Wealth and Material Resources—Interesting Census Statistics.

To illustrate the State distribution of manufactures, we present the following statistics of States the annual value of whose manufactured products exceeds $50,000,000:

	Value of Manufactures.		Value of Manufactures.
California	$66,594,556	Michigan	$118,394,676
Connecticut	161,065,474	Missouri	206,213,429
Illinois	205,620,672	New Jersey	169,237,732
Indiana	108,617,278	New York	785,194,651
Kentucky	54,625,809	Ohio	269,713,610
Maine	79,497,521	Pennsylvania	711,894,344
Maryland	76,593,613	Rhode Island	111,418,354
Massachusetts	553,912,568	Wisconsin	77,214,326

In respect to agricultural products Iowa produces the largest spring wheat crop of any State, the production of the United States being 112,549,733 bushels, and that of Iowa 28,708,312 bushels, while Wisconsin ranks next with 24,375,435 bushels. Ohio raises the largest winter wheat crop, or 27,625,759 of 175,195,193 bushels produced in the United States. Pennsylvania supplies over one-fifth of the rye produced in this country, or 3,577,641 bushels out of 16,018,795. Illinois grows a larger quantity of corn than any other State, or 129,921,395 of the 760,944,549 bushels the country produces. Illinois also takes the lead in the oat crop, growing 42,780,581 out of the total of 282,107,157 bushels. California produces the largest barley crop, or 8,783,490 out of a total of 29,761,305 bushels. New York is the largest cultivator of buckwheat, raising 3,904,030 of a total of 9,821,721 bushels. Mississippi takes the lead among the cotton-growing States. Ohio produces more than half the flax of the United States. Kentucky grows more than half the hemp crop of the country. California produces nine-tenths of our native silk cocoons. Ohio contributes one-fifth of all the wool produced in the United States, or twice as much as New York, and nearly twice as much as California. New York produces more than one-fifth of the hay crop, or nearly twice as much as Pennsylvania, which furnishes the next largest figures in that line. New York furnishes more than two-thirds of the hop crop of the country. South Carolina supplies nearly half the rice produced in the country. Georgia is next, or 7,000,000 pounds ahead of Louisiana. Nearly all the rice comes from these three States. Of the 272,735,341 pounds of tobacco produced in the country, 105,305,869 pounds are grown in Kentucky. Virginia comes next, with 37,086,364 pounds. Louisiana contributes nearly all the sugar and molasses from cane, and Vermont nearly one-third the sugar from maple, while New York produces over one-fourth the sugar from maple. Ohio and Indiana (the latter the most) produce each about one-eighth of the sorghum molasses. New York grows one-fifth of the white potato crop. North Carolina produces more sweet potatoes than any other State. New York raises one-fifth of the national supply of peas and beans. California produces more than half of the native wine.

In respect to animal wealth Illinois is ahead in horses and swine; Missouri in mules and asses; New York in milch cows; Texas in working oxen and other cattle, and Ohio in sheep. New York is far ahead of any State in dairy products, furnishing one-fifth of the butter of the country, nearly half the cheese and more than half the milk sold. The value of all live stock in New York is greater in the aggregate than in any other State.

In seeds, Pennsylvania furnishes one-third of the clover, Illinois one-third of the grass, and Ohio over one-third of the flax. The aggregate value of farms in New York is greater than any other State, being one-eighth the value of all farms in the country; and the value of farming implements and machinery is also greater, being about one-seventh of that returned for the whole country.

The distribution of educational facilities may be inferred from the fact that the largest number of persons in any State over 10 years of age who cannot read are in Virginia; next, North Carolina. Pennsylvania has the largest number of schools, but the schools of New York have by far the largest income from endowment, taxation and tuition fees. Michigan has 6,000 more libraries than New York, which State has 20,000, and comes next in the list; Ohio next, Pennsylvania next, Illinois next. New York has 835 newspapers; Pennsylvania, 540; Illinois, 505; Ohio, 395, and so on.

The greatest valuation of all property is in New York, next Massachusetts, next Ohio, next Pennsylvania. The highest total of taxation is in New York, next Massachusetts, next Pennsylvania, next Ohio. New York, in 1870, had nearly one-fifth of the State and local public indebtedness of the country, or $160,000,000; Pennsylvania, $88,000,000; Massachusetts, $69,000,000; Virginia, $55,000,000; Louisiana, $53,000,000; Tennessee, $48,000,000, and so on.

Belligerent Sisters.

Early yesterday morning, in Browneville, Alabama, two sisters—one married, the other single but engaged—daughters of Mr. Harris, had a dispute as to the looks of husband and lover. Miss Belinda seized a pair of heavy tongs, and, striking her sister, literally knocked out the left eyeball. A Columbus physician removed the hanging ball, and on a third visit in the afternoon pronounced the condition of the patient as very dangerous—in fact, life is despaired of. Miss Harris was dismissed from the Eagle and Phœnix Mills, where both sisters were employed.—Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer.

Heavy Rainfall.

The rainfall during the last quarter has been one of the heaviest on record in England. At Oxford it exceeded the heaviest, that of 1872. The result has been serious flooding in all low-lying districts. Where the drainage was good, as in most large towns, the public health has not been affected, but in poor districts, where the water has remained in the basements of houses for days and weeks, much sickness has been experienced, and the Registrar-General's returns at the close of this quarter are looked forward to with the greatest anxiety.

Mice as Till-Thieves.

Col. Howard B. Ensign, President of the Maryland Steamboat Company, and the Treasurer and Secretary, Mr. Byrd, have for the past several weeks missed from the office, corner of Light and Camden streets, some odds and ends of money which were left over night in the cash drawer, in notes of the denominations of from ten to fifty cents, and also five-cent nickels. One night last week $1.30 was taken from the drawer. Last Saturday night $4.31 was left in the drawer, out of which was missed yesterday a twenty-five-cent note and two ten-cent notes. Col. Ensign had his suspicions aroused in regard to some of the hands of the company, who had access to the office both during the night and at an early hour in the morning, before the officials of the company were about. He, however, said nothing, and yesterday morning concluded to make a thorough examination of the desk, so as to ferret out the way and the manner in which the cash was purloined. The desk of the Secretary, Mr. Byrd, has eight drawers—four on either side—the cash-drawer being the upper one upon the right of the desk, with money apartments, lined with tin. Upon a careful investigation, it was found that some of the notes that had been left in the drawer looked as if they had been nibbled at by mice, and upon opening two other drawers, a number of papers were observed to be mutilated. The fact at once became apparent to Col. Ensign that the thieves were mice, which fact was established beyond a doubt when, upon opening the fourth and lower drawer, all the money that had been missed was found therein, several ten-cent notes having been pretty well nibbled, but those of a larger denomination being untouched. The notes were stowed in one corner of the drawer, and in the center of the pile was a nest which the mice had made out of this rather costly material.—Baltimore Gazette.

Winter Ventilation.

Whatever may be said about the direct effects of winter upon health, there is at least one indirect operation of it that cannot but be regarded as highly detrimental. We mean the want of fresh air, to which so many people are subjected, or to which they subject themselves. We shall not stop to speak of anything in this connection but school-rooms. How many pupils have their health impaired from this cause we do not know; but we are convinced that it would require much less paper and ink to give a list of those who are not thus affected than of those who are. Kind-hearted people, on a windy, stinging day, frequently commiserate those useful members of society who from a lofty position direct the movements of the horses attached to omnibuses or hacks. We have assuredly nothing to say against this feeling; for the work, undoubtedly, is often very hard upon noses and fingers. At the same time, the benevolent individuals in question might sometimes find, in the case of their own children shut up several hours a day in a badly ventilated school-room, a field for their sympathy quite as appropriate as that afforded by men whose business exposes them to the full severity of cold and storm. It is certain, at all events, that any healthful tendencies that may pertain to winter weather must, for the time, be of little value to a child sitting with fifty or a hundred others in a room from which the external air is as carefully excluded as from a hermetically sealed can of tomatoes.—New York Times.

A day or two ago a lady was trading at one of the dry goods stores on Woodward avenue and found herself short of money. In this emergency she said to the clerk: "You may charge the balance to my husband. I suppose you know him, don't you?" "Mr. ——? Oh, yes," replied the clerk; "I gave him credit for a silk dress for you the other day. How did you like the shade and quality?" The lady did not answer. She hadn't seen the aforesaid dress, and as she hurried home she clenched her fingers and gasped: "Wretch—silk dress, eh? Oh! Ill—!"—Detroit Free Press.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Michaelmas.

The russet hazels on the bough are hanging ripe and brown;
The burnish'd chestnuts from their shucks come thickly showering down;
The ring-dove on the beech-mast feeds; the squirrel gambols gay
Amid the acorn-laden oaks throughout the autumn day.

From furze to furze the spider weaves her slender silken thread;
The rain-renewed meadow turf with mushrooms white is spread;
The partridge from the stubble whirs; the pheasant-sultan's crow
Rings shrilly as he proudly struts along the coppice row.

And scarlet the geranium beds glow on the smooth green lawn;
The dahlias glisten with the dews of eve and early dawn;
The ivy round the old gray church gives shelter to a band
Of gathering swallows taking flight toward a sunnier land.

The yellowing touch of autumn-tide is on each bush and tree;
Amid the last sweet summer blooms regretful hums the bee,
For soon his plenteous nectar feasts shall be for this year o'er,
And he abroad amid the flowers shall venture forth no more.

Upon the path the autumn leaves are falling thick and sere;
Decay's bright tints on all around proclaim the waning year;
Soon Winter's touch shall freeze the mere, make bare and black the wood:
Thus pass in turn the seasons four, and each in season good.

Around the Farm.

Discard the old habit of boasting of the number of acres of land planted, number of plows run, or the number of bales of cotton made, and look well to the number of dollars of clear profit.

The great difference in the quality of butter made by farmers' wives in the same neighborhood is often a matter of wonder. It is generally attributed to the makers alone. But there is more difference in the feed and water, and facilities in caring for the milk, than is usually considered. No good butter can be made without good, sweet feed, good, pure water—and plenty of both.

A fruit-car is building in San Francisco for the transportation of fruit from that city to Chicago. It is provided with a fan-blower, driven by one of the car axles, by means of which the air is driven through ice, which reduces it to a low temperature, and then distributes it among the fruit boxes through a large perforated pipe, laid along the bottom of the car. After the cool air has passed through the fruit it returns to the blower, and the process is repeated. By this means the atmosphere of the car is kept at a uniform temperature of forty degrees Fahrenheit.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman has this to say about overfeeding for exhibition: "I think the leading breeders of short-horns, as well as other breeds, begin to see the folly of hampering their breeding stock for show purposes. If an animal will not on a whole summer's pasturage look well enough for the show ring, then the breed is scarcely worth owning. This is the key note to successful rearing of stock for the masses, and the true reason why small breeders with limited means have not dared to bring their cattle to exhibitions of any sort, where they would have to compete with meal fed animals."

Save hog manure now, as it is especially valuable from fattening hogs. As nearly all the nitrogen of the food is contained in the liquids voided, none of it should be allowed to waste. Litter the pens with an absorbent—dry earth, or muck or cut straw. Much of the net profits of stock comes from the manure—hogs included—and yet not one farmer in ten saves half the hog manure made. This is the kind of economy that makes hard times. It is estimated that if all the manure a pig makes was saved, properly, it would add, on an average, about two cents to the value of each pound of pork.—Ohio Farmer.

Chicken Cholera.—Eight or ten pounds of sulphate of iron (copperas) dissolved in five or six gallons of water, with half a pint of crude carbolic acid added to the solution, and briskly stirred, makes the cheapest and best disinfecting fluid for common use. It can be procured in every town and by any family, and if the carbolic acid is not at hand, the solution of copperas may be used without it. Sprinkle the walls, nest-boxes and perches, daily, with the above. For the disinfection of ground on which any excremental matter of diseased fowls (or of those suspected of disease) has been cast, use the "dead oil" (heavy oil) of coal tar, or coal tar itself. It is a good plan to use coal tar as a paint for the inside of poultry houses, in districts invaded by the chicken cholera. Poultry World.

About the House.

Codfish is improved by changing it, once in a while, back and forth from garret to cellar. Some dislike to have it in the house anywhere.

Soda should be bought in small quantities, then powdered, sifted, and kept tight corked in a large-mouth glass bottle. It grows damp if exposed to the air, and then cannot be used properly.

The Scientific American says: "Tubs and pails saturated with glycerine will not shrink and dry up, the hoops will not fall off, and there will be no necessity for keeping these articles soaked. Butter tubs keep fresh and sweet, and can be used a second time."

Boiled Fruit Pudding.—One quart crushed wheat, one teaspoonful cinnamon, half teaspoonful cloves, two cups sugar, two eggs, one-half pound suet chopped fine, one teaspoonful cream tartar, one-half teaspoonful soda, half cup of molasses, half pound raisins, chopped fine, citron or lemon-peel if desired. Boil two hours.

Eggs and Minced Veal.—Take some emants of roast veal, trim off all browned parts, and mince it very finely; fry a shallot, chopped small, in plenty of butter; when it is a light straw color, add a large pinch of flour and a little stock; then the minced meat with chopped parsley, pepper, salt, and nutmeg to taste mix well, add more stock if necessary, and let the mince gradually get hot by the side of the fire; lastly, add a few drops of lemon juice. Serve with sippets of bread fried in butter round, and poached eggs on the top.

The Calla Lily.—This is becoming a very fashionable flower for pots, and is a great adornment for a window in the winter. Its large, dark green leaves and sweet white flowers make it quite attractive as a decorative plant. But what shall be done with them in the summer? It should be allowed to rest, which can be done by planting it out in some dry, sunny part of the garden, and let it remain without any artificial watering until toward fall. As soon as it gives any indication of growth, it should be potted again in a compost of equal parts of well rotted manure and loam. Remove to the house and water freely, and it will be a free and abundant bloomer for the ensuing winter. It is a plant which always liberally pays for its board.

How to Cook Cranberries.—How to cook cranberries is an important question, if you are to get the best of them. They are sour, acrid, unpalatable and unwholesome in a raw state, and but little better as they are usually cooked. We have often seen them hastily scalded, sweetened, and brought to the table floating in their juice, not one-half of them cooked enough to burst the skin. Bah! what food! But how different when cooked! Put them, with only water enough to prevent burning, in a tinned saucepan, and stew until by stirring the whole becomes a homogeneous mass, with no semblance of whole berries, and then add clarified syrup, previously prepared, and stir a few minutes while boiling. When cold, you have delicious cranberry jelly.

The Late Virginia Earthquake.

At one o'clock a. m. I visited nearly every quarter of the city, in order to ascertain accurately the extent and effect of the earthquake. The result was that it turned out to be much more serious, startling, and, perhaps, dangerous than I was aware of. Everywhere the citizens were walking about the streets half dressed, or congregated on the corners discussing the events. Some of them remained in their houses with the doors open, prepared at the first symptom of another rumble to rush to the streets for safety from the impending danger of falling houses. Few were courageous enough to retire again, and those who did so kept their clothes on to be ready for flight in any emergency, and numbers chose the seemingly safer alternative of walking about all night. Never in the history of this city, so famous for disasters and terrible catastrophes, was there such dismay and consternation depicted on the countenances of the populace as they stood in their doorways or in the streets, tremblingly looking forward to a calamity more awful than anything they had yet experienced. From interviews had with persons of intelligence and cool judgment it is now certain that the city and vicinity were violently shaken by three distinct rumblings of an earthquake, accompanied by a noise resembling thunder, a rushing sound in the air, and the shooting of thousands of meteors through the heavens.

Everybody agrees that the first of the shocks was the most terrific and startling of them all, shaking and swaying the houses like the rocking of a cradle, rattling glasses and glassware, ringing bells, and, in many instances, throwing persons from their beds with force and violence to the floor. This latter incident occurred at several of the hotels and numbers of private dwellings, and the effect was at once to produce a panic and the wildest consternation that can be imagined. Men and women alike rushed into passages and streets, screaming with terror, unable to realize such an awful visitation, and in the confusion and uproar which ensued escaping the effect of the second "shake," which followed in about three minutes after the first.

This latter shock was less violent, but, like the first, it came with the same rumbling, and as if suppressed, sound of thunder, the same rushing noise, like a whirlwind, and the same shooting of meteors in the empyrean, which was filled with electricity, producing the most brilliant and at the same time the most astonishing effects. Those who were calm and collected enough to witness the latter display in the streets became terribly impressed with this extraordinary demonstration of nature, and there was many a mental resolution, tending to a reformation in the future, made in the few minutes that it lasted.

In about twenty minutes from the first shock the third occurred, and this was still less violent than even the second, but accompanied with the same atmospheric phenomena as the preceding two.

A Horse with a Silver Throat.

We have heard of people born with a silver spoon in their mouths and all that, but the most unique thing of the kind we ever heard of or saw is a horse with a silver throat. He was a kindly, hard-working beast, belonging to the Cincinnati Omnibus Company, but was "wind-broken," and on that account had grown almost useless. It was a pity, and a loss as well, to turn him out to die—he wouldn't sell—so it was determined by Meyers, the veterinary surgeon, to try an experiment—in short, a "kill-or-cure" remedy. So, two months ago, he made an incision in the animal's throat and inserted a silver tube in the windpipe to facilitate breathing, leaving a sort of artificial nostril at the point of insertion. The device works like a charm, the terrible wheezing has ceased, the incision has healed up beautifully, and the horse is doing his full day's work and eats his full allowance. The silver throat can be removed and replaced at will for cleaning, but is so arranged as not to get out of place or cause any inconvenience to the horse. This unique case of equine surgery can be seen almost any day at the omnibus office, on Race street, between Fourth and Fifth streets.—Cincinnati Commercial.

A "jumping man" target like that used at Creedmoor, so arranged as to remain in sight five seconds at a time, has been procured by the New Haven Rifle Association. Experts with the Winchester rifle can hit the figure five times during the five seconds at a distance of 100 yards.

THE NEW SCHOLAR.

He Knew it All, but Wouldn't Tell.

He made his appearance at one of the union schools the other morning, and, arriving ahead of time, he prevented any loneliness from seizing him by licking three boys and riding the gate off its hinges. He went in with the crowd when the bell rang, and, finding no empty seat, he perched himself on the wood-box. When the children repeated the "Lord's Prayer" in concert, the new boy kept time with his heel, and when they came to sing he argued that variety was the spice of song, and attempted to sing one of his own—one about a gentleman named Daniel Tucker, who dreamed that he was dead, and so forth. The teacher warned him to keep still, and he replied that he wouldn't come to that school if his musical qualifications were to be overlooked. When school finally opened the teacher secured his name and began asking him questions in order to find out how he should be graded.

"Can you spell?" she asked.

"What kind of spelling?" he cautiously asked.

"Spell 'house,' if you please."

"Frame or brick house?" he asked.

"Any kind of a house."

"With a mortgage on it?"

"You may spell 'man,' if you will," she said, giving him a severe look.

"Man?"

"Yes."

"I don't care much about spelling 'man' but I will this afternoon. I've spelled it with my eyes shut."

"Do you know your alphabet?" she asked, changing the subject.

"Never had any," was the prompt reply.

"Do you know anything about reading?"

"I read like lightning!" he answered. She handed him a reader, and said:

"Let me hear you read."

"Read right out loud?"

"Yes."

"I'm afraid it would disturb the children," he whispered.

"Go on, and let me hear you read."

He looked carefully at the page, scowled his brow and read:

"If I was a lame boy and didn't get peanuts in my stocking Christmas, dum my eyes! but I'd make things jump around that house next morning!"

He handed the book back and the teacher asked:

"Richard, how many are three and three?"

"Three and three what?" he inquired.

"Anything."

"It's a good deal according to what it is," he replied, as he settled back. "I know that three and three cats don't make a dog!"

"Did you ever study geography, Richard?"

"Yes, mam."

"What is geography?"

"It's a book."

"Is this world round or flat?"

"Hills and hollers!" he replied.

"Richard, can you write?"

"Write what?"

"Can you write your name?"

"I could, I suppose; but I've got my name without writing it."

"Can you write a letter?"

"Who to?"

"To any one."

"Yes, I could, if I had money to pay the postage."

"Well, Richard," she said, in despair, "You'll have to go into the lower room if you want to come to school here."

"I druther stay here."

"But you can't."

"I'll bet this knife agin ten cents I can."

She took him by the arm to remove him, but he laid his hand on her shoulder and said, in a warning voice:

"Don't get me mad, now, or I'll let myself loose."

She called the principal down, and as he approached the boy he commanded:

"Boy, what are you doing here?"

"Gitting eddicashon!" replied Richard.

"You go right down stairs now!" continued the principal.

"Well, don't sass me, for I was never here before!" replied Richard, slowly moving his legs as if he meant to get down.

The principal took him by the collar and jerked him around, got kicked on the shin, and bitten in the wrist, and finally landed the young student on the walk.

"Now, you go home!" he shouted, as he tried to recover his breath.

"Am I educated?" inquired Richard.

"You seem to be."

"Gimme a diplomy, then."

"You clear out, or I'll have you arrested."

"Hain't I a scholar in this school no more?"

"No, sir."

"Who owns this school-house?" demanded the boy.

"No matter—you clear out."

"Will you come out into the yard here where you can't hang to anything?" asked the boy.

"Begone, I say!"

"Don't draw no darringer on me!" warned the boy, as he backed off; "nor don't think you can scare me with any of your bowie-knives!"

The principal walked in and shut the door, and after the new boy had stood there long enough to show that he wasn't afraid, he turned and walked off, growling to himself:

"I'll get the foreman of No. 6 to pound that feller afore he's a week older."—Detroit Free Press.

Lost His Bride.

The way a Virginia gentleman lost his bride by a flank movement skilfully executed by her, is told by the Petersburgh Index of Wednesday. Thus runs the story: "A gentleman who lives in Henrico County was engaged to be married to a fair and accomplished lady of the county, and yesterday morning was the day fixed for the happy event. Accompanied by his brother, the gentleman came over to this city on Monday and went down to Wakefield on the evening train. Remaining over night with a friend in the neighborhood, the expectant groom yesterday morning, at the appointed hour, accompanied by his attendants, went to the residence of the lady's parents to claim his bride. To his utter amazement he discovered that she was not there. In her stead he found a letter addressed to him, stating that she had decided to share her fortunes with another whom she loved more than she could love him. It was ascertained that the lady and her affianced (now husband), accompanied by friends, had taken private conveyances to North Carolina on Monday night while the company at her house were enjoying themselves in the parlor. Fourteen couples had been engaged to wait at the marriage, and a brilliant reception awaited the gentleman from Henrico on his arrival home, with his bride. He is philosophical enough to take the reception all to himself when he gets back."

The Main Causes of Disease in Farmers

The fourth annual report of the Massachusetts Board of Health discusses at considerable length the longevity and health of farmers. The following suggestions are offered in closing:

Probably the most frequent causes of sickness in families residing in the country are a lack of sufficient variety of food, and too great indulgence in such articles of diet as are rich in carbon and starch and deficient in albumen and other muscle-producing elements. Less pork, lard, butter, potatoes, etc., and more beef, mutton, oatmeal, cracked wheat, and Graham flour would be a vast improvement in this respect.

Damp cellars, and the decaying vegetable matter in them, are productive of much ill-health. If cellars could be entirely dispensed with in dwelling houses, it would be an excellent change from the present system; but so radical an innovation will hardly meet with much favor, especially from those whom it would benefit most—farmers' wives. If the cellar, however, is a necessary evil, it can be rendered much less of an evil than it is at present, by careful attention to its freedom from decaying substances, and by making it perfectly dry, and ventilating it thoroughly. Dryness may be secured by a thorough system of drainage, and ventilation by an opening into the chimney (which should in all cases be built from the cellar up), and by other openings into the outer air, connected with the cellar floor by pipes of sufficient capacity to keep up a thorough circulation and frequent change of the atmosphere.

The subjects of drains for conveying liquid waste from dwellings and of the proper disposition of all offensive solids, are of vast importance, and have received but little attention. The limits of this article will not admit of their proper presentation; but it should be borne in mind that no liquid waste can safely be left in a vault or cistern where it will soak into the soil; as it will be sure to find its way to any lower well or cavity within a distance of one hundred feet; and has been known to contaminate wells of water at a distance of one hundred rods, when the intervening land was of a porous character.

The terrible results of such contamination are brought frequently to our notice by the deaths from typhoid fever and diarrhea, which are so constantly occurring. All offensive waste matter from every dwelling, whether solid or liquid, should be thoroughly mixed with dry earth, and, in that condition, will be a most valuable fertilizer, and a benefit, instead of a source of danger, to the agriculturist. The neglect of this simple and easily-performed duty may not, apparently, produce any evil effects for a long time. Perhaps, for years, one may live with a fever-breeding vault close by his dwelling and still escape, through the sanitary influence of the sun and winds, from a pestilence; but the danger is there, and is all the greater because unrecognized and unfeared; and at a time when all the circumstances are favorable for its development a devastating plague will carry woeful misery, sorrow and death into what might have remained a happy and healthy home by the exercise of reasonable caution and a due regard to the necessity of a proper provision for disposing of waste matter.

Chairmen of the Ways and Means Committee.

We give below a list of the Chairmen of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives for the past 32 years:

28th and 29th Congresses—John J. McKay, of North Carolina.
30th Congress—Samuel F. Vinton, of Ohio.
31st Congress—Thomas H. Bayley, of Virginia.
32d and 33d Congresses—George H. Houston, of Alabama.
34th and 35th Congresses—Lewis D. Campbell, of Ohio.
36th Congress—John Sherman, of Ohio.
37th and 38th Congresses—Thaddeus Stevens of Pennsylvania.
39th Congress—Justin S. Morrill, of Maine.
40th and 41st Congresses—Robt. C. Schenck, of Ohio.
42d and 43d Congresses—Henry S. Dawes, of Massachusetts.
44th Congress—William R. Morrison, of Illinois.

Keeping the Hands Smooth.

A writer in the American Grocer says that glycerine is not used in the right way. She says that to preserve the smoothness and softness of the hands, you should keep a small bottle of glycerine near the place where you habitually wash them, and whenever you have finished washing them, and before wiping them, put one or two drops of the glycerine on the wet palm, and rub the hands thoroughly with it, as if it were soap, then dry lightly with a towel. Household work and bad weather will not prevent your skin from being smooth and soft, if this plan of using glycerine is followed.

Happy Tramps.

Stamford, Conn., has a tramp house. On Monday of last week, the opening night, fifteen stragglers presented themselves. They were shown into a warm room, and soon after summoned to a substantial supper. Then they went back up-stairs, and made themselves comfortable around a hot stove. In the morning they were strengthened with bread and beef soup, and then given long-handled hammers, with which to demolish two loads of stone. Before 10 o'clock every stone was reduced to fragments and the tramps departed, most of them expressing themselves well satisfied.

The Catholic World, New York, declares its concurrence in President Grant's opposition to the appropriation of any portion of the public-school money for sectarian schools, but takes the ground that our public schools, as now generally taught, are already "sectarian," because Protestant, and this, it says, is what the Catholics complain of.

INDIANA ITEMS.

Bushels of fish are caught through the ice in the lakes at La Porte.

Fred. A. Goulding, of Crown Point, is a presumptive heir to a four million estate in England.

John Williamson, of Indianapolis, is minus $1,500 in money and $300 in diamonds. Pickpocket.

Rev. W. O. Pierce, of Winchester, has accepted the chair of Greek and Hebrew in the Illinois Wesleyan University at Bloomington.

Mrs. Gunkle, of New Albany, while washing windows in the second story of her residence, fell to the ground, a distance of fifteen feet, and was hurt beyond recovery.

Angola has adopted a new method of punishing scholars in their school department. It consists in tying the children's hair in a knot and hanging them to a nail in the wall.

South Bend is asked to take stock in a narrow gauge railroad project from Benton Harbor, Mich., via Berrien Springs, Buchanan and South Bend to Plymouth, Marshall County, this State.

On Tuesday evening of last week, after Mrs. James Holston, of Merom, Sullivan County, had filled the house lamp and placed it on the mantelpiece, it being lighted, a sudden jar brought it to the floor. The lady's clothing caught fire, and she was so badly burned that she died in a few hours.

The Rev. A. Walker, of Kokomo, has discovered a marble mine on Big Pike Creek, a short distance above the falls. He and four others have purchased it, thirty-four acres, for $2,000. They intend to open the quarry in the spring. It is said by those who have examined it that it is of the finest quality.

The report of the Secretary of State, which was filed recently, shows that, during the past year, there have issued from the office 4 proclamations, 61 warrants, 67 requisitions, 48 pardons, 36 remissions, 2 commutations, 130 commissions to Justices, 882 to Notaries Public, and 44 to Commissioners of Deeds. During the year 108 corporations have filed articles.

A gentleman arrived at Indianapolis the other evening over the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Railroad. Shortly afterward he missed his pocket-book, which contained $700 in cash and $6,200 in drafts. As soon as he discovered the fact he telegraphed the conductor of the car, who, with his porter, examined the berth where the man slept, and found the valuable pocket-book. The next night it was returned to the owner, much to his relief.

At Fort Wayne, one night last week, a young man named Schreck, bearing a very hard character, had some words with a bartender about payment for some drinks, during the course of which the bartender knocked Schreck down and beat him badly. The police took after Schreck, and, in order to get away he swam the river twice and the canal twice. His cold baths, with the injuries received at the hands of the bartender, caused his death a few hours afterward.

Col. Hunt, of Indianapolis, Supervisor of Internal Revenue for Ohio and Indiana, has received instructions from the Commissioner at Washington to consolidate the following districts in this State: The Second and Third into the Second, H. Woodbury retained as Collector, Ralph Hill dropped; the Sixth and Eighth into the Sixth, Fred Baggs retained, Simpson, of Lafayette, dropped; the Ninth and Tenth in to the Tenth, Geo. Moon retained, R. J. Chestnutwood dropped; the First and Seventh remain separate, with the Collector of the former and Gen. White of the latter. The consolidations are ordered next Saturday.

Further investigation into the matter of the burning of Mrs. Gordon and her three children, at Enterprise, leads to the belief that the woman and her children were murdered by some one unknown, and the bodies placed in the house and all consumed, for the purpose of concealing the crime. The object of the murder is supposed to have been to gain possession of a sum of money that Mrs. Gordon had in her house, being the proceeds of the sale of a cow and some farming implements. The barn was consumed, as well as the house, and the buildings were situated so far apart that it is believed that the burning of one would not have ignited the other.

The Superintendent of Public Instruction has made the apportionment of school revenue for tuition purposes. There are 667,736 school children enumerated in the State. The amount collected in the counties for disbursement is $732,133.38, and the amount apportioned $849,104.88, leaving a balance in the Treasury of $4,744.28. The annual report of the Trustees of the Normal School was also filed. There were 485 pupils at the institution proper during the year, beside 105 in the training school; total number enrolled in the Normal School since its organization 1,011, of whom 70 per cent. were children of farmers and 20 per cent. children of representatives of other industries. The financial and general condition of the school is pronounced satisfactory.

The State Teachers' Association convened at Roberts Park Church, Indianapolis, on Tuesday evening of last week. M. R. Barnard, President of the Indianapolis School Board, delivered a brief address of welcome, which was as briefly responded to by W. A. Janes, President of State Normal School, Terre Haute. George P. Brown, Superintendent of Public Schools in Indianapolis, and President-elect of the association, followed with an inaugural address. He spoke fifty minutes, delivering an able and elaborate effort on "Education in Indiana." D. E. Hunter was appointed Chairman of a committee to suggest amendments to the constitution and provide for a permanent Secretary of the association. Committees on resolutions and on the death of Prof. McNutt, late President of the State University, were also appointed.

The Treasurer of the State, B. C. Shaw, has submitted his annual report to the Governor. The total foreign debt of the State is $1,098,755.12, the character of the bonds due remaining precisely as reported in 1874. The domestic debt is $3,804,782.22, making a total debt of $5,008,538.34. The condition of the funds is as follows:

Balance in Treasury	$ 394,209.78
Common school fund deficit	10,391.64
Swamp land deficit	[illegible]
Total	$ [illegible]

Made up as follows:

General fund	$ 344,764.10
College	160,372.00
Surplus revenue	3,007.33
Three-per-cents	99.13
Estates without known heirs	4,012.85
Excess of bids, sinking fund	2,405.19
Total receipts for the year	$4,[illegible]
Balance in Treasury, Nov. 1, 1874	344,309.78

The histories of the 3 per cent. and college funds are given in detail. In speaking of the common-school fund, he shows that, instead of a deficit of $17,562 43, there should be $344,549.91 to its credit. The mistake arises from the confusion of accounts, notably in 1861 and 1862, and in 1873. How the error shall be corrected is left to the decision of the Governor and State officers.

A sad state of affairs prevails among the worshipers belonging to the German Lutheran Church of Michigan City. Some time ago the church called a clergyman from Germany to minister to the spiritual wants of the members of the flock, but his coming has been attended with dire results. He had officiated as pastor of the church but a short time when it became painfully evident to a portion of the congregation that his peculiar Old-World notions about managing a church would not answer in a free country, right in the sacred realms of Hoosierdom, in a city whose boundaries were washed by the waves of the great lake. On the other hand, another portion of the people were as strenuously devoted to their pastor, whom they had called all the way from Germany, and whom they didn't propose to call for nothing. Affairs progressed, increasing unpleasantness ensued, and no oil was thrown upon the troubled waters. The crisis came at last, and on Monday of last week, after a series of injunctions, the pastor's opponents were put in possession of the sanctuary by the Sheriff of Michigan City, and a man by the name of Schoenemann was left as custodian. He remained in the church Monday night and the following Tuesday, monarch of all he surveyed, and with no one to successfully dispute his rights. But Tuesday night there came a change, and with it a band of female parishioners, who, armed with little hatchets, burst open the doors, rushed in en masse, and, by their persuasive and wholly effective advances upon Schoenemann, hatchets in hand, succeeded in putting that individual to an ignominious flight. What is more, the women came prepared to stay. They had their luncheon, work-baskets, utensils for preparing tea, and other preparations wherewith to while away the time. The Sheriff was sought by the opponents of the clergyman, and efforts made to induce him to oust the suffragists; but that officer declined to get into any muss with the women, and no threats or promises could win him over. The ladies were in possession of the edifice at last accounts.

A Lover's Petition.

The St. Albans Advertiser says that the following epistle, asking the hand of one of the fair inmates of the poor house at Sheldon, Vt., was recently received by Mr. Kimpton, Overseer of the Poor, but, unfortunately, Mr. Kimpton is unable to decipher the signature, and, therefore cannot comply:

A Slight Mistake.

A young man in Olathe, Kan., who is particular about his washing, the other day wrote a note to his washerwoman, and one to his girl, and, by a strange fatality, put the wrong address on each envelope and sent them off. The washerwoman was well pleased at the invitation to take a ride the next day, but when the young lady read, "If you muss up my shirt bosom, and rub the buttons off my collar any more, as you did the last time, I will go somewhere else," she cried all the evening, and declares that she will never speak to him again.

The King of Beasts.

The Zeramna, an Algerian journal, gives a curious illustration of the nonchalance of the king of beasts. When the railroad train from Constantine to Philippeville was approaching the St. Charles station, four lions were observed on the track ahead. As the puffing locomotive drew nearer and the whistle gave them due warning of imminent peril, three slowly left the track and entered a neighboring brushwood, but the fourth and largest was so disdainfully slow in his movements that he barely escaped the wheel of the locomotive.

Responsibility of Rum-Sellers.

A Providence (R. I.) dispatch says: "The Coroner's jury at Westerly, in the case of the child who was killed by the kicks of a drunken father while in its mother's arms, have returned the verdict: That the person from whom the father purchased the liquor which made him drunk is guilty of murder. The father, Philip Gallagher, was held in $1,000 bail to answer before the Supreme Court."

In a review of the iron trade for 1774, Hupfeld remarks that in improvements in the manufacture of iron and steel, quantitative progress only has been made for the most part, the best example of which is in North America, where, for instance, at the works of Troy, New Jersey, and the Cambria Iron Works, Pennsylvania, an average of forty to forty-five charges is made in twenty-four hours, two converters producing close on 1,000,000 cwt. a year.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN INDIANA, JAN., 18th, 1876

The Cincinnati Commercial says Governer Hendricks is ahead as the Democratic candidate for the presidency.

Tuesday was the day set apart for Morton to lean on his crutch and wave his bloody shirt in the Senate. His Mississippi resolutions come up.

Governor Hayes was inaugurated this week. The "money which jingles will be distributed in a few weeks. You cant expect to have good times in a day.

We would really like to know whether Hon. Aaron F. Perry has Presidential aspirations. If he has no deep-set design of breaking into the White House, his friends who are filling him with desire are both indiscreet and unkind.

There is a probability that the Republican State convention which is called for the 22nd of Feburary next will not meet at the appointed time. The cause of this uncertain action by the Repub'ican leaders of Indiana is said to be the unsettled issues upon the financial question.

The friends of an Eastern Democratic candidate for the Presidency are industriously circulating the report that it is useless to think a candidate from Ohio, because the Democrats of that State are everlastingly and hopelessly torn to pieces; rent in twain, fighting like Montagues and Capulets, and, as it were slightly divided in opinion about the name of the candidate to be presented from Ohio. Now, what if this should turn out to be exactly not the truth?

Now we are fixed for the Centennial. Indiana is at the head of the list if we can only get this old couple to go to Philadelphia, for the oldest married couple in the world are believed to be in Montgomery county, Indiana. Their name is Fruits, they are 113 and 111 years old, respectively and have lived together 85 years The husband is a hale and hearty man, having never used tobacco; and the wife has been a tobacco smoker for 60 years, though she has been fighting a cancar for 40 years.

A great hue and cry is heard from the fat Republicans about the inhumanity of turning the poor wounded soldiers out of office at Washington, where the Democrats have a limited control of such matters. Of course, there must be some grievance found to howl about by the whining and croaking party of plunder, but this particularly effecting appeal is the vilest of humbugs Does any one forget that no poor, wounded soldier who was not also a shrieking bloody shirt Republican could never get an office? Where have the poor wounded Democratic soliers been all these years? Were there none of that description? Could one of them who voted a Democratic ticket get any attention, though he were covered with scars, mutilated of limbs and broken down by the hardships of Libby and Andersonville? Not at all It may be the time is coming when this forgotten veteran will feel a little practical sympathy. Who knows?

The Mormons.

A late domestic in Mormondom proves that Mormon women are just as womanly on the subject of conjugality as any of Eve's daughters of any age, or clime, or creed. There was a Catholic fair in Salt Lake city, and a prominent Mormon brother stole into it one night. The girls went for his purse with playfulness and pathos, and flattered him in all sorts of ways. He received numerous notes in loving terms, signed Rose, Fannie, Jennie, and ohter pet names. Brother B. went home light of heart and light of pocket. They had just literally cleaned him out skinned him alive but he had their nice notes to read. Fate always plays tricks with such a man. The next day he left his overcoat, with the negligent notes in it, at home, and his wife, or one of his wives, read them, and they filled her full of womanly wrath. When he returned to dinner the hair flew. It was a regular pitched battle; the woman being in the right, and armed strong in honesty, fortune favored her and Brother B. is now the baldest being in Brigham's kingdom. The outraged woman has actually sued for a divorce, all on account of Rose and Fannie and Jennie.

When we first commenced selling Teas there was very little sold in this place; the reason was they were sold so high that parties clubbed together and sent to New York to get their Teas because they could save 20c to 5 on the pound. This we have all challenged, we not only sell teas and sugars as cheap as they do in New York, but cheaper. The freight is but a trifle and our immense sales of 40 to 50 chests a month enables us to undersell all competitors. No 3 or 4 profits with us. No middle men to handle our goods. We purchase of the Imorters and sell direct to consumers, there saving our customers the profits of the Speculator, Jobber and Wholesale Merchant, which is at least 15 to 25 per cent.

Appointed.

Tom. C. Mays, proprietor of this paper, has been appointed Clerk, under the head of Public Buildings, &c., at Washington. Tom. has the ability and energy to win anything he undertakes, and has many warm friends in this county who are ready to extend a hearty shake on his receiving the above appointment.

W. L. Penfield, Esq., of Auburn, was in town last Monday and gave us the pleasure of a call. The very favorable acquaintance which Mr. Penfield has acquired with the bar in our county, we hope to see extend to his own advantage as well as that of our own good folks.—Angola Republican.

Two men were arrested at Garret last Tuesday, and are now stopping with our good-looking and entertaining landlord, Sheriff Moese. One of them for grand larceny, and the other for soliciting job work for the Fort Wayne "Sentinel" without authority.

Somebody took our "Garrett News" away last week, before we had time to read it, and now we inform that cheeky fellow right here, that if he ever does the like again we'll bounce him, the result of which will be, that he'll have to stand up to eat his meals for plum six weeks.

Hunters and others will bear in mind that the season for shooting turkey, pheasant, quail and rabbits expired the morning or the first of January, 1876. By the same statute the trapping of quail or selling or exposing for sale any of the above enumerated game became a fineable offense, on and after the first day of January.

The Squirrel Question.

A man out gunning spies a squirrel on the opposite side of a tree within thirty yards. As he goes round the tree the squirrel also travels around, and keeps upon the side opposit the man. Now, when the man gets around to the point where he started, has he been around the squirrel.

Mr Beckhoffer is selling the best smoking tobacco in the city, at a very reasonable price. Here is the place to buy tobaccos, cigars and pipes. He keeps nothing but the above articles, and when a speciality is made in one line of trade you can always get the best, and buy the cheapest.

T. M. Steevens, Esq., is making things lively in the grocery trade, at Cool's old stand, corner of Main and Seventh-sts. Our readers should bear in mind that this is the cheapest house in DeKalb county, and that they can get the cash for all kinds of country produce at regular market prices. See price list in another column.

What is the Matter?

Nobody has got killed by a railroad engine this week, and we can account for it no other way only that there has been some talk of organizing a temperance crusade band. This the Centennial year our Coronor will naturally expect an increase of business, but have patience, James, business will brighten up pretty soon. There is a general depression just now in all departments of trade not particularly confined to this locality.

Barbers Itch.

Our town is slightly affected with this terrible disease. We are informed from whence it came but reframe from publishing any names, as we have no inclination to hurt the business of any one in our conuty. We are certain that several shops in the city is entirely pure from anything of thiskind, and there are the reliable old establishments presided over by Sammy Pommert and Billy Edgerton.

POOR HOUSE.

The Commissioners last week visited the Poor Asylum, and concluded that John W. Wyatt, was not the right man in the right place, so they notified him to get up and git, and then hired Mr. Pattee a former superintendant to act as such for the remainder of the year, commencing last Monday. We understand that the Board gives Mrs. W. much credit for the part she performed, but that John don't know as much about farming as Greely did, so he had to a walk.

The Bible Cause.

Rev. C. H. Gasser, of Angola, has been employed by the DeKale County Bible Society auxiliary to the American Bible Society to canvass this county and is hereby authorized to collect funds and transact business for this Society.

As he has canvassed this county twice heretofore with perfect satisfaction to all concerned, we are glad to secure his services again and with confidence we cheerfully recommend him to your favorable consideration.

The bachelor locals of the South Band dailies, without the terrors of leap year before their vision perambulate the street of the city in search of items, just the same as was their wont last year. But the old bachelor editors scarce dare roll up their window blinds for fear the sun shine of some fair maiden's contenance may dazzle their weary eyes and they be led blindly forth to the altar to offer their hearts as a sacrifice to the attractive quivers of Cupid's darts.

SMASH UP.

As the gravel train was running through Mark Center, last week on the B. & O., at the rate of 20 miles an hour the section boss altered the switch, which had but one end connected to the main road, and the train jumped off, smashing the cars up in a bad shape. The train men all jumped except the engineer, who received light injuries. The engineers name was Sam'l Matter, a brave boy, fireman, Thos. Armstrong, conductor, Chas. Travis; brakemen, Andrew Burch, Nelson Thomas.

A Gold Headed Cane.

Yesterday Mr. Weamer, of the "Republican," was presented a valuable gold-headed cane, from the business men of this city, in respect for the local notices received by them through his paper during the holidays. We are glad his friends made this present, as it shows how much they appreciated his kindness. Mr. W. published a very good paper, the week spoken of, and if all could know the brain work connected with such an issue, they would have had a good head on both ends of that cane.

Fire at Waterloo.

Last Monday morning at an early hour, the Star Flouring Mill, at Waterloo, was discovered to be on fire, in the third story of the building. There had been no fire since the Sunday previous, and many rumors are afloat as to its origin. Some think it was set on fire, and others that it was a spontanious combustion, the same as our Woolen Mills. The building and its contents were about all destroyed, making a heavy loss for the proprietors. This is the first fire happening to our neighbors for sometime and we hope will be the last one for a long time to come.

It is a strange story that comes from Clumbus, Ohio. A counterfeit nickel factory has been unearthed within the walls of the State penitentiary. The manufacture of bogus five-cent pieces has been going on for a long time uninterruptedly, the material used being the amalgam used in the harness shop for plating purposes. It is not known how much of the "queer" these enterprising convicts succeeded in pushing off upon the outside world but it has been considerable. Think of a counterfeiting establishment in a State penitentiary!

A Lawyers Suit.

Three days of last week was by Esq. Walborn and a jury of twelve men occupied in the trial of a cause involving a question of interest alike to attorneys and clients. A note for $100 was given for advice and fees to the plaintiffs by parties in failing circumstances at Garrett. The makers of the note claim that the attorneys advised them to give their property over to the creditor. The makers of the note claimed that the note was ilegal and the advice given was bad. The jury, after three days patience, brought in a verdict against the validity of the note.

NOTICE.

Parties that are intending to build the coming season, and wish to get their material together early, will find it a great advantage by ordering direct from our Mills in Michigan, which we will furnish at jobing rates. Our object is to reduce our stock in Michigan, to make room for winter cut. Having in stock now at the mills three and one half million feet dry lumber of all grades, aside from a large stock of lath and shingles, which we shall offer at bottom prices. Dressed lumber of all discriptions.

Orders left at the company's office in Auburn, will be filled promptly. Office on South Jackson street.

Reflect, Young Man.

When will young men learn to be prudent? Why will they provoke the ire of even a mother-in-law, as was the case recently in our city. She went after him, found him playing cards, and he didn't want to go. A billiard cue was brought into requisition and as the old lady was not an expert at the fascinating game of the ivories, she used the heavy end to punch him with If she had been a proficient manipulator of the balls she would have chosen a light stick but as she didn't understand the nursing science, her stick was heavy and she used it more like a flail than otherwise. The push stroke seemed to be a favorite one with her, and the young husband was pushed clear out of doors rather than be driven into a six by two pocket. Youny man if you are sought after by an irate female, and found be sure that there are no broomsticks, billiard cues or other weapons of warfare including a wagging tongue handy, before you brave a resistance.

The midnight Centennial celebration at Warsaw was attended with a sad accident. A premature discharge of a cannon at the sixth round blew off both arms of Stephen Philpot and lacerated a thumb for Lewis B. Frank, The arms of Mr. Philpot were soon after amputated below the elbow.

MUSIC.

MISS M McCUTCHAN, teacher of instrumental music, harmony and thorough bass, is prepared to give instruction in music in a thorough and practical manner. For further information call at the residence of E. D. Hartman, near the Eel River depot.

If you wish to buy clothing call at Laufferty's where goods are cheap, in Hebel's new brick store. A. Laufferty.

Business Prospects,

Every careful observer of the business interests of the country, predicts a very material revival of trade during the coming season. The monentary crisis has evidently spent its force; the people have about recovered from the shock occasioned by the crash of business structures erected upon foundations of sand, and there is such an abundance of surplus products in the cuntry that a good season's trade seems inevitable. Greater caution will be observed on the part of business men, and this is desirable, since it will restore confidence. The business of the coming season may not equal that of 1875 in magnitude, but it will be more beneficial to the country and less disastrous to individuals. The outlook is exceedingly encouraging and croakers had better find some other employment.

A Predicament.

The other day a lady at the lower end of town stepped over to one of her neighbors on an errand. While there one of her neighbr's little girls announced that visitors were at the door She being in her work dress, beat a hasty retreat. To her dismay she found that the back door was locked and the key could not be found. Nothing could be done but to face the music. At last a happy thought struck her mind, just as the visitors were coming in at the front door she rushed into the bed-room and raised the window to crawl through, she got about half way through when the window came down on her back kerchug. She couldn't get in or out, but hung there the perfect picture of distress. At last she made a lung forward and out she came, bringing the sash with her. She went through the back yard in about three seconds, leaving her neighbors to explain matters the best they could. If you want to see a woman get mad, just say bed-room window to her.

PERSONAL.

—J. J. Littlefield, of Adrain, Mich., was in the city several days last week.

—Ade Hare has returned to this place again, after a short stay in Ohio.

—Lyman Jackman and wife are visiting friends in Bucyrus, Ohio.

—We notice Mrs. L. Jackman on our streets again, after a long illness.

—Joel Latson is slinging change over Beards counter.

—The wife of Mr. Jno. Swanders is about recovering from a long illness.

—Mr. Ruff, who has been with R. H. Weamer, for some time, has gone to Angola, and with Mr. Wiseman will start a paper at the above place.

—Billy Humes has retired from the Boot & Shoe establishment of J. E. Woodford.

—Seeme Rainier has "drapped" the 'bus business.

—Charley Welch, son of Rev. Mr. Welch, who has been away from town for some time, returned this week.

—Frank Broach, of Kendallville, was in the city yesterday, arranging documents to establish a fire insurance company in this county.

From Angola.

—Angola is to have another paper. It will be known as the Granger Beacon.

—Peter Russel has returned from York State.

—There was a game of draw-poker played at Smith's bakery Wednesday eve. I am informed that Smith won the game by bending an iron poker over Harvy Attens' head.

W. H. Willis has bought out the grocery store formerly owned by John Leach.

Sunday morning the fire alarm was given. The fire was in the store room of Crocket & Sowel, part of the sleepers cornice and two holes in the floor above being burned through. Dry goods nearly all damaged or burned. A large am't of credit is due our fire company who undoubtly saved us from having a terrible fire.

—Rain all day Sunday with frequent thunder showers.

—Plowing was going on every day last week by our farmers; but they dont plow to-day.

—Everybody put up your ice as soon as thick enough. Eight inches is just the right thickness.

—The Babcock Fire Extinguisher did well at our fire. You can work them where you can't get water to do good.—You can mow your way through smoke and flames with them.

ANGOLA.

That Cane Notoriety.

Some of our citizens who desired to present a cane to our neighbor of the "Republican," became a little huffy because we published an article last week on the subject of, "cheap notoriety."—Now, we have this to say, that we intend to do that which they claim in Mr. Weamer, to be independent and speak our opinion as we please, and publish well written articles on proper subjects from respectable sources. We have naught against Mr. W. and when the truth is known he will say that we respect him and extend as many courtesies to him as those who got so "windy." We are glad to have such a neighbor, glad that he is appreciated, glad that he is working for our town and county.—We are not jealous of him for there is enough for both of us to do, and if we are to have a republican editor in our midst, of all whom we know we would rather have our neighbor still—for fear of getting worse. A majority of the contributors were anxious to have W. H. Dills, Esq., a former editor of this place, to make the presentation speech, but somehow Dills was'nt woolly enou'h for them and when he found there was objection to him from a few, he declined as any gentleman should have done. Mr. D. has furnished us with the first few lines of his intended speech, which he had prepared when informed of the disaffection. We give it to show how he appreciated Mr. W. as well as a copy for the one that will be given:

Mr. Weamer—For sometime a large number of our citizens, business and professional men, all classes and kinds have had their minds eye directed to you and they have chosen me to impart to you the opinion they entertain of you for your unexampled course and conduct for the short period you have been in our midst. Only a short year ago you dropped down in our midst, scarcely anyone knew from whence, some though the appearance pretended evil or some vile calamity; others, more charitably inclined, had misgivings and doubts, but now, sir, we notice that your name is on almost everyones lips, and your works and doings are in almost every house, office and store in the county. This we call unexampled, such a thing was never done here before, in fact it was unthought of a year ago and the idea of such a course of conduct on your part, sir, would have been scented with decision and as absolutely preposterous Here, unheralded you came to our peaceable and quiet city—here with our three lines of railways, crossing in every direction, our brick blocks, rich farming community, brave an intelligent men and beautiful women—all this we had a year ago with nary a book agent, and we thought we were happy, thought we had the free measure of the blessings of God and man. Here, in the complete enjoyment of these you have been assiduously at work night and day, unceasingly and unfiringly, regardless of the opinion and feelings of others, unless in consonance with those of your own imperical self. In fact, you have paid an utter disregard to the previous example and course of those who have proceeded you in the same line of business, and with a high and strong arm and hand have pretened to do just as you pleased and that every time has pleased us.—Here you struck your tent, molded our forms, shot us with your quill and pencil, pressed us with delight, slung ink in our faces, and raising right here in our midst a veritable devil.

Stove-pipe Time Again.

Smithers, lives on "Ensley Avenue." The other day his better half requested him to put up the stove in the parlor. He muttered something about stoves being in gunies, but went to the barn for the pipe. He got it, and in putting it together knocked all the skin off of his knuckels. This was too much for Smithers. He let fly at the pipe with a stick of wood, but missed it, and killed a little bull-pup that he was raising for a watch dog. Then Mrs. Smithers got mad and called him off with the broom stick and fire-shovel. He went back to the pipe to raise it and fasten it with wire. He placed one chair on another and climbed to the top, his wife steadying them for him. He fooled around and stepped on her fingers. She give a howl of mingled rage and pain, and let go of the chairs. Smithers and stove pipe came down with a crash, knocking china vases, flower stand and glass boxes into "the middle of next week." He is now going around with his head and hands tied up, and his better half is pining away over her lost vases. The pipe isn't up yet, nor is it likely that it ever will be; because Smithers swears that he will see it in "Yuba Dam" before he touches it again.

Catarrh.—If you would avoid being rendered deaf, or unfit to mingle in society, on account of foul and nauseating discharges from gangrenous ulcers in the head, use Dr. Dutcheon's celebrated Catarrh Remedy. It is the greatest cure and control for this hideous destroyer, the world ever saw. It will save every life threatened by it. It immediately arrests its progress, and if perseveringly used, will never disappoint in a cure. Go to Davenport's Drug Store, and get a sample bottle free. Sept. 30 y

Is Your Life Worth 10 Cents.

SICKNESS prevails everywhere, and everybody complains of some disease during their life.—When sick, the object is to get well; now we say plainly that no person in this world that is suffering with Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint and its effects, such as Indigestion, Costiveness, Sick Headache, Sour stomach, Heart-burn, Palpitation of the Heart, Depressed Spirits, Biliousness, &c. can take GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER without getting relief and cure. If you doubt this, go to your Druggist and get a sample bottle for ten cents, and try it. Regular size 75 cents. Two doses will relieve you.

Stop that Cough.

No pulmonary complaint however obstinate, can resist the healing influence of Dr. Morris' Syrup of Tar, Wild Cherry and Horehound.—Nothing that we have ever sold acts so promptly and effectually in coughs, colds, hoarseness, sore throat, asthma and all diseases of the throat lungs and chest, leading to consumption. It is a certain cure for Hooping Cough and Croup. Contains no opium and is pleasant to take. Cough worn victims whose lungs are racked and torn with paroxysms that threatened to choke them, find speedy relief in its use. Trial size 10 cents. Ask for Dr. Morris' Syrup take no other. F. B. Spencerville Items.

Spencerville, Jan. 10, 1876.

—We will not say that the "roads are muddy" for its too cold.

—Nothing of special importance has happened since my last.

—We do not desire any one to commit suicide, or to murder any person to create a sensation, but we do desire that some one would desist from murdering the truth, or at least of expanding it to a hundred degrees beyond its bounds. Nothing can be more obnoxious in society. Private reporters of the mush and milk supper, as well as a few others please ponder, for the Good Book tells us that a liar can never enter the kingdom.

—Prof. Mulkins of Huntington, is in town conducting a writing school. Prof. Mulkins is a master of the art, as a penman we have never seen his equal. We understand he intends to visit Auburn before long.

—The instaliation of the officers of Spencerville Lodge I. O. O. F., No. 422, took place on last Thursday evening. D. C. Butler was installed N. G., Wm. C. Tyndall, V. G., S. A. Bishop, Recording Sec'y, M. F. Bishop, Permanent Sec'y and E. W. Erick Treasurer.

—Wes. Zimmerman will soon have his mill in running order.

—Our friend Kugey and wife, have moved to their new home and are happy and the talk is that others ere long expect to be so, too. S.

BUTLER ITEMS.

Butler, Jan. 11, 1876.

—Miss Sake Ochs is home.

—E. L. Fosdick returned to college last Thursday.

—Alex Paine is improving in health.

—Mr. Vesey of La Grange is visiting his son Geo E. Vesey the dentist.

—Miss Libbie Arford is spending vacation at her home near Butler. She expects to return to Westerville, Ohio, about the 23rd.

—The Odd Fellows installation was well attended by other lodges. Bryan Edgerton, Waterloo and Auburn participated. The supper at the Waverly House and the party at Ballingers Hall were both said to be enjoyable.

—The Directors,—among them Vanderbilt, of the Canada Southern and Lake Shore Roads, held a meeting at Toledo, last week and decided that Butler should be the South-western terminus of the Canada Southern road. The surveyors are daily expected.

—Rev. Lenz of Edgerton visits Butler twice a week now. He is preparing the children of N. F. Gengnagel, Geo. Hensler, Geo. Reigel, A. May and several other German families residing out of town, to be confirmed. The ceremony will take place the week before Easter.

—The "Butler Review" will appear next week. Mr. Sherwood has rented the room beneath Ballingers Hall for a printing room. The attempts to discourage him have had a contrary effect and now we are really to have a news paper.

COMSUMPTION CURED.

AN old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by and East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy, for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a conscientious desire to relieve human suffering, he will send free of charge to all who desire it, this receipt with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Sent by return mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper.

THE CONTENTED MAN.

BY MARC ANTOINE DESAUGIERS

Mortals, you who curse your lot
(Some who curse it ought to bless)
Come to see me in my cot,
Learn the way to happiness,
Wisely will your time be lent—
He knows of a plan,
This singular man,
Ever to be content.

In a garret mean and small,
Here I live on fortune's brink;
Hope, my income and my all,
Yet 'tis comfort still to think
Some their very hope have spent—
He knows of a plan,
This singular man,
Ever to be content.

You who growl and groan, because,
Years speed on and rob your prime,
Comfort take; by nature's laws
We grow bald; but with the time
Ripeness is to claret lent—
He knows of a plan,
This singular man,
Ever to be content.

Sunshine all the year is sweet;
Does it rain? 'Tis good for crops.
Does it freeze? Then, how we eat!
Does it thaw? The winter stops.
Spring will come and cold be spent—
He knows of a plan,
This singular man,
Ever to be content.

Come rheumatics? well—they're vile.
Here I lie upon the bed;
Still, no business for awhile;
No more visits to be paid.
One can breathe although one's bent—
He knows of a plan,
This singular man,
Ever to be bontent.

If I had to die to-night,
"Health to Death!" and send it round—
"Me be spares"—so would I write—
"Ills in age so often found,
Wits and health, and fortune spent."
He knows of a plan,
This singular man,
Ever to be content.

MARK TWAIN AT NIAGARA FALLS.

Niagara Falls is one of the finest structures in the world. I have been visiting this favorite watering-place recently for the first time and was well pleased.

A gentleman who was with me said it was customary to be disappointed in the falls; but that subsequent visits were sure to set that all right. He said that it was so with him. He said that the first time he went hack fares were so much higher than the falls that the falls appeared insignificant. But that is all regulated now.

The hackmen have been tamed, numbered, and placarded, and blackguarded into subjection to the law, and dosed with moral principle till they are as meek as missionaries.

They are divided into two clans now, the Regulars and the Privateers, and employ their idle time in warning people against each other. The regulars are under the hotel banners and the privateers prowl darkly on neutral ground and pick off stragglers at half price.

But there are no more outrages and extortions. That sort of thing cured itself. It made the falls unpopular by getting into the newspapers, and whenever a public evil achieves that sort of success for itself its days are numbered.

It became apparent that either the falls had to be discontinued or the hackmen had to subside. They could not dam the fall, so they did the hackmen. One can be comfortable and happy there now.

I drank up most of the American Falls before I learned that the waters were not considered medicinal. Why are people left in ignorance this way? I might have gone on and ruined a fine property, merely for the want of a little information.

And yet the sources of information are not meager at Niagara Falls. You are something in doubt what you ought to do, but you are seldom in doubt concerning what you must do. If an infant can read, that infant is measurably safe in Niagara.

If you room at the hotel you will find your course marked out in the most convenient way, by means of placards on the wall like these:

"Pull the bell-rope gently, but don't jerk."

"Bolt your door."

"Don't scrape matches on the walls or furniture."

"Turn off your gas when you retire."

"Tie up your dog."

"If you put your boots outside the door they will be blacked, but the house will not be responsible for their return."

This is a confusing and tanglesome proposition, because it moves you to deliberate long and painfully as to whether it will really be any object to you to have your boots blacked unless they are returned.

"Give your key to the omnibus driver if you forget and carry it off with you."

Outside the hotel, wherever you wander, you are intelligently assisted by the signs. You cannot come to grief as long as you are in your right mind with so many instructions to keep track of. For instance:

"Keep off the grass."

"Don't climb the trees."

"Hands off the vegetables."

"Don't hitch your horses to the shrubbery."

"Visit the Cave of the Winds."

"Have your portrait taken in your carriage."

"Forty per cent. in gold levied on all peanuts and other Indian curiosities purchased in Canada."

"Photographs of the falls taken here."

"Visitors will please notify the Superintendent of any neglect on the part of employes to charge for commodities." (No inattention of this kind is observed.)

"Don't throw stones down; there might be people below." "The proprietors will not be responsible for parties who jump over the falls." (More shirking of responsibility—it appears to be the prevailing failing here.)

I always had a high regard for the signers of the Declaration of Independence, but now they do not really seem to amount to much along with the signers of Niagara Falls.

To tell the truth the multitude of signs annoyed me. It was because I noticed at last they were prohibiting the very thing I was just wanting to do.

I desired to roll on the grass; the sign prohibited it. I longed to smoke; a sign prohibited it. And I was just in the act of throwing a stone over to pulverize such parties as might be picnicking below, when a sign I have just mentioned forbade that. Even that satisfaction was denied me, and I was a friendless orphan.

There was no resource now but to seek consolation from the flowing bowl. I drew my flask from my pocket, but it was all in vain. A sign confronted me, which said:

"No drinking allowed on these premises."

On that spot I might have perished of thirst but for the saving words of an honored maxim that flitted through my memory at that moment: "All signs fail in dry times." Common law takes precedence of the statutes. I was saved.

The noble red man had always been a darling of mine. I loved to read about him in tale and legend and romance.

I loved to read of his inspired sagacity, and of his love of the wild, free life of mountain and forest, and his grand truthfulness; his hatred of treachery, and his general nobility of character, and his stately metaphorical speech, and his chivalric love for the dusky maiden, and the picturesque pomp of his dress and accouterments.

When I found the shops at Niagara Falls full of dainty beadwork and stunning moccasins, and equally stunning toy figures representing human beings who carried their weapons in holes bored in their arms, and bodies shaped like a pie, I was filled with emotion. I knew that now I was going to come face to face with the noble red man.

A lady clerk in the shop told me, indeed, that all her grand array and made by the Indians, and there were plenty about the falls, and that they were friendly, and that it would not be dangerous to speak to them.

I came upon a camp of them gathered in the shade of a great tree, making moccasins, and addressed them in the following language of friendship:

"Noble Red Men, Brave Grand Sachem, War Chiefs, Squaws, and High-you-Nuck-a-Mucks, the pale face from the land of the setting sun greets you! You, Beneficent Polecat, you, Devourer of Mountains, you, Roaring Thundergust—the pale face from beyond the great waters greets you all!

"War and pestilence has thinned your ranks and destroyed your once proud nation. Poker and seven-up and a vain modern expense for soap unknown to your glorious ancestors have depleted your purses. Appropriating in simplicity the property of others has gotten you into trouble. Misrepresenting facts in your sinless innocence has damaged your reputation with the soulless usurper. Trading with forty-rod whisky to enable you to get drunk and happy and tomahawk your families has played the everlasting mischief with the picturesque pomp of your dress, and here you are in the broad light of the nineteenth century, gotten up like the ragtag and bobtail of the purlieus of New York! For shame! Remember your ancestors! Recall their mighty deeds! Remember Uncas! and Red Jacket! and Hole-in-the-Day! and Horace Greeley! Emulate their achievements! Unfurl yourselves under my banner, noble savages, illustrious gutter-snipes——"

"Down wid him!"

"Scalp the blaggard!"

"Hang him!"

"Dhrown him!"

It was the quickest operation that I ever saw. I simply saw a sudden dash in the air of clubs, brick-bats, fists, bead-baskets, and moccasins—a single flash, and they all appeared to hit me at once and no two in the same place.

In the next instant the entire tribe was upon me. They tore all the clothes off of me; they broke all my arms and legs; they gave me a thump that dented the top of my head till it would hold coffee like a saucer; and then to crown their disgraceful proceedings and add insult to injury they threw me over the Horseshoe Fall, and I got wet.

About ninety-nine or a hundred feet from the top the remains of my vest caught on a projecting rock, and I was almost drowned before I could get loose.

I finally fell and brought up in a world of foam at the foot of the fall, whose celled and bubbly masses towered up several inches above my head.

Of course I got into the eddy. I sailed round and round it forty-four times, chasing a chip and gaining on it—each round trip a half mile—reaching the same bush on the bank forty-four times, and just missing it by a hair's breadth every time.

At last a man walked down and sat down close to that bush, and put a pipe in his mouth and lit a match, and followed me with one eye and kept the other on the match while he sheltered it in his hands from the wind. Presently a puff of wind blew it out.

The next time I swept around him he said:

"Got a match?"

"Yes—in my other vest. Help me out, please."

"Not for Joe."

When I came around again I said:

"Excuse the seemingly impertinent curiosity of a drowning man, but will you explain this singular conduct of yours?"

"With pleasure. I am the Coroner. Don't hurry on my account. I can wait for you. I wish I had a match."

"Take my place and I'll get you one," I said.

He declined. This lack of confidence on his part created a coolness between us, and from that time forward I avoided him.

It was my idea in case anything happened to me to so time the occurrence as to throw my custom into the hands of the opposition Coroner over on the American side.

At last a policeman came along and arrested me for disturbing the peace by yelling for help.

The Judge fined me. But I had the advantage of him. My money was with my pantaloons, which were with the Indians.

Thus I escaped. I am now lying in a very critical condition. At least I am lying any way—critical or not.

I am hurt all over, but I cannot tell the extent yet, because the doctor is not done taking the inventory.

He will make out my manifest this evening. However, thus far, he thinks only six of my wounds are fatal. I don't mind the others.

Upon regaining my right mind I said:

"It is an awfully savage tribe of Indians that do the beadwork and mocassins for Niagara Falls, Doctor. Where are they from?"

I shall not be able to finish my remarks about Niagara Falls until I get better.

TIGER JIM.

Old Job Dawson had been duly elected to fill the responsible position of a Justice of the Peace, and this was the first case that had demanded his attention. Job was an old veteran mountaineer, and had lived in the shadow of the lofty peaks hunting, trapping and fighting Indians, to use his own words, "sence Adam war a kid." In that rough region an accusation of a great crime against any one is but a forerunner of a "hanging bee;" and a trial even is seldom thought of. But in the present instance a wild "cuss" who had been frequenting the settlements had appropriated a "broncho" (Indian pony) belonging to a neighboring ranchman, and had been pursued, captured and brought back. Old Job was summoned to try the culprit, and a spot in the rocky gulch near the 'Squire's cabin was selected as the site for the investigation. A motley crowd of hunters, trappers, miners and rancheros had assembled. Some were lying upon the ground and others sitting upon the rocks, all anxiously awaiting the 'Squire's coming. Job soon came from toward the cabin, and with a dignified air seated himself upon a bowlder, took off his bear-skin cap, and said:

"Fellers, the Court are ready to git down to biz, an' I want ye all to cheese yer racket an' let up on that chin music according to law. Throw yer ha'r in sight and pay 'tention to the Court."

Every hat came off at his command, and "His Honor," glancing around the circle, said:

"Whar is the dam cuss?"

Three mountaineers, armed with Henry rifles and six-shooters, stepped forward with the thief, a young man, wearing a bold, devil-may-care expression. His hands were securely fastened behind his back with buckskin thongs. Clad in buckskin from head to foot, he presented a picturesque appearance as he faced the 'Squire.

"W'at do they call you when yer at home?" asked the Court.

"Ain't got enny home, leastways in these parts," sullenly replied the prisoner.

"Ain't, hey? Well, w'at's the name you tuk w'en you left the States, then?"

"The boys hyer on the hills call me Tiger Jim."

"Wall, Tige, yer spotted as a hoss thief, an' I reckon thar's sumthin' in it or the boys wudn't a brought you in. You can't expect a toney trial like you'd git down to Laramie or eny of them towns along the road. We hevn't any paper, pens or ink, or eny o' that sort o' foolishness up hyer in the hills, an' thar ain't one o' us as could engineer 'em ef we had, so we'll jist grind her through, an' do the best we kin for you. In the name o' the law I now ax you did you collar that horse—but stop 'er rite thar, doggone it, I forget to swar you. Cum mitey near forgittin' it. Hold up yer right han'!"

"Hold up nuthin'. How kin I when they'r tied titer'n blazes?"

"That's so. Yer k'rect, Tiger, but gess eny member o' the body'll be 'cordin to law in 'xtreme cases. Stedy him a little, fellers, so's he kin hold up his right foot."

"Tige" raised his moccasin-covered foot while a guard on each side held him in position.

"Now, then, I ain't fly on them ar lawyers' affydavits, but I'll make her stout enuff to hold a Mexican mule. Tiger Jim, do you swar by the holy Moses, accordin' to the laws of Wyoming Territory, thet every time ye chip into my racket ye'll give us the squar truth. An ef you don't do you hope that ye may git chawed up by a grizzly, chopped to pieces by Sioux, strung up to a pine with a rope 'roun' yer dam thievin' neck an' fail to connect on heaven w'en yer lite goes out, to the best o' yer understandin' as provided by law, s'help yer God, eh?"

"That's jist what I does, pardy."

"Now, Tige, yer under oath, an' ev'ry time yer speak yer want to hit the bull's eye. Did you nip thet hoss?"

"Wall, Uncle Job, there's no use o' lying about it, an' I'll tell you jist how it war. Las' night you know thar war a jamboree over to Al Wilkins' ranche in Miller's gulch an' I war thar. Al had been to Laramie City and got a keg o' good old budge, an' we all got purty full. Arter the dancin war over I pulled out fur Bowles' ranche, whar I'm hangin' out, an' as I was staggerin' down round Mountain Cat Hill I runs right onto the broncho that war picketed out in the grass, an' I war jist drunk enough to mount him an' lite out. I know I'm goin' to swing fur it an' I'll die game, too. I aint woth a cuss anyway, an' if it warn't fur my good old mother back in the States (here the tears began to roll down his bronzed cheeks) who never closes her eyes 'thout prayin' for God to send me back to her, I'd laugh at death, an' help ye to fix the rope; but when I think o' that darling old soul I git weaker n'a wounded antelope. I tell ye fellers I've bin a tuff cuss ever sence I struck out fur these mountins, and I s'pose the world'll be better 'thout me in it. My old mother'll suffer, I know that, fur I'm her only kid, an' hev sent her every ounce o' dust thet I could spare, an' it's all she's hed to live on. She's been a good 'un to me, God bless her, an' I'm sorry I hevn't lived so's I can camp with her up thar (raising his tearful eyes toward Heaven), and, boys, won't some o' ye write to her. Tom Kirk thar knows whar she lives, an' tell her I got let out by an Injun, or pegged out nat'rally. For God's sake don't let her know I war strangled. The news 'ud kill her. But then I'll cheese this gab or ye'll think I'm weakening, an the man don't live as can skeer Tiger Jim. Elevate me, boys, jist as quick as ye please. I'm ready when you are."

During this recital Jim's eyes were filled with tears, and a close observer would have detected silent weeping on all sides. That magic word "mother" had awakened tender recollections in the breasts of every one of those hardy mountaineers. Men who could face death in any shape without a particle of feeling did not try to hide their tears at the mention of that sacred name, mother! How sweet it sounded in their ears. It carried them back to the happy days in the past, when they were blessed with the love of parents before the insatiable thirst for gold had led them into these mountain wilds. Not a word was spoken for a few seconds, and then old Job drew his horny hand across his watery eyes and said in a husky voice:

"Tige, ye w'udn't break an oath, w'ud ye?"

"No, Job Dawson, not for friend or foe. Thar ain't a boy in the hills as can say thet Jim ever went back on even his given word. I'm a rough 'un an' do sum mitey wicked things, but when I say a thing ye can gamble every dollar you've got on it bein' straight."

"Well, Tige, we had intended to swing ye, an' ye deserve swingin' but I can't get rid o' that 'mother' chinin' ye give us. I 'spect the old lady's set her heart on seein' ye agin, an' is wearin' her old eyes out lookin' for ye. I've got an old mother myself, an' tho' I hevn't sot eyes on her sence '49 her picter's right hyar in my heart, an' it's a pleadin' for your old 'coman, Tige. It's ruff, Tige, ruff, an'—lemme see—yes, darned ef I don't do it. Jack, cut them ar strings so's he can git his han's loose. Thar, that's it. Now, Tige, hold up yer right hand, and ef ever ye swore strong do it now. Do you swar by the great God, and yer blessed old mother, that ef this Court discharges ye ye'll lite right out for the States, an' go hum to the old lady an' love her an' comfort her as long as she stays out o' heaven. Do ye swar to this, Tige, before Almighty God and this court?"

"I do, Job, an' thar's my fist on it. Put 'er thar. I swar it an'll pull stakes rite off."

"Then ye're released on them terms, an' the boys'll help ye git yer traps down to the station, but mind, I tell ye, Tige, ef yer ever caught in the hills agin ye'll go up a tree. Fellers, the court's over an' the prisoner's discharged."—M. Quad.

Stanley's Revenge.

Do you remember now the New York Herald's brave African explorer, H. M. Stanley, was snubbed by the Royal Geographical Society when he first came to England—how they wouldn't credit his statements, and privately didn't believe that he'd ever seen Livingstone? If you don't, I do; and I remember Stanley's indignation. That is about two years ago. Now we have the reverse of the medal, and if Stanley wanted the best sort of revenge he has got it. A few nights ago Africa's most illustrious travelers gathered around the President of the Royal Geographical Society to chant Stanley pæans and to discourse upon the lake which the intrepid American has now definitely placed upon the chart. Col. Grant, the friend and companion of Speke, read a paper founded on Stanley's work; Sir Samuel Baker followed Col. Grant; Capt. Baker followed Sir Samuel Baker, and one and all paid tribute to the man in whom none of them believed. Is it not a triumph, and ought not James Gordon Bennett to feel a glow of pride in thinking that to his brilliant inspiration is due the most important African discoveries that have yet been made? I wish, however, he had not taken any one into partnership in this business. He ought to have had all the glory for himself and America. "Our joint commissioner" is not half as satisfactory a spectacle as "Commissioner for the New York Herald" only. I've an idea that Mr. Bennett will not be quite so magnanimous when he next sends forth an explorer to discover the unknown.—Kate Field, in the Louisville Courier-Journal.

William Lloyd Garrison as a Compositor.

On Friday morning last an elderly gentleman entered our office and said it was his birthday. He was 71 years old. Fifty years ago, on the 10th of December, 1825, he had attained his majority and finished his apprenticeship as a compositor in this office, having served seven years and two months. He wished to celebrate the anniversary by setting up matter where he had learned the mystery of printing, and to see if his hand had forgotten its cunning. A case and stick were accordingly furnished him, but the copy he selected himself, "My Psalm," by Whittier. The gentleman proved to be a rapid and correct compositor; in fact, no errors could be discovered in his proof. His name is tolerably well known in the world. It is William Lloyd Garrison. At the time when Mr. Garrison was the oldest apprentice in the Herald office, Joseph B. Morse was the youngest, and while the matter was being set Mr. Morse came in and met his old fellow-workman celebrating his semi-centennial. William Lloyd Garrison is a native of Newburyport, and was educated in its common schools.—Newburyport (Mass.) Herald.

Foolish Litigation.

Six years ago Messrs. Wolcott, Johnson & Co., of Freehold, N. J., sold to Lewis D. Mount, a farmer, a twenty-five-cent package of what they represented as seed that would produce excellent early turnips. The seed brought forth late turnips and of such poor quality that Mr. Mount was compelled to feed them to his cattle. Mr. Mount sued for damages before a Justice of the Peace, and was granted a judgment of $99 damages. The plea of the defendants was that they had purchased the seed under the impression that it was first-class, and having paid the ordinary price no fraud was intended. Appeals were taken to the Supreme Court, and then to the Court of Appeals, and these all affirmed the original decision of the Justice of the Peace. In the suit, $10,000 damages in legal expenses have been paid.

SHOCKING TRAGEDY.

A Husband Kills a Vixenish Wife and then Commits Suicide.

The parties, Mr. and Mrs. Ritter, were a middle-aged couple who had long been residents of Flatbush. They were people in comfortable circumstances, and among the most respectable in the locality. Mrs. Ritter was a leading member of the Methodist Church, and an ardent worker in the cause of her society. Her husband was attendant on and a believer in the doctrines of the Reformed Church, although not a communicant. This difference in religious belief was a constant bone of contention between the husband and wife, and led, indirectly, to the double crime of last week. The night previous to the murder and suicide there was a Methodist prayer meeting at the house of a neighbor, and Mrs. Ritter, who [illegible] great anxiety for her husband's soul, wanted him to attend the meeting with her. He declined, and she went away alone, highly displeased with him. Ritter spent the evening at the house of another neighbor, a member of the Reformed Church. The Methodist meeting was out, and Mrs. Ritter got home and abed before her husband returned home. When he repaired to his bedroom, he found that his wife had locked the door on the inside, and positively refused to let him in. He found every other bedchamber in the house and every room with a fire in it locked, and he was finally compelled to go into the attic. The night was bitter cold, and he got but little sleep.

Friday morning he came down and found the kitchen unlocked, but his wife not yet out of her room. She presently appeared, and at once assailed him for his persistent refusal to repent of his sins and become a follower of the Lord. Warm words followed, and at last Ritter picked up a hammer that lay near and exclaimed:

"We might better be dead than live this way!"

He then dealt his wife several blows on the head, and she fell screaming to the floor. Her screams were heard by Eli Ephgrave, a neighbor, and he at once rushed into Ritter's apartments. He found the husband standing over the prostrate form of his wife the hammer raised as if to strike again. Ephgrave seized hold of him and threw him aside and carried Mrs. Ritter into her own part of the house. Ritter repeated the above remark as Ephgrave went over with the wounded woman.

He was left alone in his room but a moment, but when Ephgrave returned he found Ritter on his knees before his bed, with his head fallen over upon it and blood streaming from his throat to the floor. Ritter was taken up and laid upon his bed, when it was seen that he had cut his throat from ear to ear with a razor. He died before a physician could be called.

Mrs. Ritter's wounds consisted of several fractures of the skull and bad cuts about the face. She was conscious for a short time, giving the above details, but soon entered a comatose state from which she never recovered.—New York Herald.

A Fearful Fate.

This morning a Chronicle reporter observed a dejected Piute buck standing on the curb of South C street, and (wonder of wonders!) holding in his arms a baby! The brave glanced uneasily about him, as if fearful that his degradation would be observed, and seemed to take anything but kindly to his charge. Presently two squaws emerged from the house behind him, each carrying a pappoose on her back, and the three waddled off down the middle of the street. The reporter shortly afterward had the honor of shaking hands with Capt. Bob, the Piute swell, resplendent in a green blanket and plug hat, and sought a solution of the baby puzzle. The Captain smiled several inches, and affably explained that the reporter had witnessed one of the domestic penalties of the tribe. When twins are born to a buck who is not favored with grown up daughters, he is by Piute law obliged to take full charge of the superfluous infant until it is able to walk, when it reverts to the care of the mother. The unfortunate brave is thus subjected to a practical slavery of two years' length, as he hugs the wickiup very closely, being in a chronic state of mortification and disgust. From the manner in which the Captain chuckled and grunted during his explanation, it would seem that the father of twins becomes the butt of the wags of the tribe. "Two pappoose," concluded Bob, as he gazed wistfully at the worn coat of the reporter, "no good. He all same hell."—Virginia (Nev.) Chronicle.

How He Escaped.

Two wood-choppers in Neosho, Kan., could not agree as to whether one owed the other fifty cents, and the end of the altercation was the murder of the alleged creditor by the alleged debtor. Bill Gideon, the murderer, mounted a mule that he found hitched by the village store and rode away. Mr. Short, the owner of the mule, got a horse and overtook the fugitive in a lonely place. "Now," said Gideon, drawing a revolver and aiming at his unarmed antagonist, "you've got to ride with me all day. If I let you go you'll alarm the country, and I don't want to kill you. Come along, and if you attempt to speak to anybody we meet I'll blow your brains out." Short dared not disobey, and they rode along together. Gideon told whoever they met that they were searching for stray cattle. They kept on for thirty-six hours, and at the end of that time Short, having no saddle, was exhausted. Gideon then quit him, leaving the mule, and completing his escape on foot.

The Lowell Mills.

A Lowell, Mass., paper says: "The thirty-ninth annual statistical report, issued this week, shows that in the Lowell mills there are 800,000 spindles and 17,750 looms; 10,500 female and 5,000 male operatives; 3,100,000 yards of goods are produced per week, 60,000 yards of woolens, 40,000 yards of carpeting, 2,500 shawls, and 20,000 dozens of hosiery; that there are consumed weekly 930,000 pounds of cotton and 152,000 pounds of wool; the number of yards dyed and printed per annum is 89,880,000. Nearly all these items are in excess over last year's figures, and some of them very considerably.

BONANZA JIM.

BY WYOMING KIT.

"What! Stranger, don't know Bonanza Jim,
Of Wild Man's Gulch? Why, it war him
As struck it so rich in his claim last year.
Never heerd on't? I'll swar that's queer.
And ye want the story? Wall, lemme see,
My gullet's so dry I can't talk free—
But then, eh? take a drink? Wall, yes,
'Twouldn't be squar' to refuse, I guess.
I think it war back in '68
Old Jim cum out from some Eastern State.
He bummed around Laramie City, an' beat
His grub whar he could, an' slep' in the street,
Till at last the p'lice began to tire
Of his loafin' and yanked him afore the 'Squire.
Jim hadn't a cent, so they worked it roun',
An' give him two hours to leave the town;
Then he cum over hyar an' pitched in with a will
To sinkin' a shaft up thar on the hill.
He built him a cabin near to his claim,
An' lived on nuthin' but mountain game.
Folks tho't he war crazy fur trying to mine
Whar thar wa'n't a show o' "prospect" or "sign,"
But Jim kep' on, we all thought to his ruin,
Tho' the cuss seemed to know jist what he war
doin'.
An' we let him go—an' fur six years' time
[illegible]
An' then we tho't he war crazy fur sure,
So we called a meetin' down to the store,
An' passed a unanimous vote that the least
We could do war to send him back to the East.
The hat war passed round, an' the dust raised right thar
To pay for his passage and something to spar',
An' then we went arter him up to the hole,
But when we got thar, sir, I declar' 'pon my soul
We saw sich a sight that, stranger, I'll swar
It made us all open our peepers an' star'.
Fur thar war Jim on his knees an' jist
A starin' at something he hed in his fist,
An' as soon as he seed us he looked kinder odd,
An' winkin' one eye he said, "Struck 'er, begod."
He went down in the shaft, an', stranger, I hope
To swing in a minit from the end of a rope
Ef the cuss hadn't struck a ten foot vein
O' as purty ore as ye'll see again.
He'd starved fur six year on a 'casional bite,
An' worked like thunder from mornin' till night,
An' while we war thinkin' him crazy, the seed
War goin' right down on a million lead.
An' now he's rich an' got oceans o' stock
Down thar on the plains—an' owns a hull block
In Laramie City an'—hyar comes Jim,
That man dress'd in buckskin, stranger, that's him."

THE CUBAN QUESTION.

The President's Desire to Bring the Strife to an End and Prevent Further Devastation in the Island.

[Washington Telegram to New York Herald.]

A report has been very quietly circulating for several days among people not unfrequently well informed, that the object of a proposed intervention in Cuban affairs was to save the cultivated part of the island from greater devastation and to prevent further demoralization of the sugar-producing industry; that with this object the President had consulted with the British, French, and German Governments, offering to join them in such a meditation as would produce a cessation of hostilities and leave time for an arrangement to be perfected between the Cubans and Spain. Rumor added that these negotiations had gone to some length, and that they were not likely to succeed, but that the President would probably send in a Cuban message soon after the reassembling of Congress. It is not possible to trace these rumors to any authentic source. It can be stated, however, that negotiations with Spain are continually going on, that the Cuban question is still open and the subject of an animated discussion at Madrid, and that unless Spain, who appears to have acted in her intercourse with Mr. Cushing with remarkable moderation and self-possession, should now lose her temper and take an offensive iritiative, there is not any immediate prospect of action on this side. So far as can be ascertained, the President does not intend to send a special message on Cuban affairs to Congress very soon after it reassembles. He is not at present engaged upon such a document. At the same time, there is no doubt that Cuba engages a good deal of his attention, and that he has been led to complain of the destruction of valuable plantations in Cuba. Thirty-nine are said to have been laid waste during the present year. He has been persuaded that we get less sugar from the island than formerly, and are forced to pay a higher price for what we get. He is extremely anxious for some way to put a stop to hostilities.

The impoverished condition of Spain is watched here, and it has become known that her finances are in such disorder that she has lately borrowed some millions in London and Paris at 15 cents on the dollar. A nation reduced to such extremities, it is said, cannot long avert entire prostration and utter helplessness, and it is possible that the President waits for some expected climax in the Spanish affairs, or, possibly, for such a removal of the Spanish ruling family to Cuba as would be a parallel to the removal of the Braganzas from Portugal to Brazil. It is believed here that, with the exception of the Havana volunteers, who are old Spaniards, the Spanish population of Cuba is ready to welcome peace on almost any terms, and that the property-owners of the island, though apparently faithful to Spain, would rejoice at any event which brought them peace and relief from exactions, which are ruinous to them, and security from misgovernment and spoliation in the future. Spain, it is said, lives now by robbing Cuba. She would lose the greater part of her revenue if she lost the island. But she has shown herself incapable of giving it peace and an economical administration, and the question is asked, Are we obliged to suffer the ruin her rule works to continue any longer? There is reason to believe that such representations as the above have been very freely made to the Spanish Government quite recently, and that Government has no doubt been forced by its weakness to receive them patiently. Whether Mr. Cushing has any recent orders to "push Spain," is not known; but for the present at least, no trouble is expected. How long the expectant policy will continue no one knows.

Finally, what is absolutely certain at this moment concerning our relations with Spain is, that the Cuban question is very much alive, but that unless Spain takes the offensive no immediate crisis is apprehended. That the President, however, will appeal to Congress on Cuba in the next three months is regarded as certain.

A Remarkable Meeting.

Seventeen years ago William Lester, a poor carpenter, died at Boston. Three of his children were taken West by a friend, and the fourth, a little girl, was placed in a Boston asylum. Last September the only survivor of the Western members of the family came East in search of his sister, having himself become very wealthy. He found that the girl had been adopted by John Wheeler, a dry-goods merchant, but he had been dead a dozen years, and there was no trace of the girl's whereabouts since. Being discouraged, he started West again, but on the train, a little way out of Boston, he noticed among a bevy of girls who entered the cars one who remarkably resembled his mother. He left the train when they did, and soon found that it was indeed his sister, who was living with her poor adopted mother. She had never been told that she was an adopted child, and it was long before she realized her situation. The young lady could not be prevailed upon to accompany her brother West, but as she looks upon the luxuries with which she and her adopted mother have been surrounded by her brother, she enjoys the pleasure of a real romance.—Boston Traveller.

Revaccination.

Dr. William B. Davis read a paper before the Cincinnati Medical Society, at a recent meeting, giving observations on revaccination during the present epidemic in Cincinnati. His observations, he said, were based on 200 private cases and 600 cases of revaccination in the work-house. His conclusions were as follows:

1. That exposure to infection and intense epidemic influence largely increase the susceptibility of the system to the influence of vaccine virus, and accounts for the unusual number of successful revaccinations during the existence of an epidemic.

2. Small-pox and varioloid give no more immunity from a recurrence of small-pox than vaccination.

3. The cicatrix (or mark) is not a safe criterion of the degree of protection given by the previous vaccination. A number of persons were vaccinated having pits of small-pox on their persons, and seventy-five per cent. of the cases took.

4. It is advisable to vaccinate upon every exposure to contagion, unless it has been recently done with success.

5. Those who are successfully revaccinated were, to some extent, susceptible to the small-pox influence.

The Champion Liar.

One evening last week, when the winter blasts moaned sadly around the street-corners, and the captains of the ferry-boats wore anxious looks, seven or eight vessel owners and "laid up" lake captains sat around a cheerful base-burner in a saloon near the river. After the usual amount of growling about the weather, one of them told a story. There might have been an ounce of truth about it, but the crowd felt certain that the one ounce was offset by twenty-four pounds of the "awfulest kind" of lying. Therefore, a second man told a story to beat it, and then a third man beat the second. When the fourth man started out he said:

"Gentlemen, I have also seen tough times. When I was sailing the schooner Fortune, forty years ago, two of us were swept overboard in a storm on Lake Erie one black night. A hatch cover went with us, and it so happened that we both clutched it. It was not large enough to support two. I was Captain, he a sailor. I had a family—he had none. I shouted to him to quit his hold, and when he would not I reached over, clutched his throat, and held on till his fingers loosened and he went to the bottom of the lake! It was twenty miles off Point Betsey, and with a shrill, wild shriek, which yet lingers in my ears, the poor wretch went to his death! May the Lord forgive me!"

With his chair tilted against the wall, a lanky, sunflowerish chap had been nodding his head right and left, as if sleeping. As the Captain's narrative was concluded, the stranger rose up and solemnly said:

"I am that man!"

The crowd looked at him in astonishment, and he continued:

"I landed on Point Betsey next morning in time for breakfast, and I swore a solemn oath that I'd lick you for choking me, if I had to live a hundred years to do it!"

"You can't be the man," replied the Captain, looking suspiciously at the fellow's big fists; "it was forty years ago."

"I know it was, and for forty years I've been aching to lick you out of your boots!"

The Captain had lied, but he didn't want to own it, and he said:

"The sailor's name was Dick Rice."

"Kerect!" bowed the stranger, "that's my name."

"But he was taller than you."

"Being in the water so long that night I shrunk just a foot!" was the cool rejoinder.

"Well, I know you can't be the man," said the Captain.

"I'm the man, and now I'm going to maul you to pulp! No man can choke me and then brag about it."

He sailed in and upset the Captain, but was then set upon by the whole crowd. He got into the eye of the wind, and hung there for a time, but presently he paid off a little, got the wind on his quarter, and went at it to lick ten times his weight in old liars. He was a very ambitious man, and those who could get out doors got out, and those who couldn't offered him a gallon of whisky to come to anchor. He furled his sails on this understanding, and as he set his glass down for the third drink he wiped his bleeding ear and remarked:

"When a man tries to sacrifice me in order to save himself he don't know who he's fooling with!"

He was the biggest liar of them all, but he made the most out of it.—M. Quad.

The Longest Tramp on Record.

Ephraim Lincoln, colored, passed through Moorhead the other day on his way to Manitoba. There is nothing remarkable in this save that he has walked from Louisiana to Virginia, and from that State to Boston, through Maine to Nova Scotia, from there through Canada to Illinois, Wisconsin, St. Paul, and Duluth, overland to Moorhead. His journey has been of one year and nine months' duration, and he contemplates traveling nine months longer, when he hopes to bring up in Washington, D. C. He was headed for Manitoba, and will go to the head-waters of the Mississippi, the Black Hills, and—if the Indians do not interrupt his longevity—east to Washington.

Will the Specie-Resumption Act be Repealed?

[Washington Cor. New York Sun.]

The programme of the Banking and Currency Committee will be to ask the repeal of the Specie Resumption act, without debate, and in the interest of legal tenders as against national bank notes. The previous question will be called, debate cut off, and the Democrats have an opportunity of exercising the same privilege as was exercised by the Republicans last January in forcing a vote without debate on the resumption bill.

One of the most horrible and revolting massacres ever recorded was that reported by the Bremen Weser Zeitung of Dec. 8. It is stated than an expedition 2,000 strong sent by the Khedive of Egypt to subjugate the Abyssinians was embushed and nearly every man slaughtered. Gen. Arendrop, a Dane, who commanded the force, and many other officers, were literally hacked to pieces, their heads placed on poles and spears and their bodies thrown to the wild beasts. Only one officer escaped. Another expedition, 12,000 strong, comprising infantry, cavalry, and artillery, is now being organized at Cairo, and will be joined by every officer in the Egyptian service. If the above account be true a heavy penalty will be exacted of the Abyssinians for this barbarous mode of warfare.

Beware of the Jug.—A farmer in Seymour, Ind., while examining his corn crib, the other day, came across a small jug, whose mouth was stopped by the body of a rat which had tried to get in, but had stuck fast. On breaking the jug, he found four other rats inside, all alive. The latter had evidently crawled in, eaten till their sides were stuffed out, and then found it impossible to crawl out again.

A Dreadful Delusion.

The Lawrence (Kan.) Tribune says the most horrible transaction of a man bereft of reason occurred at Marion Township, in that county. About a year ago Mrs. Coub, wife of Joseph Coub, died. Since her death the husband's grief has known no bounds. He has frequently shown evidences of insanity, and his mania seems to be in the belief that no person ever dies, and that his wife, though buried, was not dead.

One night lately he procured a screw-driver by bursting open a neighbor's tool-chest with a hatchet. With the screw-driver he rushed to the graveyard where his wife was buried, clawed open the grave, and took the body out of the grave. He then went and asked a neighbor for a cart, in which, he said, he "wanted to bring Hannah to his house, and show her that she was not dead." Hannah was the name of his wife. The cart was refused, and the neighbor started to the graveyard soon after the crazy man had left him, but soon met the latter with the coffin and the corpse on the cart. He had opened the coffin, put hay in around the body, and thrown his vest upon the face. He said he was going to John Studebaker's (a half-brother of the deceased wife), to show the family that "Hannah was not dead."

He resisted, when several men who had gathered took the body from him and reinterred it, he insisting that his wife was not dead. He is now in the jail at Lawrence for safe keeping.

A Secret Well Kept.

It speaks well for the integrity of the British public service that while the negotiations for the purchase of the Khedive's interest in the Suez Canal were going on not even a rumor leaked out. The cret must have been known to some of the prominent Government officials and clerks in their offices, as well as to the Cabinet Ministers. Anybody possessed of the knowledge might have realized a handsome fortune by speculating for a rise in Egyptians. It is believed that the only person who speculated on the secret was the Khedive himself, through his agents, the Messrs. Oppenheim.

Wanted Another to Balance.

Says the Detroit Free Press: He was an old bachelor and she a widow of means and good looks. As they sat in the back parlor the other evening he noticed a new picture hanging up, and he adjusted his glasses and remarked:

"A new picture, eh?"

"Yes, my husband's monument," she replied, as she laid her hand on his arm. "Don't you think I was liberal? And if I only had another painting like it to balance this big chromo in the center it would just finish out my group!"

He thinks he will marry a maiden when he marries.

A Want Supplied.

[From the New York Tribune.]

The American mind is active. It has given us books of fiction for the sentimentalist, learned books for the scholar and professional student, but few books for the people. A book for the people must relate to a subject of universal interest. Such a subject is the physical man, and such a book "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," a copy of which has been recently laid on our table. The high professional attainments of its author—Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y.—and the advantages derived by him from an extensive practice, would alone insure for his work a cordial reception. But these are not the merits for which it claims our attention. The Author is a man of the people. He sympathizes with them in all their afflictions, efforts and attainments. He perceives their want—a knowledge of themselves—and believing that all truth should be made as universal as God's own sunlight, from his fund of learning and experience he has produced a work in which he gives them the benefits of his labors. In it he considers man in every phase of his existence, from the moment he emerges "from a rayless atom, too diminutive for the sight, until he gradually evolves to the maturity of those Conscious Powers, the exercise of which furnishes subjective evidence of our immortality." Proceeding upon the theory that every fact of mind has a physical antecedent, he has given an admirable treatise on Cerebral Physiology, and shown the bearings of the facts thus established upon individual and social welfare. The Author believes with Spencer, that "as vigorous health and its accompanying high spirits are larger elements of happiness than any other things whatever, the teaching how to maintain them is a teaching that yields to no other whatever," and accordingly has introduced an extensive discussion of the methods by which we may preserve the integrity of the system and ofttimes prevent the onset of disease. Domestic Remedies—their preparation, uses and effects—form a prominent feature of the work. The hygienic treatment, or nursing of the sick, is an important subject, and receives attention commensurate with its importance. Nearly all diseases "to which flesh is heir" are described, their symptoms and causes explained, and proper domestic treatment suggested. To reciprocate the many favors bestowed upon him by a generous public, the Author offers his book at a price ($1.50) little exceeding the cost of publication. Our readers can obtain this practical and valuable work by addressing the Author.

The Prairie Farmer, published at Chicago, Ill., is a large eight-page weekly Agricultural, Horticultural, Live Stock and Family Journal. It has just entered upon its Thirty-fifth year, during which time it has been the leading paper of its class in the Great West. The Centennial Year will be one of the most importance in the history of the country, and the publishers are determined to increase the value of the paper to its patrons. It is published at $2.15 per year, postage paid. Less in clubs. Samples free. Address Prairie Farmer Co., Chicago, Ill.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP, SEA WEED TONIC AND MANDRAKE PILLS.—These deservedly celebrated and popular medicines have effected a revolution in the healing art, and proved the fallacy of several maxims which have for many years obstructed the progress of medical science. The false supposition that "Consumption is incurable" deterred physicians from attempting to find remedies for that disease, and patients afflicted with it reconciled themselves to death without making an effort to escape from a doom which they supposed to be unavoidable. It is now proved, however, that Consumption can be cured, and that it has been cured in a very great number of cases (some of them apparently desperate ones) by Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup alone; and in other cases by the same medicine in connection with Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic and Mandrake Pills, one or both, according to the requirements of the case.

Dr. Schenck himself, who enjoyed uninterrupted good health for more than forty years, was supposed at one time to be at the very gate of death, his physicians having pronounced his case hopeless, and abandoned him to his fate. He was cured by the aforesaid medicines, and since his recovery, many thousands similarly affected have used Dr. Schenck's preparations with the same remarkable success.

Full directions accompany each, making it not absolutely necessary to personally see Dr. Schenck, unless patients wish their lungs examined, and for this purpose he is professionally at his principal office, Corner Sixth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, every Monday, where all letters for advice must be addressed. Schenck's medicines are sold by all druggists.

Pimples on the face, rough skin, chapped hands, saltrheum and all cutaneous affections cured, the skin made soft and smooth, by the use of Juniper Tar Soap. That made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, is the only kind that can be relied on, as there are many imitations, made from common tar, which are worthless.

VALUABLE INFORMATION.

Boston, Dec. 12, 1869.

Gentlemen—My only object in giving you this testimonial is to spread valuable information. Having been badly afflicted with Salt Rheum, and the whole surface of my skin being covered with pimples and eruptions, many of which caused me great pain and annoyance, and knowing it to be a blood disease, I took many of the advertised blood preparations, among which was any quantity of Sarsaparilla, without obtaining any benefit, until I commenced taking the Vegetine; and before I had completed the first bottle, I saw that I had got the right medicine. Consequently I followed on with it until I had taken seven bottles, when I was pronounced a well man, and my skin is smooth and entirely free from pimples and eruptions. I have never enjoyed so good health before, and I attribute it all to the use of Vegetine. To benefit those afflicted with Rheumatism, I will make mention also of the Vegetine's wonderful power of curing me of this acute complaint, of which I have suffered so intensely.

C. H. TUCKER, Pas. Agt. Mich. C. R. R., 69 Tyler Street, Boston.

HAS ENTIRELY CURED ME.

Boston, October, 1870.

Mr. H. R. Stevens:

Dear Sir—My daughter, after having a severe attack of whooping cough, was left in a feeble state of health, being advised by a friend, she tried the Vegetine, and, after using a few bottles, was fully restored to health.

I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism. I have taken several bottles of the Vegetine for this complaint, and am happy to say it has entirely cured me. I have recommended the Vegetine to others, with the same good results. It is a great cleanser and purifier of the blood; it is pleasant to take; and I can cheerfully recommend it.

JAMES MORSE, 364 Athens Street.

NO TROUBLE SINCE USING VEGETINE.

Charlestown, October, 1870.

This certifies that my daughter has always been troubled with a humor, which has caused frequent swelling on her face and about her eyes. Physicians called it the Erysipelas; but after having taken two bottles of the VEGETINE, has not been troubled with it since.

SIMON ALDRICH, Charlestown, Mass.

Dr. Tuxes says: "It is unnecessary for me to enumerate the diseases for which the VEGETINE should be used. I know of no disease which will not admit of its use with good results. Almost innumerable complaints are caused by poisonous secretions in the blood, which can be entirely expelled from the system by the use of the VEGETINE. When the blood is perfectly cleansed, the disease rapidly yields; all pains cease, healthy action is promptly restored, and the patient is cured."

The remarkable cures effected by VEGETINE have induced many physicians and apothecaries whom we know to prescribe and use it in their own families.

In fact, VEGETINE is the best remedy yet discovered, and is the only reliable BLOOD PURIFIER yet placed before the public. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers everywhere.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

Wilbor's Cod Liver Oil and Lime.—Persons who have been taking Cod Liver Oil will be pleased to learn that Dr. Wilbor has succeeded, from directions of several professional gentlemen, in combining the pure oil and lime in such a manner that it is pleasant to the taste, and its effects in Lung Complaints are truly wonderful. Very many persons whose cases were pronounced hopeless, and who had taken the clear oil for a long time without marked effect, have been entirely cured by using this preparation. Be sure and get the genuine. Manufactured only by A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston. Sold by all druggists.

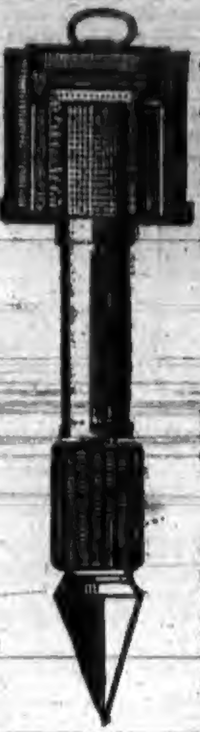
A New Method of Draining Farms!



YUNDT'S PATENT DRAIN!

FOR DRAINING

Swamps, Ponds & Low Lands.

It sinks the water just where it stands, saving miles of tile drains; keeps the water from cutting up your highways, or flooding your neighbor's, and is as far superior to tile drains as the railroad is to the common wagon.

TESTIMONIAL.

We, the undersigned, having seen one of Yundt's Patent Drains remove a large pond of stagnant water, on Hoyt street, in this city, do cheerfully recommend it to all persons who have wet cellars, or are troubled with ponds or wet lands. It will do all that is claimed for it.

DR. E. ATKINSON, HENRY GOLDTHWAIT, J. W. GRIFFITH,
H. B. CROSS, D. V. ROSS, LYMAN CASE,
N. E. RAPER, F. MORTON.

One of the above drains was put down on the premises of J. P. Frenzel, Jr., Cashier of the Merchants' National Bank, of this city, and in less than

Three Hours Had Drained the Cellar

of over 8,000 gallons of water. No better investment can be made of idle capital than in working territory with this Drain. A good, energetic Agent is wanted in every city and county, to whom a liberal commission will be paid. State, County, Township or Farm Rights for sale. Personal property or real estate taken in exchange for territory. Address

PENCIL AND SCISSORS.

Boss Tweed positively refuses to be heard from. Boss Babcock, and Boss Shepherd, continue to enjoy the confidence of the Republican party.

What is home without a baby? Many children have coughs and colds just now and should have the greatest care, and a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

The Centennial Managers are again before Congress, asking an appropriation of $1,500,000. For the sake of decency gentlemen give us a little breathing spell.

When you see a woman with a rawhide hid in the back drapery of her morning warpper and calling William Henree-e-e in a key about four octaves above high C you may know that a whaling expedition is about to set sail.

The Republican leaders are very much disappointed that the Democracy of the House have not rushed into all manner of foolish and hasty acts. Deliberation and conservatism has marked its course.

We have quite a number of persons in town that are needing the attention and assistance of those that are more fortunate. When the weather is cold their needs are greater; cold weather requiring more food, more clothing and more fuel.

Republican papers need not exercise themselves bothering about the Democratic candidate for President. It is sufficient to know that some good man will be nominated who will beat Grant or any other Republican who are to be nominated.

The Columbia City "Post says. Holman for Governor, is the cry of the Democracy from all parts of the State. He is 20,000 votes stronger then any candidate. He is one of the very few public men who makes no mistakes. Let the nomination be tendered to him unanimously and it will not be refused.

"How is it," asked Bishop Wilderforce of one of his Roman Catholic servent girls, "that you can feel so kind ly toward me when you believe that I shall certainly be lost?" "Oh no!" said she, "But how can I be saved," persisted the bishop, "when your church teaches that there is no salvation for those out of its pale?" "You will be saved through your invincible ignorance was the reply.

We have received from its publishers John P. Morton & Co., Louisville Ky a copy of the Western Farmer's Almanac for 1876 being its forty-ninth year. Its style is attactive, and its contents varied and valuable, especially to the farmer. A series of articles on "Small Fruits," by Dr. Warder, of Ohio, are very interesting as indeed are the contributions of various other standard authors. One feature of peculiar interest is the theory of Prof. Tice and his forecasts of the weather for each week in the year. Should his predictions prove as correct in the future as in the past they will be invaluable to the agriculturist and of great interest to the general reader. The price of this almanac being only ten cents(sent to any address), we would suggest to our readers that they inclose a dime to the publishers and get a copy.

A cheap swindle has been discovered in New York and Brooklyn. Men would purchase some small article in a store paying one dollar two dollar or five dollar notes. On counting their change they would complain that it was short fifteen or twenty five cents and generally succeeded in obtaining that extra amount. Several of them have been arrested.

"Pa, are you in favor of the Bible in public schools?" asked a West Side youngster at the breakfast table the other morning. "Why, of course, I am responded the father, pleased that such an important subject should engage the attention of his youthful offspring. "What makes you ask such a question my son?" "O, nothing," rejoined young hopeful, " only I thought maybe you wasn't, as you never have had one at home." The urchin dodged, but he wasn't quick enogh.

A little five-year-old boy was being instructed in morals by his grandmother The old lady told him that all such terms as "by golly," by jingo by thunder etc., were only minced oaths and but little better then any other profanity In fact she said he could tell a profane oath by the perfix by a ll such were oaths Well then grandmother said the little hopeful there's a big oath in the newspapers by telegraph The old lady gave it up and the boy is bewildered on morals.

There is something in human nature which makes a man like the little dog in a fight and if the pup once gets on top how we rejoice. It has been held that old men are extremely arrogant, but the world looking closely will see that it has misjudged them. Your truly arrogant man is one who has just passed through the trying incidents in a start for life and has made a partial success of it. He does not look with awe upon his elders, but considers himself their equal and he has a supreme contempt for those who are just starting over the narrow strip of land which separates them from himself Out of his eyes flasheth fire, his head hangeth low for full heads of wheat ever bend. Like the peacock let him not look at his feet lest he forget his fine plumage.

Sent up for 16 Years

A young man by the name of Winer Charles, at Warsaw, Ind., has been sentenced to the pententiary for sixteen years, for committing a rape on a young lady by the name of Mis. Mary Swyhart. The Warsaw "Indianaian, says; The principal witness was Miss. Mary Swyhart, the victim of young Charles. She stated that she reached Warsaw on a train that arrives here 1:30 a. m., and inquired of Charles, who was building a fire in the waiting room of the passenger house, if he knew where Mr. Adelot lived, with whom she wished to stop until morning. He answered that he did that Mr. Abelot had moved to East Warsaw from where he had formerly resided and that if she desired to go there he would show her the way. Suspesting nothing she consented to his escort and he left the depot with his victim, going north until he reached Market street, thence he went east to Lake street, and south on Lake until he reached the railroad This was done doubtless to pass the house of Mr. Adelot without Miss Swyhart seeing the residence of her friend. After reaching the railroad he went east following the road until he passed the fair ground, when Miss S. became much fatigued and informed him that she could not go farther. He replied that they were near her destination, and, being thus reassured, she unsuspectingly permitted herself to be lured onward. After crossing the Pierceton road just opposite the farm of Elijah Hayes, he suddenly turned upon her and said Mr. Adelot did not live here at all, and that he had her in the situation he desired She, supposing his purpose to be robbery, offered to give him her pocket-book and all the money it contained; but he said this was not what he desired. He then caught her threw her down, tore off her underclothes and not yet having accomplished his purpose, choked her until as she expressed, I thought I was dead." Twice a freight train passed them, and to prevent her making an outcry he choked her that she could not utter a cry. This violence he kept up for about an hour, and she being utterly worn out more dead then alive he accomplished his beastly purpose. She then attempted to crawl off. He stopped her saying, with an oath that he was not done with her and violated her the second time. The detaills were sickening in the extreme. Her testimony was corrobarated by other witnesses Her torn and bloody underclothes were silent yet truthful witnesses against the young scoundrel The defense relied upon the improbabilities of a woman of good sense and chastity allowing herself to be enticed away and the circumstance that she at the time made no outcry and came back with him to town.

Another Freak.

An account is given of another night-walking freak of young Tom Mendenhall of VanBuren, Lagrange, County, Ind., which eclipses his climbing the scaffolding of the tall chimney here at the railroad machine shop. Last week on Tuesday night after going up stairs to bed at his home in VanBuren, his mother locked the chamber door as usual so that if he got up in his sleep he could not get down to stroll off. It appears that he went to a window and by raising it was enabled to get down on to the poarch and from that to the ground in the yard, and then scaled the picket fence and started on a tramp for Michigan.

When he left home all the clothing he had on was a very short undershirt, and thus barefooted during the rainstorm that night he wended his way through the mud about three miles and a half into the "Burger settlement," in the southeast corner of White Pigeon township State of Michigan. Here it appears he was set upon by some dogs and one Andrew Potter being awakened by the barking of the dogs went out to see what was the matter and thus discovered young Mendenhall nearly chilled to death and scarcely able to move. He was taken in and some clothing provided and after being thawed out was taken home. It is said that although under-going such serious exposure he never even took cold nor is he any the worse for it. It was about there o'clock in the morning when he was discovered by Potter.—Elkhart Union.

Garrett Items

We received these items last week but they came too late for publication:

—MR. EDITOR, —Please allow me to say a few words through your paper concerning our election:

There was a meeting called at the school house, by the Cen. Com. for the purpose of nominating a ticket for our town election. After a few had gathered the house was called to order by W. A. Pratt, Jr., and afterwards moved that Mr. P. act as temporary chairman Carried. The object for the call of a caucas was then stated, and Mr. Malody chosen secretary. The secretary had a nice little speach which he read off to the natives, and offered the following resolutions:

Be it, "Resolved" that all property holders and all good citizens of Garrett and all those who intend making Garrett their future home, shall have a legal right to vote at this caucas.

At this time all the Chicago and Columbus men who were working here rolled in to vote for the whisky ring, and the following ticket was nominated:

FOR TRUSTEES.

Chas. Hogue, Chas. Linconhelt, W. A. Pratt. Thos. Malony, Clerk, Jno. Hyman, Treasurer, M. Pratt, Assessor.

Now we think these are all good men, but we think the two former had better be at their places of business, their saloons, which seems to be the chief business here. This whole thing as we look at it is a complete force at which Malony is at the head. It was said by Mr. M. before the election that if he could not get the office of town clerk, he would have to chop wood for a livelihood, for he could not make a living out of the "Garrett News." And such we think is the case, for if it were not for Vindex and a few more such, his paper would go to the d—— in a short time. But now we suppose he is happy. He received his office through votes of men from different parts of the country that chanced to be stopping here. We hope it will afford him a fat living.

Success to the first Honorable Board of Garrett, as I have not time to give the full details of the whole farce, I will close for the present. More anon.

THE OLD MAN AND THE FAST MAIL.

Young man, I am tired and weary, and I'll borrow your chair for awhile,
To sit by your office window, where the golden sunbeams smile,
For I've traveled ten miles since morning, although I am old and gray,
To see Uncle Sam's pet hobby, the fast white mail, to-day.

How Time keeps ringing his changes; it ain't many years ago,
Since I traveled this same road, youngster, in a stage-coach, old and slow.
There wasn't a sign of a railroad, nor a telegraph pole in sight,
And the earth lay asleep in a mantle of snowflakes, pure and white.

A little log cabin yonder, peeped out at the edge of the wood,
Like the nut-brown face of a maiden from under a snow-white hood,
And there we unhitched our horses, in twilight cold and gray,
To rest in the brown log cabin till the dawn of another day.

Then I came here again the next summer, when the meadows with grass were green,
When the birds in the oaks were singin', and the fish were at play in the stream.
And I built, in a little clearing, way yonder over the hill,
A cabin of logs and brushwood, and, stranger, I live there still.

But the cabin o' logs has vanished, and there stands in its place to-day
A mansion of brick and granite, while over across the way
My lad has built him a cottage, a cottage he calls his own,
That discounts the big brick mansion where the old man isn't at home.

But old dogs don't learn new habits, and an old man's hard to please,
It ain't easy to rest from labor when one isn't used to ease;
Yet I don't know as I'd be willin' to toil in the fields again,
A workin' for paper dollars and killin' both heart and brain.

Once a week we got our mails then; folks wasn't a hurry to go,
They didn't think that the stage-coach was lumberin', old, and slow,
And you couldn't have made us believe it, if you'd argued an hour or more,
They'd be carrying mails by steam power, and throwin' 'em off at the door.

Now cars run over their roadways with the speed of a gust of wind,
They've left the lumberin' stage-coach and the old-fashioned ways behind,
And they tell me, to lands far westward, where the eagle has left his trail,
Uncle Sam is sendin' 'em letters by way of a fast white mail.

So I've driven from home since morning, although I am old and gray,
To see Uncle Sam's pet hobby, the fast white mail, to-day;
For in twenty-six hours, I've heard it, and it beats an old man like me,
They're the ocean mail a readin' by "the queen o' the inland sea."

Well, times is changin' surely, one is never too old to learn,
Though there may be flaws in the marble that my old eyes can't discern;
Yet I'm tired of the Deacon's croakin', and I wish he'd "give us a rest;"
God's runnin' the world, I reckon, and He doeth what seems the best.

Now I'll move my chair here, youngster, and sit where the bright sun smiles,
Till I hear on the curve, down yonder, the whistle o' old John Miles,
For they tell me he's runnin' an engine on the fast white mail to-day,
And he runs like a wild young fellow, if his hair is turnin' gray.

The old man sat by the window till he saw o'er the curve below
The smoke from the engine rising like the wings of a great black crow;
Then he crept with a gait unsteady across the office floor,
And stood like a statue watching the train from the open door.

came like a great white arrow tipped with a barb o' steel,
Spurning the road beneath it with the touch of its iron-shod heel,
Catching the mail while passing with a demon's outstretched hand,
To be scattered in showers of blessing afar o'er the peaceful land

Miles, with his hand on the lever, looked out as he passed the door,
Looked out at the sunbeams stealing down toward the lake's green shore;
Then pulled the throttle wide open, and seemed with his air to say,
"Uncle Sam, I have run like lightning with your fast white mail to-day."

The old man looked in wonder, as they caught the mail below,
"Aye! time is fast, he muttered, "for that idea ain't slow."
And then, as away they vanished, with a flash like a comet's tail,
He said, "Old Time, you're euchred by steam and the fast white mail."

RIP SLAM'S MISFORTUNES.

Who Kindled the Great Fire at Baker's Gulch?

My name is Slam—Rupert Slam, but out our way the boys, with a natural turn to be vulgar, call me Rip Slam. I am a Virginian by birth, a printer by education, an editor by destiny, and I conduct the Baker's Gulch Reveille, in connection with which I have lately earned some undeserved notoriety, having been compelled to shoot Mr. Lapp, the rival editor at Baker's Gulch, who had charge of a villainous compound of libel and false pretenses, styled the Mountain Dawn. Lapp is dead, and it is true I shot him, but that the deed could have been avoided I deny, and I equally deny that it was a culpable deed in itself. On the contrary, I shall assert, to my dying day, that it was a deed done in behalf of good morals, and this assertion I will maintain with any arms the controverting party may choose to select.

The Baker's Gulch Reveille is published every Wednesday; the Mountain Dawn comes out every Saturday. We thus divided the week and the patronage between us, and I was content to have it so; but Lapp was not. He wanted all the subscribers and all the advertisements, and he wanted also to be Clerk of the County Court. The result was that, instead of being Damons and Pythiases, Mr. Lapp and myself became rivals. I conducted my share of the controversy upon the most honorable, high-toned principles. It is not impugning the memory of the deceased to say that Mr. Lapp conducted his part of the rivalry like a fish huckster.

I was and am a bachelor. I boarded at the hotel, but I slept over the office of the Reveille, where a small iron bedstead, a buffalo robe, some chairs, a spittoon, and the files of the Reveille comprised my small furniture. The night before the last great fire which consumed Baker's Gulch there was a poker party met in my apartment aforesaid. A barrel and two shutters were in the habit of serving as for a table, so that it became a saying with the Baker's Gulchers, "Slam's shutters are off," meaning that a game of some sort was in progress. On this occasion there were six of us in the party and seven or eight spectators, most of whom would have liked to play, but were prevented by impecuniosity. Of the players, I only remember Capt. Fristow, of our stamping mill; Rube Rollins, Mr. Lapp, and myself. We were playing a rather lively game of the 25-cent-ante species, with a good deal of blinding and straddling. Lapp, who had a propensity to hold good hands on inopportune occasions, somehow had all the luck in calling me when I was most unwilling to be called, because I had nothing worth showing. On this night I speak of, Lapp's luck was perfectly astounding, and he won from everybody. Mr. Rollins was in a bad humor, and I, filled with the insane desire to get back my earnings. Lapp, I need not say, never lost his composure, nor ever showed more life, more fire, than you will find in an oyster or a cucumber. He dealt the cards with his usual clumsy composure, and looked after the antes and chips with the assiduity of a nurse minding infants by the margin of a duck pond. "Gentlemen," he said, "as I am winning this evening, I think I can afford to stand treat." So he kicked up Capt. Fristow's nigger, asleep on the floor, and sent him over to the hotel to get us a couple of bottles of wine. When it came, I held a pair of knaves on the deal. I drew three cards, and found myself in possession of another jack and two aces—a delightfully full hand. It took me $2 to come in, and, as I was just then without chips, I borrowed from Fristow, who was slumbering again. Mr. Rollins passed out, and Mr. Lapp immediately saw the pile on the table and bet $10. I saw his $10, and went him $25 better. "See here," said he, in his impertinent way, "I'm your friend. I don't want to win your money—I've got a good hand, and, if you'll just call me, it's all right—I'll show it!" "Mr. Lapp!" I shouted, "you are a beggarly scoundrel, unfit to play cards with gentlemen! Do you see my cards, or do you surrender?" "No, I don't see it!" he sneered. "How can I see it when it is not put upon the table? Put up your money and I'll talk to you." "You know that my word is good for it," said I. "If you win from me you shall have the money to-morrow after breakfast." "Rip Slam," said the mean-spirited cuss, "let's talk business. I know you have no money to lose, and you know I know it. Stop, now—yonder's a file of your paper from the start. I want it. I know you have another file on deposit in the Express Company's fire-proof safe. I'll give you $100 for the file—here's the money—but if you'll take my advice you'll not bet against my hand, for it'll win!" I sold him the file and made my bet good. He saw my bet and raised it just enough to take all my money—price of the Reveille file—minus the cost of a cocktail or so in the morning, and then, preliminaries settled, he showed me his hand—four queens, by jingo! every one simpering at me, and cutting sheep's eyes at the ace in the corner.

Lapp rose. "Gentlemen," said he, "day is not very far off, and there's nothing more to drink here. My brother Slam goes to press in the morning and has copy to prepare; I will therefore take my leave and my file of the Reveille." And so, with a diabolical grin, he departed. His boy took Capt. Fristow off to bed, and when the Reveille foreman came to go to work in the morning I rose, escorted Mr. Rollins to my humble couch, covered him with the buffalo robe, and, after giving the foreman an order to go down to the express office for my file there locked up, and to fix up an editorial for the paper, I went off to breakfast.

At the breakfast table I found my delightful old friend, Col. Debonair, and a Mr. Chopps, an English traveler, to whom the Colonel introduced me. After breakfast we adjourned to the Colonel's room, and, by sending for James Addison, Esq., were able to make up one of the most charming whist parties I ever took a hand with. At 1 o'clock p. m., with honors easy and Addison sure of two by cards to make up the game—our seventh successive rubber won—and seven empty bottles under the table, we were startled by the cry of "Fire!" I sprang to the window, only to see the office and building of the Reveille in a bright blaze, and Rube Rollins springing from the second-story window, minus his hair and lap-robe beard. The great fire at Baker's Gulch had begun!

Two days later, when the fire was extinguished, but while the ruins still smoked, I first heard the rumor that it was I, Rupert Slam, who had caused this disastrous and overwhelming conflagration. I horsewhipped several persons, but still the rumor spread, and I was too busy in re-establishing the office and restoring the edition of the Reveille to take more summary means to check it, or to trace it to its source. But on the Saturday week succeeding the fire this infernal Lapp, in the issue of his Mountain Dawn, came out with an editorial, double-leaded, upon the subject of "Who is the Author of the Late Conflagration?" In that atrocious article he says:

> Fellow-citizens, we ask you to consider where this fire originated; to reflect what was the debauched and desperate condition of the proprietor of that establishment at the time. We happen to be the owners of a file of that creature's miserable sheet, and, in an article so long ago as last December twelve months, find the following: "Baker's Gulch is a blot and a stigma upon the fair face of nature—upon the throbbing bosom of humanity. Baker's Gulch must burn again, in order to be reformed. Nothing but a complete Baphometic Fire-Baptism will suffice to purge away the hideous iniquities of Baker's Gulch."

As soon as I saw this copy of the Dawn, I took a friend with me and proceeded to Lapp's office. I explained my mission.

"Mr. Slam," he replied, "I have a mission also, and that is to find out and publish the author of this conflagration which has ruined this whole community. I gave you name and date for the article. Prove that you never wrote it." "How can I prove it except by asserting? You had one of my files; the other was burnt in the fire. Produce the file and show me the article. If you can do that I will acknowledge that I burned Baker's Gulch." "I cannot do that, Mr. Slam," for, as you know quite well, my file of the Reveille, as well as yours, was burned in the great conflagration. But, in this volume, I have happily collected a mass of 'elegant extracts,' from the editorial columns of your paper during the past three years, and mean to publish them every one." "Let me see that volume, Mr. Lapp." I took it, glanced over a page or two of its infamous contents, stood a moment actually appalled at such devilish machination as I saw there revealed, and then said: "Publish another word of these lies at your peril, Mr. Lapp!"

It was charged that I had saturated my bed-room with kerosene and put a slow match to it. Rube Rollins, whom I left asleep on my bed, when questioned, admitted that he smelt kerosene very strongly at the moment of his escape. My foreman told me that Lapp had visited the room after I left for breakfast, under pretense of searching for a shirt-stud of his, lost between the puncheons of the floor. Lapp, then, was there, and he is not too good to make a bonfire of a whole city in order to accomplish his ends and destroy his enemy. In the very next issue of his paper he published another double-leaded article, entitled, "Rupert Slam's Editorials, continued." In this murderous libel he quoted me as saying: "Unless the mean scalawags and mudsills of Baker's Gulch are willing to come forward at once and give this paper (the Reveille) the support and patronage it deserves, let them prepare for tears—tears that will scald them to the quick. Let them insure, for the fire-bug is amongst them, and his operations will be guided by deliberate hands."

For this article I challenged Mr. Lapp. He refused to fight, and came out with another pretended editorial of mine, in which the respected community of Baker's Gulch was abominably libeled. For this article I horsewhipped Mr. Lapp.

The next issue of the Mountain Dawn contained an article in which, among other atrocities, I was represented as having editorially said: "Nothing but a vigorous and persistent Ku-Klux can restore this community to its normal health. The rope, the whip and the torch are needed to save Baker's Gulch from dying of its own corruptions." For this article I kicked Mr. Lapp the entire length of Main street, and tossed him into Capt. Fristow's tailrace.

A day or two later, by a piece of good fortune, a mountaineer came into town, and to my office, with two bales of paper strapped over the back of a mule. "See here, mister," said he, "that there Lapp's a low-down cuss; he's been telling lies on you." I examined his parcel, and, to my surprise and joy, found a complete edition of the Reveille, from the first number down. "What will you charge me for these? I must have them at any price." "Not a nickel, stranger," said the true-hearted fellow; I go in for fair play, so I want to see you tackle that there Lapp and give the low cuss particular fits. He deserves it."

But the very next number of the Mountain Dawn contained the following: "We are credibly informed that Slam, in order to befog public opinion, has sent across the mountains and had a whole spurious edition of his incendiary sheet published, with the objectionable articles carefully elimina'ed. But it won't work, Brother Slam. We have the evidence against you! Fellow-citizens, read the following from Slam's issue of Aug. 29, 18—:" And he went on for half a column with a string of the most iniquitous lies ever invented for man by the father of lies himself.

I found myself encountering so many cold and dark looks about this time that I thought it proper to consult my friends, and they advised me to challenge Lapp to meet me at a town meeting. The meeting was called, and all the manhood and intellect of Baker's Gulch assembled there. I appeared with my files, and Lapp was present with his damnable volume of calumnious forgery. The mountaineer was also present in the audience, but, though I did not know it then, he was drunk, suborned and soddened with the enemy's own whisky. I made my statement in extenso, and Lapp convinced that my frank and genuine eloquence made a powerful impression upon the Baker's Gulchers. But when I called on that mountaineer to corroborate me, he rose, with an abominable drunken leer, and said: "It's all a d—d lie! You hired me to fetch that bundle of papers over from Mushmillionville, an' I done it!" In the midst of the ensuing murmurs, Lapp rose and cried out: "I move you the following, fellow-citizens:

> "Whereas, Rupert Slam has been proven an enemy to this community, dangerous to its peace and dignity, an incendiary and a fire-bug; therefore, be it
>
> "Resolved, That the said Rupert Slam be allowed thirty-six hours for himself and press to remove permanently from Baker's Gulch and vicinity."

The resolution and preamble were carried unanimously.

After the meeting I went once more to see Lapp, and told him that I would surely kill him unless he retracted all his lies about me. His sole answer was to read me part of an unfinished editorial of his for the next Mountain Dawn, in which it was recommended to double-lock all buildings and appoint a patrol for every street, "until the convicted fire-bug——." "Are you determined to publish that, Lapp?" asked I. He grinned in his offensive way and went on writing. "If you don't defend yourself I'll kill you as you sit," said I, drawing. "I am defending myself," he answered, pointing his pen at me. I fired; the ruffian fell; I walked out of the office, and here I am.

* * * * *

I am told that Lapp, after I left the office, rose, wiped the blood from his forehead and eyes, sat at his desk and wrote as follows: "We are not able to finish this article to-day. The fire-bug has visited our office and justified his name by firing upon us with his usual success." He then yielded himself up to the surgeon's hands and died in two hours, perfectly conscious to the last, but absolutely declining to proclaim my innocence.—New York World.

A New Year's Call.

Si and Jake met at the Atlanta cotton compress yesterday:

"Si, is you gwine ter make some New Year's calls Saturday?"

"I dunno; 'specs maybe I will," said Si, in his drawling way.

"Whar you think 'bout callin' at?"

"Well, dat isn't 'cided 'pon yit, but I'm purty sartin to call on you for dat dollar what you bin owin' me for the las four months! How 'bout dat?"

"Blame my yaller skin ef I don't beleebe of you wus on yer dyin' bed ye'd gib the undertaker a order on me fur dat dollar, I swar I do!" indignantly spoke Jake.

"Yas," said Si, "an' I'm thinkin' dat's 'bout what I'll hab to do wid dat debt yit!"

Then Jake got mad and didn't invite Si to call at his house on New Year's Day.—Atlanta Constitution.

Married by Telegraph.

We have enjoyed the sensation of marriages at sea, marriages on steamboats, marriages by proxy, balloon weddings, and exposition marriages, but we have not heard, until this afternoon, of a matrimonial alliance by lightning, over the wires of the Western Union Telegraph Company. Mr. G. Scott Jeffreys, an operator of the Western Union, located at Waynesburg, Pa., and Mrs. Lida Culler, an operator, stationed at Brownsville, having agreed to take each other "for better or for worse," they conceived the novel idea of having the ceremony performed by telegraph. Col. C. O. Rowe, the Superintendent of this division, entered heartily into the arrangement. The parties took a position in the operating room at Brownsville, with three or four witnesses, including the operator. In the office at Waynesburg, Mr. [illegible] Story, the operator, and his family were stationed, with the mother and sister of the groom, four or five other friends, and Mr. Scott, the officiating clergyman. To prevent interruption, Col. Rowe issued the following order to all the offices in his division: "All business must be suspended on this circuit five minutes before 2 o'clock p. m. to-day, and kept closed until after the marriage ceremony by telegraph, which takes place at 2 o'clock." At the very moment appointed, the tick, tick, tick, tick, tick, announced that the ceremony had been commenced. The operators gathered about, and listened to the instrument as it told the following story:

[Brownsville to Waynesburg.]

Tell the Rev. Mr. Scott we are ready now.

[Waynesburg to Brownsville.]

To G. Scott Jeffreys and Lida Culler, Brownsville, Pa.:

Marriage is an ordinance of God, for the welfare and happiness of the human family, instituted at the creation and union of the first pair, by which He ordained the union of one man with one woman in bonds of pure and holy wedlock for life. The parties to be united at this time please to join hands.

(Signed) J. W. Scott,
Minister of the Gospel.

[Brownsville to Waynesburg.]

It is done.

[Waynesburg to Brownsville.]

Do you, George Scott Jeffreys and Lida Culler, who hold each other by the hand, take each other as lawful and wedded companions for life; and do you solemnly promise, before God and the witnesses present, that you will live together, and be to each other faithful, loving and true, as husband and wife, till God shall separate you by death?

(Signed) J. W. Scott,
Minister of the Gospel.

[Brownsville to Waynesburg.]

"We do."
(Signed) George Scott Jeffreys.
"We do."
(Signed) Lida Culler.

[Waynesburg to Brownsville.]

In the name and by the authority of God, I pronounce you husband and wife. Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder. And may God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost bless the union and yourselves, individually and personally, now and forever. Amen.

(Signed) J. W. Scott,
Minister of the Gospel.

[Brownsville to Waynesburg.]

"Thank you." Jeffreys.

This concluded the ceremony proper, and for some time afterward the wires were loaded with congratulations to the newly-married couple.

A New Year's Diary.

A large number of the young men of Detroit will to-day purchase diaries for 1876, and to-morrow they will take up their pencils with a firm determination to keep track of every day in the year. Every young man should keep a diary. When he is old and gray his grandchildren will fish it out of the rag bag and find it more valuable than gold or silver. There is no set style of jotting down thoughts and events, but perhaps it may be well to give the record of 1875 as taken from the pocket diary of an average young man:

"January 1—Went to see my girl. Shall leave off swearing, drinking, euchre, smoking, chewing, being out nights, betting, going to the opera, and shall try to save $10,000 this year."

"January 7—Went to see my girl. Lost a box of cigars somewhere."

"February 1—Won $25 betting on a dog fight. That's the way to scoop 'em. Am trying to get along on fifteen cigars per day. Went to see my girl. She says I shouldn't swear."

"April 20—Went to see my girl. Nothing new."

"July 4—This is the glorious Fourth."

"September 1—Went to see my girl."

"November 11—Glorious weather. Went to see my girl."

"December 1—This is the 1st of December."

"December 25—This is Christmas."

"December 31—This is the last day of the year. I must commence to-morrow to save money and break off my bad habits. Went to see my girl last night, and made her happy by telling her that I was going to save $10,000 next year."—Detroit Free Press.

A Great Oversight.

The lawyer who drew up the "provisions" printed on the back of accident insurance cards thought he had provided for every possible contingency, but he was a short-sighted mortal. He should have adopted several other provisions, as follows:

4. Provided that the insured is not on his way to a prize fight or a horse race, or anywhere else.

5. Provided that his wife wasn't down to the depot to see him off.

6. Provided that he has never wrenched himself sawing wood, nor crippled any of his limbs crawling into the pantry window after midnight.

7. Provided, that he does not occupy a seat with a man who has a can of nitro-glycerine in his coat-tail pocket.

8. Provided, that the accident didn't happen in time of war, peace, daylight, darkness, or from any good or bad cause.

9. Provided, that the injury is plainly visible, is on his ear, or his thumb, and was received in the regular manner laid down for accidents to happen.

10. Provided, that it didn't happen from any break-down, smash-up, collision, or any other accident.

11. Provided, that he can get his cash. —Detroit Free Press.

The Dynamite Fiend.

A trace of one of Thomassen's diabolical plots to blow up steamers is believed to have been found on the Celtic, the theory being that a box brought there by that vessel only failed of being filled with dynamite and clockwork, instead of bags of shot, because "W. K. Thomas," who shipped it, could not insure it as $9,000 in specie. Perhaps the most remarkable circumstance in this whole affair is the view taken by German lawyers, that if Thomassen had survived his attempt at suicide he could only have been lightly punished under existing laws, though he caused the death of 128 persons.—New York Tribune.

A Sad Warning.

He came in shaking with suppressed laughter, which fairly oozed out of his eyes, and the corners of his mouth. Drawing a chair beside that occupied by the editor, he coughed affably in his face, and drawing some manuscript from his pocket said, "I've been getting something good for you—something bully—and yet it's so simple that it is a wonder that nobody else has thought of it. It'll be a clean scoop in every paper in America. (Here the editor took up a heavy lignum-vitæ ruler that was lying on the desk before him, and rubbed his nose with it reflectively.) "You know they've elected Michael C. Kerr Speaker!" The editor answered that he did. "Well," said his visitor, speaking very rapidly, "here is a lot of jokes about his name—'Mr. Speaker' and—" The heavy ruler descended on his head with a fearful crash, and the visitor tumbled on the floor. The editor felt his pulse and leaned his ear against his heart, then, with a smile of satisfaction, lifted his pockets and rang the bell. When the porter appeared, he said calmly, "Jim, put him in a barrel and take him to the Rush Medical College, with the Tribune's compliments. You can keep his clothes for yourself." Then he resumed his work—an editorial on the brutalities of body-snatching.—Chicago Tribune.

Lively Spooks.

Scarboro, Maine, is strong in the faith that she has a haunted house. Ten years ago it was owned by an Irishman, who died and was buried upon the place. The farm was sold to pay unjust demands, and last spring a Mr. Johnson and family moved in. They say that every night while they remained they were tormented with mysterious sights and sounds. Sometimes crossed hands upon the wall, surrounded by a circle of light, would appear. Then doors begin to open and shut and latches rattle. There are sounds like water boiling over upon the stove, and then whisperings in different parts of the house. The stove shook and the stove covers rattled, and the figure of a person of full size, dressed in white, in full sight, and without eyes or nose, traveled about the room. Some nights it appeared just as soon as the family retired, and they would get up and sit up all night.

Shot Her Sister.

Mrs. Mary White, aged 23 years, met with a sad fate at Nebraska City on Christmas Day. She was at her home with a little sister 10 years of age, and a playmate. While the lady was in the front room attending to household duties, and without a knowledge of what the children were doing, the little girl got hold of an old pistol which had been loaded for some months, and, rushing into the room, exclaimed, "Look out, Mary, I'm going to shoot!" at the same time pointing the weapon in the direction of her sister. Instantly the weapon was discharged, and Mrs. White fell to the floor with the nearly inaudible exclamation, "Eda, you've shot me!" The ball penetrated the right cheek, ranged slightly upward, and passed out at the back of the head, producing almost instant death.

Washing Dishes.

It seems that all housekeepers are wrong in using soap to wash dishes. The right way to do is to have your water quite hot and add a very little milk to it. This softens the water, gives the dishes a fine gloss, and preserves the hands; it removes the grease—even that from beef, and yet no grease is ever floating on the water, as when soap is used. The stone vessels should be set on the stove with a little water in them, when the victuals are taken from them; thus they are hot when one is ready to wash them, and the grease is very easily removed. Tinware keeps bright longer cleaned in this way than by using soap or by scouring. The habit so many of us have acquired of scouring tins is a wasteful policy; the present style of tinware will not bear it. The tin is soon scrubbed away, and a vessel that is fit for nothing is left on our hands.

What It Takes to Run a Sheep-Ranche in Texas.

All that is needed to start a sheep-ranche is two jackasses, two Mexican boys, one Mexican man, one sack of frijoles (Mexican beans), some coffee and a few extras, 1,500 ewes and twenty to thirty bucks, and a gun to kill game. The Mexican ewes, if bought in August, will cost $1.50 to $1.65. A Mexican boy will cost $8 to $10 a month, and the man about $20 a month; jackasses $25 each; the frijoles three cents a pound—altogether for the first year about $3,500. The ewes will yield from 2½ to 2¾ pounds of wool, which will bring about 24 cents per pound, and then come the lambs, which will double the herd if properly taken care of. A man then has from his investment of $3,500, 3,000 sheep, and upward of $900 from the sale of the wool.—Pleasanton (Tex.) Stock Journal.

THERE is a church in Japan which has only twenty male members, and thirteen of these are local preachers who preach at a number of neighborhood stations during the week days. All these preachers work at their own expense, and the church accepts no new members except those who pledge themselves to work on this plan. Hence the exceeding paucity of the membership. In this country there are churches whose members are numbered by the hundreds, and a few who count by thousands, where most of the people whose names adorn the roll are religious dead-heads; who do no work, and do not even always report when the hat is passed round.

THE printers of the Philadelphia Inquirer set (not sat) up "The Night Before Christmas" twenty-seven years ago and the poem has been kept standing ever since, and was printed in that paper from the original types first used in 1848. SLEIGHING.

The sleigh drew up before the door,
The horses tramped the snow,
Her eyes with fun were brimming o'er—
She didn't want to go (?);
Her little foot the runner pressed,
I saw her dimpled chin,
Her little hand my own hand blessed,
And then—I tucked her in.

Hurrah! The horses bound along;
We reach the open plain:
My voice broke in a merry song,
She followed in the strain.
How glorious was the star-gemmed night,
But, then, 'twas awful cold;
I shortly found it must be right
Her muff to help her hold.

Song followed song—in careless mirth
We dashed along the way.
Ah, how much happiness of earth
Was tucked into that sleigh!
How lovingly the sweet blue eyes
Beamed softly in my own;
At last I caught, to my surprise,
A tremor in the tone.

The song we sang did not require
A shade of tremolo;
[illegible]
To hide the fault, I know—
In vain my heart with love beat high;
And—how, I may not tell—
I caught the sweet glance of her eye,
It faltered, and it fell.

"Darling!" I said, no other word
Was sung or breathed apart;
But list'ning close you might have heard
A singing in each heart.
Her voice has changed a bit, you see,
And somewhat sweeter grown,
And when we sleigh, I take with me
A darling of my own.

THE DYNAMITE PLOT.

Frightful Effects of the Explosion—Horrible Scenes at Bremerhaven after the Disaster.

The following particulars respecting the dynamite explosion at Bremerhaven are from the Weser Zeitung:

"It appears that just before the Mosel was about to sail, a cart, containing four cases and a barrel, was being unloaded for shipment. Suddenly a terrible explosion occurred. The effect was horrible. The quay was then thronged with people—partly belonging to the steamer, partly spectators, and partly passengers who had remained there to take a last farewell of their friends. An eye-witness who stood under the gangway of the Mosel, on hearing the terrible report saw a number of black lumps flying around about in the air, while very few of the persons on land remained visible. Apprehending a boiler explosion, he threw himself flat on the deck, where he received a volley of sand, broken glass, fragments of flesh, bones, etc. The devastation on board the Mosel was terrific. No skylight was left, the cabins aft, starboard and port were either crushed in or bulged out by the pressure, or altogether smashed; the side plates of the ship were burst, the ports, with their glasses and rivets, forced inward, and the whole ship was besmeared with blood and stuck over with pieces of flesh and other human debris. In the hold and all parts of the ship were found arms, legs and other portions of the human frame; thus the lower hold received some limbs through the open hatchways. The sides of the hatchways were burst by the pressure, and the front of the navigation cabin on deck stove in. The whole ship was littered with glass shreds, which even filled the dishes from the steam kitchen as they were being served to the 'tween deck steerage passengers. The tug got off comparatively unhurt, being so much below the quay line than the Mosel; still, the whole deck of it was destroyed. The crew came off with a mere fright, only the engineers and stokers having been hurt slightly. On land, where the package had been unloaded, a hole had been produced from six to seven feet deep. The whole place was strewn with limbs, shreds of dress, etc. In large reeking pools of blood you might see here an arm, there a calf, intestines, mutilated busts, etc. Among the most horrible details of this calamity is the fate of the Etmer family, who were seeing off one of their sons to California. The father, mother, son and son-in-law are dead, all four; the daughter-in-law had her arm, and her child its hand, blown off. The case which exploded had been in the care of the carrier, Westermann, of Bremerhaven, and was accompanied on its way to the steamer by a Mr. Tumforde, of whom it is said all trace has been lost. The cart has been shattered into thousands of splinters, and the poor horse has had his four feet blown off near the hoofs.

"The scene at the hospital dead-house was of the most harrowing character. The mutilated remains filled a large basket, which four strong men could hardly carry. There were also a number of heads, which from time to time were inspected by people looking for friends or relatives. About thirty wounded persons were in the hospital; many others were in private houses. Nearly every family in the little town has suffered severely."

One passenger speaking of the explosion, says: "I was leaning against the mast of the Mosel, enjoying the scene, when suddenly I fell flat on my face, and heard a terrific noise. I thought that the boiler of the Mosel had exploded at first, and then I imagined that it must certainly be the boiler of the steam-tug. Long pieces of wood, iron and glass, and parts of human bodies were falling around and upon me. The scene was awful."

Charles F. Mueller, of Milwaukee, Wis., who was on the Mosel at the time of the explosion, says he was thrown down the stairway of the cabin, and, recovering, he went forward and saw the deck covered with dead bodies and pools of blood. The bodies were mostly stripped of their clothing, and some were perfectly naked. "I covered up the nakedness of several of the dead, both men and women. I saw a Hebrew on a trunk, stripped of his clothing and apparently wounded. His head was falling back, and he appeared to be suffocating. I took some bedclothes out of the trunk, which was burst open by the explosion, and made a comfortable seat for him. Five minutes afterward he died. A sailor kindly brought him some water, but his mouth was filled with coagulated blood, and he could not swallow the water. I then attended a young lady who was screaming for help, and denuded of all her clothing from her waist. I covered her over with some sheeting. She had been struck with a bar of iron from the deck railings."

An Evidence of Immortality.

I find that what is called great and powerful life—the administration of large affairs, in commerce, in the courts, in the State—is prone to develop narrow and special talent; but, unless combined with a certain contemplative turn, a taste for abstract truth, for the moral laws, does not build up faith or lead to content. There is a profound melancholy at the base of men of active and powerful talent seldom suspected. Many years ago there were two men in the United States Senate, both of whom are now dead. I have seen them both; one of them I personally knew. Both were men of distinction, and took an active part in the politics of their day and generation. They were men of intellect, and one of them, at a later period, gave to a friend this anecdote: He said that when he entered the Senate he became in a short time intimate with one of his colleagues, and, though attentive enough to the routine of public duty, they daily returned to each other and spent much time in conversation on the immortality of the soul. When my friend at last left Congress, they parted, his colleague remaining there, and, as their homes were widely distant from each other, it chanced that he never met him again till, twenty-five years afterward, they saw each other through open doors, at a distance, in a crowded reception at the President's house in Washington. Slowly they advanced toward each other as they could through the brilliant company, and at last met, said nothing, but shook hands long and cordially. At last his friend said, "Any light, Albert?" "None," replied Albert. "Any light, Lewis?" "None," replied he. They looked into each other's eyes silently, gave one more last shake each to the hand he held, and thus parted for the last time. Now, I should say that the impulse which drew these minds to this inquiry through so many years was a better affirmative evidence than their failure to find a confirmation was negative.—R. W. Emerson's New Book.

The Great Appletonian Enterprise.

[New York Cor. Detroit Free Press.]

The Appletons advertise their new edition of the Cyclopedia as an appropriate holiday gift. It certainly is a most valuable and extraordinary work—undoubtedly the greatest literary enterprise ever undertaken in the United States. A little information concerning it may not be out of place. The work has now reached its fourteenth volume, and the two remaining volumes are in press, and will be issued within a few months. From the beginning of the first volume to the end of the last, the matter is almost entirely new. To call it a revision and elaboration of the first Cyclopedia, published fifteen years ago, would hardly be correct, the labor on this one being almost as great as the preparation of a completely original work of the same kind would be. Since it was taken in hand, three years ago, a very large literary force, comprising the foremost writers and scholars in the country, and working under the general directions of George Ripley and Charles A. Dana, has been steadily employed upon it. Pretty much every page of the old work has been re-written and the amount of new matter added would make a very respectable cyclopedia of itself. Moreover, there is scarcely a line in the whole sixteen volumes that has not been "boiled down," so to speak, half a dozen times after leaving the hands of the specialist who prepared it, so careful are the chief editors to have the work absolutely perfect in every respect. Among the writers engaged in the various departments are Robert Carter, Dr. A. H. Guernsey, Rossiter Johnson, Judge Cooley, Prof. J. C. Dalton, Prof. Richard A. Proctor, Prof. Youmans, Prof. T. S. Hunt, Prof. Kneeland, Prof. Drown, Prof. Joy, Count Pourtales, the Rev. Dr. Bernard O'Reilly, Mr. H. C. Baird, Dr. Hogeboom, Mr. Bing, Mr. Van Rhyn, Mr. Hawes, Mr. Burlingame and Mr. Heilprin, the latter a scholar of wonderful erudition, who examines every article after it is supposed to have received the finishing touches from half a dozen other hands. It is needless to say that the cost of the work must be enormous. Each volume stands the publishers in $30,000 before a copy is sold. Thus the outlay on the complete work is close on half a million dollars. The expenditure for wood engravings alone is about $80,000. All the paper that is used is made expressly for the Cyclopedia, and from type to binding it is special and new in every sense. It certainly far surpasses any other literary enterprise ever attempted in the United States, and is creditable in every way to the respectable house that has invested what might be considered a colossal fortune in it.

Old Maids.

A quaint and gallant writer, some fifty years ago, said: "I love an old maid—I use the single number, as speaking of a singularity in humanity. An old maid is not merely an antiquarian, she is an antiquity; not merely a record of the past, but the very past itself; she has escaped a great change, and sympathizes not in the ordinary mutations of morality. She inhabits a little eternity of her own. She is miss from the beginning of the chapter to the end. I do not like to hear them called mistress, as is sometimes the practice, for that looks and sounds like a resignation of despair, a voluntary extinction of hope. I do not know whether marriages are made in heaven; some people say they are, but I am almost sure old maids are. There is something about them which is not of the earth, earthly. They are spectators of the world—not adventurers or ramblers, perhaps guardians; we say nothing of tattlers. They are evidently predestined to be what they are. They owe not the singularity of their condition to any lack of beauty, wisdom, wit, or good temper; there is no accounting for it but on the plea of fatality. I have known many old maids, and of them all, not one that has not possessed as many good and amiable qualities as ninety and nine of a hundred of my married acquaintances. Why, then, are they single? It is their fate."

Remarkable Twin Brothers.

Residing at Crescent, Saratoga County, are two old men, hale and hearty. They are twin brothers, and yet, strange to say, the birthday of one comes in the present year, that of the other not until next year, one of them coming into the world on New Year's eve, and the other on New Year's morning. These old men are in their 74th year. Their names are G. G. J. Lansing and Vandenberg Lansing. One, whom his brother laughingly terms "the eldest," has retired from business with a competency, and the other is still engaged in the active pursuit of life, and claims to be able to do as good a day's work as ever. Another remarkable feature about these brothers is that, weighing as they now do nearly 200 pounds avoirdupois each, when first placed on the scales they weighed, clothes and all, the one three pounds and a quarter and the other four pounds. G. G. J. Lansing, who is a carpenter, within the past year framed and built a barn himself. The only help he received was in raising the frame. For a person 74 years old this is rather a remarkable feat.—Troy (N. Y.) Times.

"The Day We Celebrate."

Somebody has discovered and arranged the following, to show how marriage anniversaries may be celebrated systematically, correctly and according to Hoyle—possibly:

First anniversary—Iron.
Fifth anniversary—Wooden.
Tenth anniversary—Tin.
Fifteenth anniversary—Crystal.
Twentieth anniversary—China.
Twenty fifth anniversary—Silver.
Thirtieth anniversary—Cotton.
Thirty-fifth anniversary—Linen.
Fortieth anniversary—Woollen.
Forty-fifth anniversary—Silk.
Fiftieth anniversary—Golden.
Seventy-fifth anniversary—Diamond.

Iowa and Wisconsin.

The census of Iowa, taken the past summer, shows the State to have a population of 1,350,544, an increase since 1870 of 156,524. The census of Wisconsin taken last June, shows a population of 1,236,729 an increase of 182,059. It will thus be seen that Wisconsin has gained 25,535 more than Iowa in the past five years, and is now only 113,815 behind that State, although in 1870 she was behind 139,350. A continuance of a proportionate gain for ten years more would place Wisconsin above Iowa in point of population. This is certainly a splendid showing for Wisconsin, for it should be remembered that Iowa is one of the most prosperous of the Western States, and is older in State organization than Wisconsin.

There is little doubt that Wisconsin has shown a like progress in material wealth, and that financially she stands in the first rank. Her debt is comparatively small, being but $2,252,000. Only seven States that are older have less debts, and five that are younger—in other words, twelve States have less debts, while twenty-four have much larger. As the heaviest expenditures for improvements in the way of public institutions have been made, and these will only need to be enlarged from time to time, and as the taxable property is rapidly increasing in bulk, the rate of State taxation, which has never been very heavy, should steadily decline, and will do so if there is the proper management of State affairs. Low taxation, coupled with a thrifty condition of affairs, is the best inducement that a State can hold out to emigrants.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

A Brave Rescue.

About two p. m. yesterday, while Mr. J. G. Abbott, the expressman, was at his house in Lawrence, Mass., he heard loud screams, evidently coming from the Spicket River, near by. He ran to the bank and saw a lad in the middle of the river, clinging to the edge of the thin ice. Mr. Abbott seized a plank, ran it out to the boy, who caught one end and clung till he was rescued by Abbott and a man whose name is not known. As soon as the boy was on shore he said another boy was in the river and under the ice. A number of small air-holes were in the ice, which was hardly thicker than window-glass, and through one of these Mr. Abbott saw a little hand floating on the water. The ice was too thin to bear a man's weight, and Abbott watched the hand till it passed two holes. There was but one more hole, and Abbott, lying flat on the ice, crawled along till he could barely reach the edge of the ice. Presently the hand came in sight, and was caught, but it required the most careful maneuvering to draw out the boy. Owing to the small size of the opening, and the position of the body of the boy, it was extremely difficult to extricate him, and in drawing him out his face was badly cut. When taken from the water the lad's body was swollen, his face discolored, and he was apparently dead. Mr. Abbott hastened to a stable near by, and by his presence of mind and knowledge of resuscitation of drowning people, he restored the boy.—Boston Herald.

"Throw Physic to the Dogs; I'll None of It."

We do not in the least feel like blaming Macbeth for this expression of disgust; indeed, we are rather inclined to sympathize with him. Even nowadays most of the cathartics offered to the public are great, repulsive-looking pills, the very appearance of which is sufficient to "turn one's stomach." Had Macbeth ever taken Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets he would not have uttered those words of contempt. It is really encouraging, when one is ill, to find that a little, sugar-coated Pellet, no larger than a grain of mustard, will as promptly produce the desired effect as a dose of great, nauseating pills. These little Pellets, unlike other cathartics, are really nature's physic. They do not debilitate, but tone and invigorate the system. No family should be without Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets.

WHAT IS VEGETINE?—It is a compound extracted from barks, roots and herbs. It is nature's remedy. It is perfectly harmless from any bad effect upon the system. It is nourishing and strengthening. It acts directly upon the blood. It quiets the nervous system. It gives you good, sweet sleep at night. It is a great panacea for our aged fathers and mothers, for it gives them strength, quiets their nerves, and gives them nature's sweet sleep—as has been proved by many an aged person. It is the great blood purifier. It is a soothing remedy for our children. It has relieved and cured thousands. It is very pleasant to take; every child likes it. It relieves and cures all diseases originating from impure blood. Try the Vegetine. Give it a fair trial for your complaints; then you will say to your friend, neighbor, and acquaintance, "Try it; it has cured me."

ONLY 1,086,927 persons bathed in the Boston public baths last summer, a decrease of twenty-five per cent. as compared with the year before. The women bathers increased about twenty-five per cent. and the girls about three per cent., the falling off being among the men and boys.

CHAPPED hands, face, pimples, ringworm, saltrheum, and other cutaneous affections cured, and rough skin made soft and smooth, by using Juniper Tar Soap. Be careful to get only that made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, as there are many imitations made with common tar, all of which are worthless.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP, SEA WEED TONIC AND MANDRAKE PILLS.—These deservedly celebrated and popular medicines have effected a revolution in the healing art, and proved the fallacy of several maxims which have for many years obstructed the progress of medical science. The false supposition that "Consumption is incurable" deterred physicians from attempting to find remedies for that disease, and patients afflicted with it reconciled themselves to death without making an effort to escape from a doom which they supposed to be unavoidable. It is now proved, however, that Consumption can be cured, and that it has been cured in a very great number of cases (some of them apparently desperate ones) by Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup alone; and in other cases by the same medicine in connection with Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic and Mandrake Pills, one or both, according to the requirements of the case.

Dr. Schenck himself, who enjoyed uninterrupted good health for more than forty years, was supposed at one time to be at the very gate of death, his physicians having pronounced his case hopeless, and abandoned him to his fate. He was cured by the aforesaid medicines, and since his recovery, many thousands similarly affected have used Dr. Schenck's preparations with the same remarkable success.

Full directions accompany each, making it not absolutely necessary to personally see Dr. Schenck, unless patients wish their lungs examined, and for this purpose he is professionally at his principal office, Corner Sixth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, every Monday, where all letters for advice must be addressed. Schenck's medicines are sold by all druggists.

The Wonders of Modern Chemistry.
Sarsaparillian and Its Associates.
Changes as Seen and Felt as They Daily Occur after Using a Few Doses of
DR. RADWAY'S
Sarsaparillian
Resolvent,
THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

1. Good spirits, disappearance of weakness, languor, melancholy; increase and hardness of flesh and muscle, etc.
2. Strength increases, appetite improves, relish for food, no more sour eructations or waterbrash, good digestion, calm and undisturbed sleep, awaking fresh and vigorous.
3. Disappearance of spots, blotches, pimples; the skin looks clear and healthy, the urine changed from its turbid and cloudy appearance to a clear sherry or amber color; water passes freely from the bladder through the urethra without pain or scalding, little or no sediment; no pain or weakness.
4. Marked diminution of quantity and frequency of involuntary weakening discharges (if afflicted that way), with certainty of permanent cure. Increased strength exhibited in the secreting glands, and functional harmony restored to the several organs.
5. Yellow tinge on the white of the eyes, and the swarthy, saffron appearance of the skin changed to a clear, lively and healthy color.
6. Those suffering from weak or ulcerated lungs or tubercles will realize great benefit in expectorating freely the tough phlegm or mucous from the lungs, air cells, bronchi or windpipe, throat or head; diminution of the frequency of cough; general increase of strength throughout the system; stoppage of night sweats and pains and feeling of weakness around the ankles, legs, shoulders, etc.; cessation of cold and chills, sense of suffocation; hard breathing and paroxysms of cough on lying down or arising in the morning. All these distressing symptoms gradually and surely disappear.
7. As day after day the SARSAPARILLIAN is taken, new signs of returning health will appear, as the blood improves in strength and purity, disease will diminish, and all foreign and impure deposits, nodes, tumors, cancers, hard lumps, etc., be resolved away and the unsound made sound and healthy; ulcers, fever sores, syphilitic sores, chronic skin disease gradually disappear.
8. In cases where the system has been salivated, and Mercury, Quicksilver, Corrosive Sublimate, (the principal constituent in the advertised Sarsaparillas, associated in some cases with Hyd. of Potassa) have accumulated and become deposited in the bones, joints, etc., causing caries of the bones, rickets, spinal curvatures, contortions, white swellings, varicose veins, etc., the SARSAPARILLIAN will resolve away these deposits and exterminate the virus of the disease from the system.
9. If those who are taking these medicines for the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous or Syphilitic diseases, however slow may be the cure "feel better," and find their general health improving, their flesh and weight increasing, or even keeping its own, it is a sure sign that the cure is progressing. In these diseases the patient either gets better or worse—the virus of the disease is not inactive; if not arrested and driven from the blood, it will spread and continue to undermine the constitution. As soon as the SARSAPARILLIAN makes the patient "feel better," every hour you will grow better and increase in health, strength and flesh.

The great power of this remedy is in diseases that threaten death—as in Consumption of the Lungs and Tuberculous Phthisis, Scrofula, Syphiloid Diseases, Wasting, Degeneration, and Ulceration of the Kidneys, Diabetes, Stoppage of Water (instantaneous relief afforded where catheters have to be used, thus doing away with the painful operation of using these instruments), dissolving stone in the bladder, and in all cases of Inflammation of the Bladder and Kidneys, in Chronic cases of Leucorrhea and Uterine diseases.

In tumors, nodes, hard lumps and syphiloid ulcers; in dropsy and venereal sore throat, ulcers, and in tubercles of the lungs; in gout, dyspepsia, rheumatism, rickets; in mercurial deposits—it is in these terrible forms of disease, where the human body has become a complete wreck, and where every hour of existence is torture, wherein this great remedy challenges the astonishment and admiration of the sick. It is in such cases, where all the pleasures of existence appear cut off from the unfortunate, and by its wonderful, almost superhuman agency, it restores the hopeless to a new life and new existence where this great remedy stands alone in its might and power.

In the ordinary skin diseases that every one is more or less troubled with, a few doses will in most cases, and a few bottles in the more aggravated forms, work a permanent cure.

Those afflicted with chronic diseases should purchase a package containing one dozen bottles. Price $10 per dozen, or $5 per half dozen bottles, or $1 per bottle. Sold by druggists.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN INDIANA, JAN., 20th, 1876

They do say that the meeting of the Republican Convention at Cincinnati was to conciliate the Liberals.

Parties desiring to attack crooked corporations would accomplish more, possibly by sending their anonymous communications to the concern attacked, rather than into our waste basket.

The Republican bosses of the State have about concluded that they will not postpone the time for holding their State Convention. It will be pertty sure to meet on the 22d of February.

Just what Morton put in the Republican convention call is not certain. We are sure he had nothing to do with the peace and harmony proposition, though men do sometimes commit suicide.

The Republican of the Ohio Legislature turned two wounded, Democratic soldiers out of office and put negroes in their place. This is the party that claims to be the especial friend of soldiers.

ALL other scarecrows having failed, the dying Jeff. Davis is now held up to frighten the people away from the pursuit of the profligates who are squandering the people's money by millions. The scheme will fail.

Tom. C. Mays, of the Auburn Courier, received the appointment at Washington of clerk in the Dept. of "Public Buildings," etc. We are happy to know that he has been successful at least.—[Garrett City News.

Thank you, Bro. Maloney.

The negroes of Iowa recently had a big State Convention and passed resolutions favoring Grant for a third term. The Washington city colored gentlemen did the same thing a few days ago Bishop Havens is correspondingly happy.

Mr. Murray, of the South Bend Herald, has been prostrated again by the reopening of his wound, but it is believed he will soon recover. He is now at his father's house, in Goshen, where he will remain until fully recovered.

The project of building a ship canal from Lake Michigan to Lake Erie is again doing talked up along the proposed route. It is not improbable that such a water route will be made some day but it will undoubtedly be in the distant future.

Thomas A. Hendricks is rapidly gaining strength in all parts of the country, and unless something wholly unforseen occurs befor the assembling of the national democratic convention, he will undoubtedly receive the presidential nomination.

The Chicago Democrats held a rousing big meeting on the 8th of January for the reorganization of the party in Illinois. Ex-Senators Trumbull and Doolittle were among the chief speakers and the meeting was very auspicious of a brighter state of affairs for the party in Chicago For several years there has been no organized Democratic party in Chicago.

The Colorado Springs Gazette tells about a little episode which happened to O'Keefe, of the signal office, and a mule, on the Pike's Peak trail. They were struggling up the mountain, and had passed above timber-line when the mule, which was loaded with provisions, made a misstep and tumbled over a cliff 200 feet high. In the descent he turned his heels up and struck square on the back, and bounded like a rubber ball. The beast was not killed, but was in a very feeble condition at last accounts.

The amendment to the constitution limiting the tenure of the presidential office to one term of six years, introduced by Randall, does not strike us favorably. Six years is too long for a poor president, and four years too short for a first rate one Let there be an end to amending the constitution The Democracy will soon be in power again, and as they did so well for so many years after the old fashion, that it is probable the country would worry along for twenty or thirty years of this century with the regular four years term. If it were certain that the Republicans would carry the day for another term, we should favor shortening the time to two years. But as that is not probable the present law is good enough.

Rebels in Office.

By reference to the communication of our editor, at Washington, it will be seen that the terrible cry set up by the "blood and bones" party, is the last futile wail of an insane criminal When we hear such wholesale lying and such low and foul misrepresentations, only to incite the passions of the ignorant, is it not time to stop and consider in what direction we are drifting. Every administration paper ever since the opening of the present Congress, has been teeming full of charges and fulminations against the Democrats, because they have appointed a few ex-rebels to some menial places in the House of Representatives. They have charged that Union soldiers have been dismissed to give place to rebels—that the Democrats prefered those who fought for the confederacy and thereby reason and charge that the Democratic party were and are in sympathy with the rebels, and consequently rebels themselves. Now how is it in the last Congress when the Republicans were in the majority? They had 153 men to do what 85 Democrats are now doing. Of these 153 only 18, or less than 12 per cent. were Union soldiers, and of the 85 Democratic appointees 26 or thirty per cent. are Union soldiers. Now if the last Congress, which was Republican had did as well as the present Democratic House, for the Union soldiers, they would have had 46 instead of 18 Unionists. And if the present House had followed the example of the previous one then there would have been only 10 instead of 26 Union soldiers appointed.

Thus we see that for the merest pretext a most uncupulous tirade of lies and misrepresentations continued and followed up; and for no other purpose than to influence the passions and keep alive the bitter animosities of the late civil war. Nothing, it seems, can be done or suggested by a Democrat unless this cry of rebel and traitor is set up from one end of the country to another by these self-lauding Unionists. Not a proposition in or out of Congress can be made unless there comes a perfect volley of charges of treason and treachery against the majority in the House, and this has been carried to such an extent that it has become a stench in the nostrils of all fair-minded men. No argument is ever used but in its place the vilest vituperation, which the utterer knows is false and slanderous.

When we first commenced selling Teas there was very little sold in this place; the reason was they were sold so high that parties clubbed together and sent to New York to get their Teas because they could save 20c to 5 on the pound. This we have all challenged, we not only sell teas and sugars as cheap as they do in New York, but cheaper. The freight is but a trifle and our immense sales of 40 to 50 chests a month enables us to undersell all competitors. No 3 or 4 profits with us. No middle men to handle our goods. We purchase of the Imorters and sell direct to consumers, there saving our customers the profits of the Speculator, Jobber and Wholesale Merchant, which is at least 15 to 25 per cent.

Queen Esther.

Our local singers gave the above entertainment at Angola, last Saturday evening, to a very good house. From what we hear the citizens of our neighboring city speaks highly of the Auburn ites as songsters. Several other invitations have been received and it is more than likely that the groupe will visit other towns close by.

BABCOCK.

Our enterprising hardware man, D. D Snyder, Esq., has purchased a Babcock fire extinguisher, for the protection of fire at his place of business. If each of our merchants would do this we could have a "little fire company of our own" and if a fellow wasn't on time and missed one or two meetings he wouldn't have to pay a fine. We hope others will follow this example.

The Game Law.

We were informed by Dr. J. H Ford that the game law does not take effect the first of this month, as we stated last week, but the first of February. We don't indulge in any of this kind of sport but do occasionally shoot (ourselves); but our gun is without lock, trigger or stock, and the law has nothing to do with this kind of a shooter.

A book agent called on a farmer the other day, and was told that the farmer was too busy to talk with him. "But, "said the agent, "your farm work is all done. You have nothing to occupy your time?" "Yas I have, too," retorted the farmer; "I've got to plant my foot and raise a book agent." And he did He raised him about four feet.

Beware of Burglars.

We want to say to our readers that burglars are in the country, and they might give you a call. Bolt your doors, set your extention tables up to every window, and nail them down, to boot. Make the boys take turn about setting up, with double charged cartridges, and six shooter revolvers—cocked and ready to she-bang. Get fourteen rat-tarrier pups and lay the broom on the foot of the bed for the old woman.—There's lots 'o ways to catch 'em and lets be up and doin',

The warm spring-like weather of the past two weeks beats the oldest inhabitant. None can definitely say that ever in the history of this country they have experienced just such a season. Seldom has mercury touched zero during the winter, and last week was exactly such weather as we might reasonably expect about the middle of April. On Friday and Saturday the thermometer rose above 60. Wheat fields are growing greener every day, the grass begins to shoot, and the swelling buds show signs of foliation. How long, oh Probabilities, will this be thus?

A Man Killed at Garrett.

Last week a gentleman who went by the name of Dr. Williams, and was employed in the stock yard, at the above place, got almost instantly killed by jumping on the step of an engine to ride a short distance and then run ahead and change the switch. In his motion to jump the step gave away and he fell under the train, the wheels of several cars passing over his limbs taking them off near the hip. He was taken to the hotel when he soon passed away.

Death Sentence

Wall, the murderer, at Fort Wayne, was sentenced to be hung by Judge Bordon. He says; It now becomes my painful but necessary duty to pronounce judgment and sentence upon you, which sentence is that you, Joseph Wall, be taken from the bar of this court back to the jail of this county, from whence you came, and there be safely kept in close custody until Monday, the 13th day of March, 1876, and that you then in a private inclosure as near the jail as possible, between the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 3 o'clock in the afternoon, be hung by the neck until your are dead. And may Almighty God have mercy on your soul.

The prisoner stood while the judge pronounced these terrible words, calm, immovable, unflinching.

BURGLARS AT WORK!

They secreted their goods in the ruins of the Woolen Factory, and came after them in Daylight.

They chose Jno. L. Davis, Esq., for their Victim.

On last Sunday night about 1 o'clock burglars entered the popular Hardware Store of the aboved named gentleman, and made a clean sweep of everything in the show case, among which were some valuable silver spoons, knives and forks, pocket knives, razors, revolvers, &c. The back door was broken open and then everything was clear for the theives.

Great excitement prevailed in the morning, and Sheriff Meese and his corps started in persuit of the theives. They had gone but a very short distance when a young boy, of about 16 summers, by the name of Weyer, was seen going through the creek bottom with a bag across his shoulder, and when captured it proved to contain the articles stolen the night before. He made no attempt to get away and from the way he took hold of the matter one would judge that he had but little experience in the "burglar profession."

THE BOYS EVIDENCE.

We visited the Jail with the Sheriff and J. L. Davis, and upon questioning Weyer, he gave the following evidence:

"Last night, at about 8 o'clock, I met two tramps in front of the Main street brick block. After a short conversation they made arrangements with me to get these goods. They told me that they would procure them and where they would place them. The men were strangers to me. They both had short red hair and whiskers, dressed in black clothes.

During the day Weyer went to G. H. Munns store and bought a satchel, and promised to pay him in the afternoon. He also told parties that he was going away on a visit the same day. The satchel was in his possession when caught, which was procured undoubtedly to carry the goods in—but now he don't need the goods or anything to carry them in. He's foul—within the bard of one of the best jails in the State.

The transaction astonished many of our citizens as Weyer has always been a quiet and well-behaved boy. He is never seen in bad company, never known to use profanity, never known to use intoxicating liquors and was generally termed, a promising youth.

Later.—Sheriff Meese informs us that young Weyer has told where he conceiled the missing revolvers, and acknowledged that he done the stealing alone.—Mr. Davis says that his goods are all returned.

Teacher's Institute.

Pursuant to previous notice, the Teacher's Institute convened on Tuesday, Jan. 13th, and continued three days. The Institute was called to order by the President, W. C. McGonigal, and Lottie Chilson was elected Secretary. The following persons enrolled their names:

J. A. Barnes, County Supt.

W. C. McGonigal, Teacher No. 5.

W. H. Keeran, } Teacher No. 1.
D. G. Bell, }

Josie Thomas, Teacher No. 2.

Visiting Teachers, Ella Comparet, Laura Murphy, Anna Cohill, Jas. Taylor, Almeda Ackley, Etta Wanemaker, Ella Joslin, Mary Greenwalt, Jennie Smith, Ralston Young, Amanda Miller, Miss Gee, Letitia Coats, Miss Wyatt, and Charles Bartlett.

Trustee Rodarmer, J. Gunsenhouser J. N. Miller, Alex. Compart, and many other citizens were present.

The exercises each day were conducted by Superintendent Barnes and the Teachers, and consisted of Analysis in Grammar, Reading, Physical and Descriptive Geography, Map Drawing, History, etc. Sessions were held on Thursday and Friday evenings for the discussion of the following questions:

Resolved, That Township Teachers Institute should be abolished.

What are the relations the teacher sustains to parents, and what to the State?

The Institute was well attended during the entire session, and a greater interest manifested by Teachers and citizens than at any previous Institute. The reports of the Teachers of the different schools show that the schools are doing well, and the efforts to raise the standard of common schools are being appreciated.

Supt. Barns closed the Institute with appropriate remarks, encouraging the Teachers in their work.

W. C. McGONIGAL, Prest.
Lottie Chilson, Sec'y.

The teachers of Union-tp, met at the school house of district No. 2 for the purpose of holding an institute. The house was called to order by Mr. Frets, and Mr. Hadsell was elected president, Mr. Winslow, critic. First was a recitation in arithmetic, conducted by J C. Frets, subject common proportion. Next spelling by A. J. Beard, and then remarks on the best methods of teaching physiology, by several teachers. Mr. Miller was elected president for the session, and Mr. Coe secretary. After this there was a recitation in arithmetic, conducted by Henry Coe, followed by a class in reading, J. A. Krum. The recitations were all followed by general discussions of the best methods of presenting the subjects under consideration to schools. The teachers were all present and all took an active part. The President elect for next session announced the programme, and institute adjourned to meet Feb. 12, 1876.

Washington Correspondence.

Dear Courier—I have been enjoying for the first time in my life, one of those general debates, that are peculiar to the House of Representatives, and to a stranger of such scenes, you may be sure it was exhilerating. At times it became so noisy and exciting that you feel just like yelling out with your entire lung capacity. The debate on the General Amnesty bill, introduced by Mr Randall was unusually stormy. Blaine Cox, Garfield, Banks, Kelley, Hill of Georgia, and Mr. Randall participated. The debate was commenced by Mr. Blaine, moving a reconsideration, after the bill had been voted on, and failed to pass, and for three days bitter speeches, full of the animosities of the war came up like a deluge, and the plasters for the healing wounds, between north and south were torn away, and the wounds open anew, by the party of hate even in this the begining of our glorious centennial. Blaine fumed and bullied, and submitted an amendment excluding Jeff Davis from the bill, and I think it would have been best to have accepted the amendment as nothing short of that can pass the Senate. Gen. Banks made a speech in which he counseled harmony between all sections, and thought it would be a grand inauguration of the centennial year, to extend amnesty to all. He referred in touching words to the celebration of Bunker Hill last June where the soldiers of South Carolina and Massachusetts met as Americans, and closed with an eloquent appeal for General Amnesty. Judge Kelly also favored the bill, and made a short speech in support of it. Blaine's bitter spseech was answered by Sunset Cox, who made Mr. Blaine's ambition for the Presidency the target of his merciless humor. Mr Cox was almost cruel in the sport he made of the ex-Speaker's vanity on the subject. It was a terrible castigation, and Blaine winced under his telling blows.

I went down to the Presidents reception the other day, but the White House was so crowded I soon came away. I don't want to go until I can get a chance to speak to the President myself, as I have several messages to deliver from my friends at home, which I am sure he will be delighted to hear. Somebody has told Gen. Babcock that White Stockings might be purchased for $1,000, and I am expecting a card every moment to call at the Executive Mansion.

I see a great many Republican papers call this the ex-Confederate House, and charge that Union Soldiers have been discharged and Confederates put in their places. I thought I would look up this question the other day; so I went to Mr. Fitzhugh the Doorkeeper, and here is the result of my examination of the pay rolls. Of the 153 appointments made by the doorkeeper of the last House of Representatives, only 18 were Union soldiers, while out of the 85 appointments allowed to the doorkeeper of the present House 26 Union-soldiers have been appointed. In view of what has been said, this agreeable, surprising information is based upon the official roll of the doorkeeper, and is of course absolutely accurate. What must be the astonishment of the people when they learn that the party that claimed the exclusive championship of the Union soldiers in point of fact treated them worse than the democrats, who are charged with turning them out of office

My record as a soldier, won for me the position I am now occupying. In one respect I regret to say that I expect to remain in Washington during the session of Congress. It will necessarily seperate me from many friends in DeKalb friends whom I love and admire, for their many kindnesses and good qualities, and many of whom read the Courier. I will promise, however, to keep them posted in a limited way of matters in the Capitol, and if possible make it interesting. I have been elected Clerk to three Committes, Public Buildings and Grounds, Expenditures of Treasury Department, and Expenditures of War Dept. You see the way I came to get three committes, was from the fact that the Democrats are bound to economise and retrench, and to do so they grouped several committes under one clerk. This cuts down the clerical force 8 or 10 on the last Congress. I am located in the south-east corner of the Capitol, have a large room handsomely furnished, and would be glad to see any of my friends from Indiana, who may wander this way but to tell the truth I would rather live at Auburn on the same salary.

TOM.

Chas Maurham feels a little grieved over the notice we published last week under the head of "Barber's Itch." We gave S. Pommert and B. Edgerton, a notice at the bottom of the article, but had no thoughts of hurting Maurham. We gave the above gentlemen the notice because they are old patrons of the office and have done work for us all, during the last five years. We don't mean to say that the disease spoken of above is connected with Mr. Maurham's shop, as we never had any work done with him, and consequently cannot say. To judge from the looks of Mr. M's shop, one would readily make up his mind that he was a clean and tasty barber. We make this correction to show Charley that we have naught against him. The notice we published was paid for, and we published it more for the "stamps" than any other thing.

We are indebted to parties unknown for several handsome photographs.

PERSONAL.

—E. F. Rundall, is now rusticating in New York.

—Kenny Rush started for Missouri last Wednesday morning.

—Dr. J. J. Littlefied and family have moved back to the city again.

—We are informed that Wm. Long and family will leave the city in a short time.

—Mr. Kahn of the Seventh-st clothing house, is visiting friends at Indianapolis this week.

—Hank Long, of the Kendallville "Standard" is visiting his parents in the city this week.

—Cy. Boughan, took a trip to Illinois this week. We learn he is after a position as brakeman on a railway train.

—The Courier office is under obligations to the gentlemanly and accommodating agent at the Junction, Mr. Shiffer for favors received.

—Frank Benedict, of Huron, Ohio, is in the city. Frank and his brother-in-law will build a brick building in the spring, where Williams, & McDougal now holds forth.

BUTLER ITEMS.

Butler, Jan. 18, 1876.

—Some of our young men were out serenading last night.

—Of course it is unnecessary for one to speak of the roads—they speak for themselves.

—I wonder if anybody will ever know of a time the people will not call "hard times."

—Quite an impromptu little party was gathered at Mr. Price's, Monday evening, for the benefit of Mr. Price and Mr. Rice.

—The Leap Year Party claims the interest of the majority, and it is expected to be a very pleasant affair, but did you ever know of a lady-real lady I mean showing her invitations to all the other ladies; and you would not entertain the idea for a moment that a gentleman would boast of, and show his invitations to other gentlemen, would you? Certainly not.

—The surprise party was a complete success. On last Thursday night while the Rev. J. N. Morris of the Lutheran church and his estimable lady were at prayer meeting the citizens of this place or a large number of them, in a clandestine way took possession of the house and by the time he and his wife arrived at home the house was full of many of the best people in town. The door having been opened by someone inside, the two were invited in and after the usual civilities and some hasty questions as to what it all meant, they were both requested to go into the kitchen where they found the table and almost every other available place filled up to overflowing, with not only the necessaries but the luxuries of life. Canned fruit of all kindi, tea, coffee, sugar, and—it is useless to try to mention the different articles, for which he very courteously thanked all interested and hopes during his stay among the people of Butler they may never have occasion to regret their liberality to him on last Thursday night. The lady members of the Lutheran church are entitled to the credit of getting up the surprise which was well done.

"LENA."

When we entered the barber shop the other day, our heart was touched, and our tongue was silent. We felt bad. Looking in the chair we saw a great mass of gray hair, and if we could but describe our fears and place our thoughts into words, they would bring tears to an artificial eye. But its beyond our grasp We sat waiting for our turn, and when the barber said "set up," we braced up and shaped ourselves to gaze once more on the form, which we thought would soon lie moulding in the grave. But that wasn't the way of it at all. To our great surprise we reconized the face The barber called out "next" and the "old man" made a Mark on the wall (a barbers ledger) and a Rush for—school.

Catarrh.—If you would avoid being rendered deaf or unfit to mingle in society, on account of foul and nauseating discharges from gangrenous ulcers in the head, use Dr. Detchon's celebrated Catarrh Remedy. THE EAST.

The bad little boy who has recently been passing himself off at St. Albans, Vt., for Charley Ross, turns out, as was expected, to be a bogus Charley. He was taken to Milford, N. H., the other day, where he was recognized by his mother as Jimmy Blanchard. He is a precocious young rascal, and will some day get into the Penitentiary, or Congress, or some other bad place.

Gov. Tilden refuses to pardon Stokes.... Dr. Samuel G. Howe, an eminent scientist and philanthropist, died at Boston last week, aged 75 years. Dr. Howe was the inventor of the alphabet of raised letters for the blind.....All of the churches invited by Mrs. Moulton to the Mutual Council have been heard from, and all have accepted. The list is said to include some of the most eminent clergymen in the denomination.

The famous Singer will case has been decided in favor of Mrs. Isabella Energie Singer, named in the bill propounded. The Judge rules that she was the widow of the deceased, and her children his legitimate offspring. The application of Mrs. Mary Singer (Miss Foster), the second wife, who claimed that she is entitled to a widow's dower, is denied. The amount involved is between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

Ockershausen Brothers, sugar refiners, of New York, have failed. Liabilities, $375,000. ....Messrs. Shearman & Stirling, counsel for the Rev. H. W. Beecher, in the suit brought against him for malicious prosecution by Francis D. Moulton, have served on Gen. Pryor, counsel for plaintiff, a demurrer upon the ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.

The Treasurer of Pennsylvania, in his report, figures the State debt at $13,786,564.... The New York papers state that the counsel for Joseph Loader is making preparations for a suit against Henry Ward Beecher, claiming damages for malicious prosecution....There is no diminution in the attendance at the Moody and Sankey revival meetings in Philadelphia.

Capt. Josiah Briggs, of Coxsackie, N. Y., with his wife and two children, were drowned in the Hudson River one night last week. They were returning from church, the mother and children on a hand-sled, which the Captain was propelling across the river. The ice gave way, and the whole family were precipitated into the stream....Joseph Lapage, the perpetrator of one of the most horrible murders ever known—that of the village beauty, Josie Langmaid, who was waylaid while on her way to school at Suncook, N. H., and the discovery of whose frightfully mutilated remains and the intense thrill of horror which the event produced throughout the country are yet fresh in mind—has been found guilty of murder in the first degree, and sentenced to be hanged at the expiration of a term of one year in the State Prison at Concord.

THE WEST.

There is believed to be imminent danger of an Indian outbreak at the Red Cloud Agency in consequence of an insufficient supply of provisions....At Osborn, Mo., a few nights ago, burglars broke into a drug store and stole a quantity of chloroform with which they drugged the whole town. They went through both hotels, all the stores, and many private residences. They secured several thousand dollars and escaped.

Advices from the plains report an immense herd of buffalo, 80 miles long, in the vicinity of Cheyenne River Agency....A very rich deposit of gold has been struck in the Centennial lode, near Laramie City, Wyoming Territory.

Timothy Kirby, an old citizen of Cincinnati, died last week, aged 81 years, leaving an estate estimated at between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. Among the few heirs are Donn Piatt and Congressman H. B. Banning....Missouri boasts of eight murderers under sentence of death.

The Centennial Mine, situated near Laramie City, Wyoming, is pronounced the richest gold mine ever found on the continent....A bill to provide for compulsory education has been introduced in the Ohio Legislature.

J. K. Hallowell, a well-known citizen of Kansas City, Mo., was fatally wounded, a few nights ago, by the accidental discharge of a pistol which he had placed under his pillow upon retiring....St. Louis offers her new and commodious Merchants' Exchange Hall for the use of the Democratic and Republican National Conventions if they will meet in that city.... Brick Pomeroy is going to start a daily Democratic newspaper in Chicago.

The tree-planters of Minnesota have organized themselves into the "Minnesota Forestry Association," and fixed the first Tuesday in May for Arbor Day....The repeal of the Potter law in Wisconsin is recommended in the message of Gov. Ludington, who says that the effect of the law has been to impair the credit of the State, and urges the necessity of a careful and thorough revision of the existing enactments on this subject....The Milwaukee Grand Jury has returned eight indictments in the whisky cases....The Overland Monthly magazine, of San Francisco, is dead.

THE SOUTH.

Friday, the 7th inst., was a good day for hanging in Tennessee, and four murderers were swung into eternity—Bill Williams, colored, at Bartlett; Frank Scott, colored, at Memphis, and Milton McLean, white, at Jackson.

The City Administrator of New Orleans reports the debt of that city over $21,000,000.

Jack Low and Mike Knuckley were shot and killed by Tom Picket, a barkeeper at Pass Christian, Miss., one day last week....The distribution of troops in Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana on the 1st of December last was as follows: Alabama, 5 companies; Mississippi, 6; at Little Rock, Ark., 2 companies; in Louisiana, 19 companies. Total, 32 companies, comprising 1,241 men....The Gulf Hotel, at New Orleans, has been destroyed by fire.

WASHINGTON.

Secretary Bristow gives it out that no compromise with the Chicago whisky thieves will be tolerated.

A Washington telegram says there is to be an immediate concentration of our available naval force at Port Royal, S. C....An important bill has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Mr. McCrary, of Iowa, to reorganize the judiciary of the United States. The purpose of the measure is to facilitate the administration of justice in the Federal Courts. This is a reform imperatively demanded. The business of the Supreme Court is fully two years in arrears, and is constantly increasing. There are over 800 cases upon the docket now awaiting consideration. Mr. McCrary proposes a plan by which both the Circuit and Supreme Courts can be relieved without creating new offices, and yet the right of appeal be preserved.... Representative Whitthorne, Chairman of the House Naval Committee, is said to be in favor of the abolition of all the New England navy yards, and the committee will probably report bills looking to that end.

The following are the principal points of Mr. Morrison's new financial bill, introduced into the House: The first section requires the Secretary of the Treasury to retain all gold not required for interest on the public debt until the amount is 30 per cent. of the outstanding United States notes. The second section requires the banks to keep 30 per cent. of all interest received on bonds in coin to the account of the legal reserves, and also such other additional sum as, added to the amount of the reserve, will equal 30 per cent. of the bank circulation. The third section repeals the legal-tender act, to take effect when the 30 per cent. of the first and second sections is reached, and repeals, to take effect at once, so much of the resumption act of 1875 as fixes Jan. 1, 1879, as the date of resumption.... Speaker Kerr has appointed the following committee to investigate the Rio Grande troubles: Schleicher, A. S. Williams (Mich.), Lamar, Banks and Hurlbut. The following is the select committee on the Freedmen's Bank failure: Douglass, Bradford, Stenger, Riddle, Hooker, Bliss, Farwell, Frost and Rainey.

Mr. Davis, of West Virginia, has introduced in the Senate a resolution asking for a committee to investigate the Treasury bookkeeping between the years 1869 and 1872. He claims that during that year the books were manipulated so that do not accurately represent the condition of the public debt.... Eulogies upon the life and services of the late Andrew Johnson, United States Senator from Tennessee and ex-President of the United States, were delivered in both houses of Congress, on the 11th inst. In the Senate Mr. Morton was the second speaker. He paid a high tribute to the honesty and bravery of Mr. Johnson, and to his services, alluding with graceful dignity to the impeachment trial, and asking for the dead that his faults be buried and his usefulness only remembered.

The House Judiciary Committee have agreed to report a constitutional amendment fixing the term of the office of President of the United States at six years, and making him ineligible to hold the same office again....A delegation of Cherokee, Choctaw, Creek and Seminole Indians called upon the President the other day to express their opposition to the proposed Territorial Government in their country. The President informed them that no bill passed by Congress for that purpose would receive his approval without the consent of the Indians.

The United States Senate has settled the tenure of the Hon. Thomas W. Ferry as Acting Vice-President by the adoption of a resolution declaring that the President pro tem. of the Senate holds his position for no definite term, but merely at the pleasure of that body. The vote on the passage of the resolution was as follows: Yeas—Alcorn, Allison, Anthony, Booth, Boutwell, Bruce, Cameron (Wis.), Christiancy, Clayton, Conkling, Cragin, Dawes, Edmunds, Frelinghuysen, Hamilton, Hamlin, Ingalls, Kernan, Key, McDonald, McMillan, Mitchell, Morrill (Me.), Morton, Oglesby, Paddock, Patterson, Sargent, Saulsbury, Spencer, Wadleigh, West, Windom, Wright—34. Nays—Bogy, Caperton, Cooper, Davis, Eaton, Goldthwaite, Johnston, McCreery, Merrimon, Randolph, Stevenson, Thurman, Wallace, Whyte, Withers—15.

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

Friday, Jan. 7.—Senate—Allison introduced a bill for the sale of certain Shawnee Indian lands. ....Wright introduced a bill granting pensions to officers of the war of 1812....An effort was made to get up for action the resolution to proceed to the election of a President pro tem. of the Senate, but it failed....Adjourned to Monday, Jan. 10.

House—The House was not in session.

Monday, Jan. 10.—Senate—Sargent presented the petition of 26,616 women of Utah, asking for the repeal of the Anti-Polygamy law of 1862 and the Poland bill, and that Utah be admitted as a State into the Union....Thurman presented a petition of citizens of Ohio, asking for the repeal of the Resumption act....Conover submitted a resolution declaring that the President be requested to maintain strict neutrality between Spain and Cuba. Ordered printed....Morton submitted a resolution declaring "that the Hon. Thomas W. Ferry, Senator from Michigan, who was elected President pro tempore of the Senate at the last session, is now President pro tempore by virtue of said election." Ordered printed and laid on the table.

House—Wood (N. Y.) introduced a bill to "facilitate resumption of specie payment without contraction."... After considerable parliamentary sparring between Blaine and Randall, a vote was reached on the bill granting full amnesty to all who took part in the rebellion, including Jeff Davis. The bill was rejected—yeas, 172; nays, 97; not the requisite two-thirds in the majority. After the vote had been recorded, Blaine secured the floor and delivered what Cox termed "a red and fiery speech." He said that "of the 18,000 disfranchised by the Fourteenth Amendment, only 750 still remained under the disability of their treason, and he declared himself ready to enfranchise these, save only Jeff Davis, and he would exempt him, not because he was the conspicuous and inefficient chief of the Confederacy, but because his murderous crimes at Andersonville had placed him beyond the recognition of humanity, and had made him the rival in barbarous atrocities of the Duke of Alva, or the instigators of St. Bartholomew, and of the authors of the Spanish Inquisition." Cox replied to Blaine, characterizing the latter's speech as ill-tempered, unstatesmanlike, and a demagogical bid for the Presidency.

Tuesday, January 11. — Senate — Paddock introduced a bill to enable New Mexico to come into the Union as a State....Bogy introduced a bill to establish a branch mint at St. Louis....Dorsey offered a bill for the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi at Memphis....The death of Andrew Johnson was announced, and the usual eulogies pronounced.

House—The debate on the Amnesty bill was continued, Ben Hill (Ga.) replying to Blaine's speech of yesterday....Morrison introduced a bill to prepare for the resumption of specie payments....The Pension Appropriation bill was reported from the committee. It appropriates $28,533,500.

Wednesday, Jan. 12.—Senate—The Senate spent the entire day in the debate on Morton's resolution regarding the Presidency pro tem. The resolution which was under consideration, and which was the only one of special importance, was that declaring that the Senate could at any time elect a President pro tem. This was adopted by a vote of 34 to 15.

House—A large number of bills were introduced, including the following: By Morey, to strengthen the credit of the reconstructed States and afford them financial relief; by Durham to permit tobacco growers to sell to consumers tobacco of their own growth without license; by Dibrell, to make it a misdemeanor for United States officials to demand contributions to election funds; by Landers, to establish a mint at Indianapolis; by Caulfield, to establish a mint at Chicago; by Burchard (Ill.), requiring national banks to prepare for specie payments; by Whiting, to divide the State of Illinois into three judicial districts; by Wilke, to settle the accounts between the United States and the States of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois; also for a public building at Quincy, Ill....The House resumed consideration of the Amnesty bill, and was addressed by Garfield.

Thursday, Jan. 13.—Senate—Christiancy submitted a resolution directing the Judiciary Committee to inquire whether the act of March 1, 1792, is not defective in making necessary provision for the contingencies that may arise in case of the death, removal or resignation of the President, and if so, to report a bill remedying the defect. Adopted....Davis (W. Va.) addressed the Senate in support of his resolution calling for an investigation of the Treasury. Boutwell replied, defending the Treasury Department against the charge of discrepancies and inaccuracies in the book-keeping.

House—Cox offered a resolution directing an inquiry into the cost of printing done at the Government office, and what similar work can be done for in private offices. Adopted....A resolution was adopted instructing the Judiciary Committee to inquire into the propriety of giving to citizens of the Territories the right to vote for President....The House resumed consideration of the Amnesty Bill, Blaine replying to Hill's speech of yesterday. He was followed by Banks, Tarbox and Morey, who spoke in favor of complete amnesty, Randall closing the debate. The bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Athletic Sports.

Commenting upon the late wrestling match that came off in Detroit, the Free Press indulges in reminiscences of forty years ago, as follows: "In 1836 there lived in this city a Canadian named Antoine Beaufaut, who had located here as a blacksmith, but more particularly bore a reputation as a wrestler, being called the champion of Canada. He came from Montreal, and it was said had thrown every wrestler from Quebec to the Falls. About the same time a young man named Lewis Ranney arrived in this city as a peddler of essences. He was not particularly large, but was strong, wiry and healthy, and wore, rather modestly, the title of 'Wrestling Champion of New England.' It chanced that Ranney and Beaufaut met at a hotel which stood where the Mansion House now stands, corner of Atwater and Griswold streets. The hotel was then kept by a man named Washington Heath, and through the influence of Mr. Heath a match was made up between Ranney and Beaufaut, to come off in the barn connected with the hotel. The stakes were simply the title of champion, and the rules designated that the contest should be square hold, two falls in three. Immediately Beaufaut went into training, Ranney meantime continuing to tramp about the city dispensing the essences brought from Massachusetts. On the day of the match Ranney weighed 170 and Beaufaut 185 pounds. The barn was crowded, fully two hundred persons being present, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the contest began. Twenty minutes later it ended, Ranney having thrown Beaufaut twice in succession.

"Mr. Ranney, now over sixty years of age, arrived in this city, having come from his home, a short distance from Hillsdale, Mich., expressly to see the contest between McLaughlin and Benjamin, and at the close of the exhibition at the Opera House last evening he expressed himself by saying: 'Wrestling has changed somewhat in forty years, principally in the fact that the men work up better, depending more upon science, while muscle is used with greater judgment.'"

A Richmond man bought some clothes so as to be in readiness for the funeral of his mother, who was supposed to be dying; but she recovered, and he returned the apparel, claiming that the purchase was conditional. The merchant refused to take back the goods, and has been sued for the money paid for them.

WASHINGTON.

The National Capital Aesthetically Considered—National Harmony and the Currency—The Centennial, Etc., Etc.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

Washington, Jan. 10, 1876.

This city is headquarters for American politics, and is therefore interesting to most Americans because our people, being themselves the final governing power, must pay large attention to public affairs. But Washington is an interesting city for other reasons also. One may every day see here not only the great representative men—the President, members of the Cabinet, Senators and Representatives in Congress—but here, and in the Capitol itself, is the most extensive library in our land, access to which is free to all during all hours of the day, with the privilege of examining books and papers. We have here an art gallery also, owned by a wealthy private citizen, but which is opened to the public a portion of each week and at all times on the payment of a nominal admission fee. This, the "Corcoran Art Gallery," is one of the finest in America, and will probably become the very best of all before many years. We have here, besides, the Smithsonian Institute, which may be briefly described as a mammoth academy of sciences, where are great collections of almost all manner of things which men look into and study in the pursuit of knowedge. The Patent Office also is a place well worth a visit. There are models of about all the patent-right machines that have ever been invented, and a great number of curious historic relics, all arranged in one vast room occupying two squares of space.

There are a great many other places and matters of interest here, but after all our people look to Washington more for political intelligence than any thing else. Hence, this correspondence will be largely devoted to the mention of political affairs, to the sayings and doings of the Government in its different branches. I ought to say right here, however, that I shall have no word of party politics and no bias for or against any man or men because of political opinion. I shall be a perfectly impartial observer of goings-on at the National Capital, with the object of giving your readers a fair and trustworthy account of the more interesting and important events as they occur.

THE FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

The present Congress, being the first since 1860 in which one branch is opposed to the other in general political doctrine, must needs attract the general attention. Very little has as yet been done, a fact which does not subject Congress to adverse criticism for two reasons. First, because nothing of consequence ever has been done, since the railway era came in, before the holidays. You can't expect men, in view of a jolly good time in the bosom of their families and plenty of turkey and mince pies, to disregard a "time-honored precedent" for the sake of the American eagle. But, secondly, legislation is a thing which has to be quietly considered and matured before it is acted on. It thus happens that nine-tenths of the palpable legislation of almost any legislative body is nearly always done, so far as the public knows, near the close of a session. In reality the heavy and important work has preceded this. So now, though but one act—a trifling matter of routine—has been passed, a good deal of preparatory work has been done. Members of the Committees on Elections, Ways and Means, and Appropriations, especially, have been getting "a good ready" for work, and I think we shall soon see that much has been set agoing, notwithstanding the holiday season.

Still it is yet too early to predict what will be the probable estimate in which the House ought to be held, as compared with the average of its predecessors. There are many more new members than usual, and it always takes at least one session, generally more, for a new member to thoroughly understand the parliamentary ropes. Let us hope that the antagonism of the two branches of Congress in party affairs may result in no harm to the country. If the action of the session should be of benefit to the people generally, it would be especially gratifying, because in that case the credit therefor would fairly be divided between the two parties, and, as a great statesman used to say, "everything would be lovely and the goose hang altitudinum."

NATIONAL HARMONY AND THE CURRENCY.

I may observe, however, that on two topics of general interest the sense of the House has been taken in such way as to show the evident feeling of a majority of both parties. A member from Indiana offered a resolution fully recognizing the return of harmony and good feeling between the different sections of the country, and it was unanimously carried. This may be regarded as an authoritative admission by the Representatives of both the Democratic and Republican parties that the last relics of our civil war have been buried, and that our future conflicts are to be peaceful.

On the currency question the expression has not been so emphatic, but it has been sufficiently so, perhaps, to indicate the feeling of the House. A Missouri member introduced a resolution condemning any contraction of the currency, and only 54 members voted to suspend the rules upon it—but a little more than one fourth of the House. It is believed, especially since this vote, that if anything shall be done by this Congress to change existing legislation on the currency, it will only be that which will aid Secretary Bristow to resume specie payments in 1879, according to the terms of the act of the last Congress. I do not say that this will certainly be the case, but the action of Congress thus far clearly indicates this, and I give it to you as matter of current intelligence. New light and returns from further precincts often interfere with calculations.

THE CENTENNIAL.

Perhaps the proposed centennial at Philadelphia ought to be regarded as a national affair. In that case, whatever Congress may do in relation thereto may be considered as of general interest. I think it is perfectly safe to predict that the bill appropriating $1,500,000 for the completion of the Centennial buildings will soon be passed, probably within a week or ten days. There is no one who doubts that the proposed exhibition will be one of vast magnitude, and will result directly and indirectly in great good to the country. There are some who doubt the constitutional power of Congress to appropriate money for such a purpose. It is not believed here that these are numerous in Congress. So the bill will surely succeed, and the success of our grand national jubilee may be set down accordingly among the certainties of the future.

L. M. N.

NEW YEARS IN 1836.

A Reminiscence of Paw Paw, Mich., as Related in the Chicago Times.

In 1836 Mr. Peter Gremps came West for the purpose of selecting a home, and arrived as far as Schoolcraft, where he met Mr. DeRosier, a Frenchman, who was engaged with the Indians in the fur trade. In conversation with this gentleman Mr. Gremps remarked, "I wish I could find a piece of land on which was good water-power."

"I can take you to just the place you want," said Mr. DeRosier.

The following day, mounted on their ponies, they started on their journey through a dense forest, their only guide being an Indian trail, and traveled on until they reached the banks of Paw Paw River, at the place where there was an excellent water-power, and where Mr. Gremps decided to pitch his tent.

Paw Paw River was named by the Indians, from a fruit which they called paw paw, which grew in abundance along its banks, and the town of Paw Paw took its name from the river.

Mr. Gremps and Mr. Daniels entered a tract of land for which they paid $1.25 per acre, when Mr. Gremps returned home and consulted his wife on her feelings about going West, telling her she could either go with her family, or have her oldest son and nephew go and improve the land. Mrs. Gremps, having all her family at home with her, could not agree to a separation with any of its members, and at once decided that they should all go together. In 1833 Mr. Gremps again came to Paw Paw, accompanied by Enos Barrett and family, and remained a year making various improvements, when he went to his old Eastern home with the intention of settling up his affairs there and bringing his family to their new abode. In 1834 they bade farewell to their friends and neighbors and proceeded on their journey. All the guide they had from Detroit to Paw Paw were the blazed trees, marked with the letter H, for highway, but by keeping these in view they reached their destination in safety, and found that the three families had increased to five, there having been two marriages while Mr. Gremps was absent.

The family mansion was built on the corner of Main and Gremps streets, and was taken possession of on the last day of the year 1835.

One of the young men informed those recently arrived that on the next day they would receive New Year's calls; that the callers would be friendly, and come with the expectation that their friendship would be continued through the year; they would bring presents, and would expect gifts in return. As he would not tell them to whom they would be indebted for New Year's calls in that new and sparsely settled region, they were, especially the younger portion, anxious and eager to ascertain who their visitors would be.

On the morning of the first day of the year Mrs. Dodge was alarmed by the sound of guns fired close to the house. Running into the front room to ascertain the cause, she was confronted by a party of Indians—men and women—who entered smiling and greeting her in their own language with "A Happy New Year." The Indians surrounded her, and each insisted on the privilege of kissing her, as a part of the programme of the day.

Mrs. Dodge vainly declined the honor, and struggled to free herself from her copper-colored admirers, but finally succeeded in making her escape and ran into the back room to seek the protection of her husband, but she found, to her dismay, that the squaws had surrounded him, and each demanded a kiss, as her due on this festive occasion. She then ran out of the house and over to Mr. Gremps' to warn them of the New Year's callers, but she was too late; the Indians were there as soon as she was, and the Gremps family, both old and young, had to submit to the fashionable callers of the new country in which they had taken up their abode. The younger ladies of the family threw their aprons over their faces, and tried to escape, but all in vain; the brave Indians were not to be cheated out of their dues, and the pretty white girls had to pay the penalty of invading new territory.

Just imagine, for a moment, the consternation there would be among the beaux and belles of Wabash and Michigan avenues if they were visited by such a bevy of callers on the first day of the year 1876—the terror, the disgust, the faintings—and yet, without such pioneer men and women to develop the great West, Michigan and Wabash avenues would probably now have no existence.

A Remarkable History.

Augustus Hemenway, of Boston, one of the richest men in America, who has lately resumed business, after thirteen years of retirement from the world, has had a remarkable history. When a lad, he was sent to Valparaiso, to manage the affairs of the late Benjamin Bangs, and, after a few years of importing South American products and exporting American manufactures on his own hook, he returned a richer man than his former employer. Overwork induced a monomania, and he fancied that he could not meet his liabilities. But he had sense enough to take the advice of physicians, and he retired to Litchfield, Conn., where, for thirteen years, he remained in what was supposed to be hopeless insanity. A year and a half ago, his reason suddenly returned, and he telegraphed to his brother, "Bring on your trial balance," and sure enough, he was able to review the history of his house during his long absence. He is now at his old desk, and dropped a $1,000-bill into the contribution box on a recent Sunday.

A young man who started life as a billiard-hall keeper in Harrisburg, Pa., recently sold his interest in a Nevada mine for $298,000.

Pearls from Emerson.

The only teller of news is the poet. When he sings, the world listens with the assurance that now a secret of God is to be spoken.

The poet discovers that what men value as substances have a higher value as symbols; that nature is the immense shadow of man.

The prayers of nations are rhythmic—have iterations and alliterations, like the marriage service and burial service in our liturgies.

The writer, like the priest, must be exempted from secular labor. His work needs a frolic health; he must be at the top of his condition.

Poetry is the perpetual endeavor to express the spirit of the thing; to pass the brute body and search the life and reason which causes it to exist.

Is not poetry the little chamber in the brain, where is generated the explosive force which, by gentle shocks, sets in actions the intellectual world?

A symbol always stimulates the intellect; therefore is poetry ever the best reading. The very design of imagination is to domesticate us in another, in a celestial nature.

The humor of Falstaff, the terror of Macbeth, have each their swarm of fit thoughts and images, as if Shakespeare had known and reported the men, instead of inventing them at his desk.

Rhyme, being a kind of music, shares this advantage with music, that it has a privilege of speaking truth which all Philistia is unable to challenge. Music is the poor man's Parnassus.

Malthus is the right organ of the English proprietors; but we shall never understand political economy until Burns or Beranger, or some poet, shall teach it in songs, and he will not teach Malthuseanism.

There is no choice of words for him who clearly sees the truth. That provides him with the best word. If your subject do not appear to you the flower of the world at this moment, you have not rightly chosen it.

The impressions of the imagination make the great days of life; the book, the landscape, or the personality which did not stay on the surface of the eye or ear, but penetrated to the inward sense, agitates us and is not forgotten.

Outside of the nursery the beginning of literature is the prayers of the people, and they are always hymns, poetic—the mind allowing itself range, and therewith is ever a corresponding freedom in the style, which becomes lyrical.

Events or things are only the fulfillment of the prediction of the faculties. Better men saw heavens and earths; saw noble instruments of noble souls. We see railroads, mills, and banks, and we pity the poverty of these dreaming Buddhists.

The act of imagination is ever attended by pure delight. It infuses a certain volatility and intoxication into all nature. It has a flute which sets the atoms of our frame in a dance. Our indeterminate size is a delicious secret, which it reveals to us.

We must learn the homely laws of fire and water, we must feed, wash, plant, build. These are the ends of necessity, and first in the order of nature. Poverty, frost, famine, disease, debt, are the beadles and guardsmen that hold us to common sense.

Nature is the true idealist. When she serves us best; when, on rare days, she speaks to the imagination, we feel that the huge heaven and earth are but a web drawn around us; that the light, skies, and mountains are but the painted vicissitudes of the soul.

Man runs about restless and in pain when his condition or the objects about him do not fully match his thought. He wishes to be rich, to be old, to be young, that things may obey him. In the ocean, in fire, in the sky, in the forest, he finds facts adequate and as large as he.

Edward Kelly, who had been an interested spectator at a Catholic fair in Luzerne County, Pa., suddenly dropped dead in a crowded room a few days ago.

(An Apologue—from the German of Gellett.)

A lazy Hen—the stery gose—
Loquacious, pert and self-conceited,
Espied a Bee upon a rose,
And thus the busy insect greeted:

"Say, what's the use of such as you,
(Excuse the freedom of a neighbor!)
Who gad about, and never do
A single act of useful labor?

"I've marked you well for many a day,
In garden blooms and meadow clover;
Now here, now there, in wanton play;
From morn till night an idle rover.

"While I discreetly bide at home,
A faithful wife—the best of mothers;
About the fields you idly roam,
Without the least regard for others.

"While I lay eggs and hatch them out
You seek the flowers most sweet and fragrant,
And, sipping honey, stroll about,
At best a good-for-nothing vagrant!"

"Say," said the Bee, "you do me wrong;
I'm useful, too, perhaps you doubt it,
Because—though toiling all day long—
I scorn to make a fuss about it!

"While you, with every egg that cheers
Your daily task, must stop and hammer
The news in other people's ears,
Till they are deafened with your clamor!

"Come now with me and see my hive,
And note how folks may work in quiet;
To useful arts much more alive
Than you with all your cackling riot!"

L'ENVOI.

The Poet, one may plainly see
Who reads this fable at his leisure,
Is represented by the Bee,
Who joins utility to pleasure;
While in this self-conceited Hen
We note the poet's silly neighbor,
Who thinks the noisy "workingmen"
Are doing all the useful labor!

—John G. Saxe.

Around the Farm.

To draw a nail from wood after it has become rusted in, first hit it a blow with a hammer sufficiently hard to start it in a little. This breaks its connection with the wood when it has become rusty.

WHITEWASH.—Whiting five pounds, skim-milk, two quarts; fresh slaked lime two ounces. Put the lime in a stoneware vessel, put in milk enough to make a mixture resembling cream; then add the balance of the milk; then sprinkle on the whiting and stir thoroughly, when it is fit for use. Apply in the same manner as paint, two or three coats. It will bear sweeping with a broom.

TREATMENT OF GORGED HORSES.—A correspondent of the New England Farmer gives the following method of treatment for animals who may have gorged themselves with grain: "Keep the animal from water. Put a quart of wood ashes into a pail of lukewarm water, stir it up, and let the horse drink one or two quarts of this alkali water at intervals of one or two hours, and in this way the horse always does well, and after a day's treatment, water and feed as usual."

THE CABBAGE WORM.—The best way we know to circumvent cabbage worms is to hunt them persistently, being especially vigilant when they are in the chrysalis state. Remember that every one of the chrysalises which develops into the perfect winged state will have a numerous progeny. Watering with soapsuds is useful. And we have heard of a man who raised a good crop, while his neighbors raised none, by dusting finely sifted buckwheat flour on the cabbages.—Canada Farmer.

SHEEP raising has had its ups and downs like almost every kind of business, but it is a question if any business has paid better for a series of years. The rapid increase of sheep is very favorable to farmers of small means who wish to engage in wool growing. Sheep raising is too much neglected in the West. The animal that furnishes clothing, food and light, which crops hillsides too steep for other creatures to ascend, is entitled to vastly more credit than it receives.—Chicago Times.

KEEPING VEGETABLES.—The Germantown Telegraph say that pumpkins for domestic use may be kept in a good cellar, where they will not freeze, for from six to nine months, by being put on a scaffolding. Potatoes should be kept in the dark as much as possible, but should not be excluded from the air. A good covering for bins, boxes, barrels, etc., is two or three layers of old newspapers pinned or stitched together. As soon as potatoes begin to sprout, as they will in the spring, they should be overhauled once a week, all sprouts removed, and the potatoes put in as dark and cool a place as possible.

RAISE GRAPES.—It must be a small yard that has not room enough for one vine, and every farmer's family should have all the grapes they can eat and some to give away. Those who grow for market will not look here for advice. The universal grape, corresponding in popularity to the Bartlett among pears, is the Concord. Every one can grow it, as a cutting of two or three buds is very sure to make a plant. Many others can be raised in the same way, while some must be started under glass. Buy only one year old vines; cut back to two or three buds, and let only one shoot grow.

THE SWEETS OF FARMING.—Of the many enviable things about farming, is the enjoying of plenty of good butter, rich milk, fruits and vegetables without stint, and honey, sweet, pure and unadulterated. Farmers and their families, as well as everybody else, like honey, and every farmer should keep a few stands of bees to supply his table with the luxury that few cannot enjoy who do not keep bees. Bees are not expensive to buy or to keep; they generally provide their own food, and have a good surplus for your table, and with a little extra care may be made profitable. And in these times of adulteration, when the syrups of commerce are made of poison, it is a matter of importance to every farmer to supply his family with syrup of honey, gathered pure from the flowers of his fields.—Western Agriculturist.

WOOD ASHES FOR HOGS.—In these times of hog cholera, every innocent remedy that can be given to hogs to keep them in health, should be tried. We make a practice of throwing our ashes into the hog pastures daily as they are taken from the fire place or stove. If hogs are kept up, we throw some of the ashes into their troughs or into the swill barrel, and our hogs never have hog cholera. Whether it is owing to the virtue of the ashes or to some other cause, we don't know. We see in some of our exchanges the same remedy for the disease, where it has appeared, recommended, and highly spoken of. It is said that disease only occurs where hogs are chiefly fed on corn. Farther north, where hogs are fed on peas, or small grain, and where the swill barrel is largely used in fattening the family supply of pork, the hog cholera is unknown. There is something in our climate, or in our feed, that causes the disease, and we must learn the cause and avoid it, and learn a remedy when it appears and use it—for there will be a loss this year alone of more than a million of dollars by hog cholera. This great loss of course will keep up the high price of pork.—Rural World.

About the House.

MAKING beds early in the morning is a bad plan; they need airing to make them healthy. Give them a good shaking up and let them lie an hour or two with the room well ventilated. Put the pillows, feather bed or mattress out in the sunshine as often as convenient.

PLANTS should be watered with rain water in the morning or at evening. The leaves of plants should not be sprinkled with water when the sun is shining hot upon them. If rain water cannot be had well water can be used by exposing it to the air for a day or two.

APPLE FRITTERS.—Make a batter, not very stiff, with one quart of milk, three eggs and flour to bring it to a right consistency. Pare and core a dozen apples, and chop them to about the size of small peas, and mix them well in the batter. Fry them in lard as you would doughnuts. For trimmings use powdered white sugar.

HOW TO COOK SALT PORK.—Many people do not relish salt pork fried, but it is quite good to soak it in milk two or three hours, then roll in Indian meal and fry to a light brown. This makes a good dish with mashed turnips, or raw onions cut in vinegar; another way is to soak it over night in skim milk and bake like fresh pork; it is almost as good as fresh roast pork.

OATMEAL AND TEETH.—The London Medical Record says: "It has long been noted in this country that in those districts where the use of oatmeal (in place of wheaten flour) prevails, we find children and adults with the best developed teeth and jaws; and so well recognized is the influence of oatmeal diet upon the teeth, that many practitioners order its use as an article of daily diet for children, in cases where the dentition seems likely to be either retarded or imperfect."

THOSE who have "no hair on the top of the head, in the place where the hair ought to grow," have no dandruff; and as for those who have a fine head of hair, and are troubled with dandruff, let them dissolve an ounce of borax in four ounces of water, and rub the scalp well. It will form a soap that will wash the head and hair clean, after which the head should be thoroughly washed in clear water. After the cleansing process comb, dry, brush and oil to taste.

GOLD fish may be kept ten or twelve years, (their average period of existence,) by using the following precautions:

1. Allow not more than one fish to two quarts of water.

2. Use the the same kind of water, whether well or river; change it every other day in summer, and twice a week in winter.

3. Keep clean sand and pebbles at the bottom, washing it occasionally or replacing with a fresh supply.

4. Use a small net rather than the hand while changing the water.

5. Feed with cracker, yolk of egg, lettuce or flies, once each week, except in cold weather. Feed but little at a time. Remove any crumbs that may remain on the surface after feeding.

6. Do not feed at all from November to the end of February, and but little during the following three months.

7. If there are growing plants in the aquarium, water need be changed but rarely.

8. Keep from sun and in coolest part of room.

A Profitable Hog.

The following description of a profitable hog was reported by the Committee at the Swine Breeders' Convention, at Indianapolis, Ind.:

He must have a small, short head, heavy jowl, and thick, short neck; ears small, thin, and tolerably erect; not objectionable if they droop slightly forward; must be straight from the neck back to flank; must be let well down to the knees in brisket; of good length from head to tail; broad on the back; ribbed rather barrel-shaped; must be slightly curved or arched in the back, from shoulder to the setting on of tail; tail small; long on the ham, from hock to letting off of loins; shoulder not too large to give symmetry to the animal; ham broad and full; hair smooth and evenly set on; skin soft and elastic to the touch; legs short, small and well set under; broad between the legs; good depth between bottom and top of the hog; with pleasant, quiet disposition; should not weigh more than 300 or 400 pounds gross at twelve or eighteen months old, according to keep; color may be black or white, or a mixture of the two. The above described hog will measure as many feet from the top of the head to the setting on of tail as he does around the body, and will measure as many inches around the leg below the knee as he does feet in length around the body; depth of body will be four-fifths of his height.

THE State Prison of Vermont has a new chaplain, who has worked so diligently since the beginning of his engagement in September, that five of the prisoners have been converted, and have made profession of their religion by being baptized. A jail seems an unpromising place for Christian effort, but a jail chaplain has advantages in addressing his congregation not enjoyed by other preachers. His hearers are bound to be punctually on hand, regardless of the weather; and their attention is not distracted by being compelled to notice the new fashions in the apparel of their fellow-worshipers.

PASSING EVENTS.

AN investigation into the charges of fraud and mismanagement in the Chicago Custom House building has been ordered by Congress.

ABOUT the most extensive job of investigation yet proposed in Congress is that of Senator Harvey, of Kansas, who wants a thorough inquiry into the injudicious habits and abominable morals of the grasshoppers.

THE Southern Claims Commissioners transmitted a supplementary report to the House of Representatives. The value of claims disposed of last year was $4,051,974. The amount allowed was $532,510. The amount disallowed, $3,539,464.

THE annual sale of pews in Plymouth (Beecher's) Church, Brooklyn, occurred a few evenings ago. The amount received for rentals and premiums was $63,680, against $70,319 last year. Claflin, the dry goods king, paid the largest price for a pew—$650.

OHIO has a liquor law which makes liquor-sellers and the owners of real estate occupied by saloons responsible for all damages that may result to drunkards or their families from the sale of liquor on such premises. A bill is now pending in the Ohio Legislature to apply the same principle to gambling houses.

A PLAN for the removal from political influences of the system of selecting jurors in the Federal courts has been devised by Mr. Hopkins, of Pennsylvania, and embodied in a bill which he has in Congress. The bill contemplates that each Judge of the United States Circuit Court shall call to his aid two prominent citizens of different political predilections, and with their advice and counsel shall himself select the panel of jurors, the United States Marshal having nothing to do in the matter.

SENATOR MORRILL, of Vermont, has introduced a bill to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to redeem legal-tenders by the issue or sale of bonds bearing interest not exceeding the rate of 4½ per cent. in accordance with the act of July 14, 1870, and thus to carry into effect the Resumption act of Jan. 14, 1875; and further providing that all contracts made after Jan. 1, 1878, shall be payable in hard money unless otherwise stipulated, and prescribing the coin reserve to be held by the national banks.

THE Cleveland Herald says that on New Year's Eve, Mr. A. Sherwin, residing at No. 71 Cedar avenue, that city, received a call from two old friends from East Cleveland, the united ages of the three amounting to 258 years, the oldest, Mr. Ansel Young, being 88; the next, Mr. Elias Cozad, 86; and the latter, Mr. Sherwin, 84. The three have been friends and neighbors for nearly sixty years, the former removing to Cleveland in 1817; Mr. Cozad in 1808, and Mr. Sherwin in 1818. They had a very pleasant visit recalling old times when Cleveland was but a small collection of houses, numbering but a few families, most of whom have passed away.

MR. REUBEN WILLIAMS, of Fort Wayne, Indiana, says the Chicago Times, is the victim of an accident or a joke. If it was a joke, however, the joker must feel no less astonished than Mr. Williams at its results. When a lot of officers were run out of the Treasury Department, for passing bogus claims, a Washington dispatch undertook to give the names of their successors, and the list included Williams. How his name was put in it does not seem to be known to anybody. The Secretary knew nothing about it, and could give Morton no information, when he called to ask who recommended Williams. The latter saw the dispatch, however, volunteered his acceptance, and raised such a fuss a out it, when informed he had not been appointed, that, to quiet him, Morton secured him a place. And so Mr. Williams has had greatness thrust upon him.

THE Hon. E. M. Hungerford, Regent of the Nebraska State University and editor of the Orleans Sentinel, in Harlan County, Nebraska, retired on Sunday night, apparently in as good health as usual. Before going to sleep he requested the young man who occupied the same room with him to wake him early, as he had important work to do in the morning. During the night the young man was awakened by Mr. Hungerford making some noise, but supposed he was dreaming, and went to sleep again. In the morning Mr. Hungerford was found dead, with his arms folded across his breast, as if peacefully sleeping. He must have died without a struggle. Mr. Hungerford was one of the most promising young men in the State, a thorough scholar, and a gentleman.

MEMPHIS furnishes many items of court etiquette. The latest is of a peculiarly striking character. Two lawyers, respectively named Moss and Burrows, in the heat of argument over a case pending in the Criminal Court, by degrees descended from eloquence to billingsgate, and the transition from the latter phase to fisticuffs naturally became easy. While the enraged limbs of the law were continuing their rough-and-tumble debate in a confused heap in the sawdust, a third party, the prisoner, apparently caring little as to who won, quietly steps out of the door, and the cause of justice is minus a prisoner and a pair of handcuffs. The rules of that tribunal should be so amended as to require prisoners, on penalty of forfeiture of citizenship, to remain, and, if necessary, act the impartial umpire in little contests of this sort.

AT the recent session of the Iowa Teachers' Association, at Burlington, Prof. L. F. Parker, of the Iowa State University, read a long paper on the "Abuse of Grant's Iowa Speech," defending the President from hostile criticism. He says he wrote to the President for his interpretation of the speech, and received the following reply:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17, 1875—Prof. L. F. Parker, Iowa City, Ia.—DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 4th inst. was received about the time I was starting for New York city, one week ago yesterday. I expected to answer it immediately on my return, but permitted the matter to escape my mind until this time.

What I said at Des Moines was hastily noted down in pencil and may have expressed my views imperfectly. I have not the manuscript before me as I gave it to the Secretary of the Society. My idea of what I said is this: "Resolve that the State or nation or both combined shall furnish to every child growing up in the land the means of acquiring a good common school education."

Such is my idea, and such I intended to have said.

I feel no hostility to free education going as high as the State or National Government feels able to provide—protecting, however, every child in the privilege of a common school education before public means are appropriated to a higher education for the few. Yours truly,

U. S. GRANT.

Two Women Fighting a Bear.

A correspondent of the New York Sun, writing from Delhi, Vermont, relates the following:

Jonas Butler and his wife and two children live in a rude cabin in a lonely place in the woods near the head waters of the Delaware, twenty miles above this place. Butler, who had a contract for peeling bark and getting out railroad ties, is sometimes away in the woods for days at a time. He was absent on Sunday last. Wild game, always plenty in that region, has been unusually abundant this season. Bears have been numerous and impudent. Only a week ago Butler shot one that was emptying his dinner pail. On Sunday at about five o'clock in the afternoon, Mrs. Butler and her daughter Jennie heard an unusual commotion among the pigs in the log pen, a few rods distant from the house, and on looking out they saw a large black bear with a fat pig under one "arm," trying to get out of the enclosure. The sty is built of small logs, the walls being about five feet high, with a roof over part of the pen. The mother and daughter determined to save the pig it possible. The former seized a heavy mallet or maul, used for driving wedges in logs, and the latter took the axe from the wood pile. Thus equipped, and accompanied by the watch dog, they hurried to the pen, and both jumped into the enclosure, followed by the dog.

They attacked his bearship vigorously, and he turned upon them. He first seized the dog, and with one squeeze of his great paws, crushed it to death and threw it one side. The infuriated bear then sprang upon Miss Jennie, quickly disarmed her, crowded her into a corner, and got the now helpless girl in his embrace, but the blows from the maul in the hands of Mrs. Butler became so quick and severe that he left the girl without doing her any material injury, and turned upon the mother. The girl had given the bear some fearful wounds with the axe, and from them the blood was flowing copiously. This intensified his fury, and he rushed upon Mrs. Butler with his jaws wide apart, and his great fore paws extended to draw her into his embrace. She shouted to her daughter to run to the house and fetch the rifle and shoot the bear.

The girl leaped from the pen and made for the house. She returned in the nick of time. The bear had knocked her mother's weapon from her hand, and pressed her into a corner. Mrs. Butler had crouched down on the floor and placed her hands over her face, seemingly resigned to her fate. Her daughter pushed the rifle through a chink in the logs, took aim, and fired. The bear staggered an instant on his haunches, and fell back dead, shot through the heart.

It was hours before the two courageous women recovered from the reaction that followed their encounter. The girl fainted after firing the fatal shot. Her mother got out of the pen and dragged her into the house. On the next morning Jennie walked five miles through the woods to tell her father of the adventure. The bear weighed over 300 pounds.

100,000 Bushels of Corn Raised on One Farm.

Monday last we had the pleasure of meeting, for the first time, with Mr. Elias Faylor, one of the most extensive farmers and stock-raisers of our county. His farm lies just north of the Osage River, some 15 miles from this place, and contains upward of 2,000 acres of choice land in a high state of cultivation; and, notwithstanding the fact that the grasshoppers destroyed his first planting of corn, he raised, inside of 100 days, 100,000 bushels of corn. Now, if there is another man in the Southwest who can make such a showing we would like to hear from him. One hundred thousand bushels of corn at 20 cents per bushel—the ruling price at this time—is worth just $20,000. Here is an answer to the vexed question, "Does farming pay?" and we think it is quite a satisfactory answer. Twenty thousand dollars is quite a snug little sum; and we seriously doubt if there is another farmer in the Southwest that has done as well this year as our friend Faylor. But besides raising this immense corn crop, Mr. Faylor has been trading quite extensively in cattle and hogs, and is now feeding 500 head of cattle and 500 head of hogs.—Nevada (Mo.) Democrat.

A Promising Youth.

The following, concerning "a very nice little boy," is from the San Francisco Call: Johnnie Brady, 11 years of age, was escorted to the City Prison yesterday afternoon by Officer P. Smith, who locked him up on two charges of misdemeanor—one of assault and battery, and the other of having made use of vulgar language. Johnnie was walking through the Chinese quarter smoking a cigar of the class known as "stinkadoros," and approached a Chinese female who was engaged in conversation with one of her countrymen. He looked at her for a moment, then brushed away the ashes from the end of his cigar and applied the lighted end to her neck, after which he ran away. A citizen named Overend, who witnessed Johnnie's cruel act, caught him and was reproving him for his conduct, when Johnnie turned on him and called him very obscene names. Mr. Overend then turned Johnnie over to the officer. The little fellow was searched in the prison, and the only property found on him was a deck of cards, a parlor pistol, a double harmonium, and a paper of fine-cut.

BY resolution of the House, at Washington, adopted on motion of Mr. Morrison, the several Committees on the Executive Departments have been especially instructed to make thorough examinations of the accounts and disbursements of these departments, and to report what measures are necessary to be adopted to provide more perfectly for the proper application of public moneys, and to secure the Government against demands unjust in character or extravagant in amount.

WITHIN twenty years there have been 160,298,000 acres of land granted to railroads—equal to the aggregate area of all New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana!

INDIANA ITEMS.

FORT WAYNE surgeons are desirous of the erection of a new dissecting college.

A. J. WILLIAMS, a member of the State Legislature from Lawrence County, died at his residence near Bedford last week.

JOSEPH WAGNER, of Haubstadt, went to Evansville on Tuesday, and fell dead in a grocery store within 10 minutes after his arrival.

JOHN J. FRISBIE, of Jeffersonville, met with a fatal accident near Bowling Green, Ky., on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, Sunday night.

A WOMAN who sings in one of the beer saloons in Lafayette is the daughter of a rich Michigan banker, who disowned her because of a marriage against his wishes.

THE Indiana Poultry Association have elected the following officers: President, A. C. Shortridge; Vice-President, Robert Mitchell; Secretary, William H. Fry; Treasurer, W. F. Christian.

SOME mean fellow stole into the dressing-rooms of the Wallace sisters, at Evansville, during their engagement at the Opera House last week, and carried off $700 worth of wardrobe—the wretches!

MISS ALLIE WINTHROP, a school girl, 16 years of age, was accidentally shot by her brother, last Saturday, while crossing the street at Stockwell, Tippecanoe County. She is wounded dangerously, if not fatally.

AT Fort Wayne, one day last week, a little boy named John Fitzpatrick met with a fearful accident by falling into a tub of boiling water. He lingered thirty-five hours in the most excruciating suffering, when death ensued.

MR. WM. LOGUE, Jr., of New Albany, has a centennial suit of clothes worn by John Humphreys, great-grandfather of Mrs. Sarah McQuiddy. The coat and vest were worn as the wedding suit of Mr. Humphreys over one hundred years ago.

THE Martin County Herald reports that Arthur W. Lewis, aged fifteen years, was married a few days ago to Mrs. Nancy Sheridan, aged fifty-five years. The boy's mother gave her consent before the clerk would issue a license.

THE State Association for the Improvement of Roads have elected officers as follows: President, Joseph J. Irwin, of Columbus, with one Vice-President from each Congressional District; Secretary, Alfred Moore, of Huntington; Treasurer, Fielding Besler, of Indianapolis.

DURING a dance at New Brunswick, Boone County, Friday night of last week, Samuel Belcher quarreled with a man named Adney. The former knocked the latter down, when he rose, and seizing Belcher by the head, stabbed him in the abdomen, almost disemboweling him. Adney escaped.

MR. MONCURE D. CONWAY, of London, who denies the existence of the devil, has evidently never been to Indianapolis. A little girl of that city being taken by her mamma to the depot, where all the trains in Christendom do congregate, innocently asked her parent: "Mamma, is this hell?"

JOSEPH H. HANCE, Sheriff of Allen County, died at Fort Wayne last week, after a short illness. A few weeks ago he contracted a heavy cold that settled on his lungs, producing quick consumption, and causing death. Mr. Hance was serving out his second term as Sheriff, and was highly respected and a great favorite.

THE State Board of Agriculture have elected the following officers: President, H. Caldwell, Wabash; Vice President, Stephen Davidson, Fulton County; Secretary, Alexander Heron, Indianapolis; Treasurer, Carlos Dickson, Indianapolis. Salaries were reduced to the following figures: Secretary $1,200; Superintendent and Treasurer, $300 each.

THE President has transmitted to the Senate the report of the Director of the Mint on the best location for a branch mint in the Western States or Mississippi Valley. Dr. Linderman recommends the choice of Indianapolis for economical reasons, there being in that city Government buildings which he considers adapted for the purpose.

THE body of John Evans was found near Decatur one morning lately, lying on the railroad track, and horribly mutilated. He had been in town all day and when leaving was noticed to be under the influence of liquor. Several trains ran over him. He leaves a family in good circumstances, as he was quite wealthy, his father having left him a fortune a few years ago.

AT Evansville the committee who have been examining the deficiencies said to exist in ex-City Collector Sansom's books have concluded their report, and admitted that a deficiency of $5,749.68 existed. Hon. Wm. Heilman, one of the bondsmen, tendered the city his check for his share, but it was refused. The city holds the bonds for $600,000, and there are seven bondsmen. The others are not considered worth the amount of the deficiency, and Heilman, who is a millionaire, will be responsible.

MR. J. H. DICKSON, of Petersburg, Pike County, owns a pair of spectacles which are claimed to be 225 years old. The rims are made of solid iron, and the glasses, which are perfectly round and about the size of a silver dollar, are encased with bone. That part of the frame which is placed over the ears is also composed of solid iron, and at the ends forms a loop or ring. Mr. Dickson has the case also, which is of iron and very large, resembling a cigar-case more than anything else. The case and spectacles together will weigh about half a pound.

A MAN named Gum Wallace, residing in the neighborhood of Carbon, some three and a half miles northeast of Brazil, got into an altercation a few days ago with his son-in-law, a man by the name of Alley, whom he rushed upon, as rumor says, with an ax, and was met by Alley with a club, striking him on the head, felling him instantly, and leaving him insensible, from which he never recovered. The wounded man lingered some time after the blow was inflicted before he died, which event took place on Saturday last. A family feud was the immediate cause of the rencontre.

THE citizens of Eaton are greatly exercised over the very mysterious disappearance of Miss Mollie Foreman, aged 18 years, daughter of one of the most respected citizens. About three weeks ago she left her home to pay a visit to her brother at Dunkirk. No uneasiness was felt or any inquiries made until the last few days, when it was ascertained that she had never been at her brother's house. The river has been dragged for miles and the woods thoroughly searched without effect. Allan Pinkerton, of Chicago, has been engaged to discover the whereabouts of the missing girl, but has not yet succeeded in finding her, living or dead. The parents of the young lady are deeply afflicted and in a state of terrible anxiety.

THE annual report of the Trustees of the State Normal School shows the institution to be in a flourishing condition. The attendance of persons who wish to make teaching a profession is increasing. The total number enrolled during the three sessions of the last year was 485. This does not include pupils in training schools, who number 195. The total number enrolled in the Normal School since its organization is 1,011, and of this number 70 per cent. were children of farmers, and 20 per cent. was from the other industrial classes. The report also gives the financial condition of the different funds of the institution, and announces that during the last year the building has been completed in accordance with the original plans.

THE twenty-third annual session of the State Board of Agriculture was held at Indianapolis last week. The Secretary's report shows assets valued at $332,745, and liabilities amounting to $72,740. There are seventy-six county and twenty-one district societies in the State, and there is shown to be a growing interest in agricultural fairs. The Treasurer's report shows that the receipts for the past year, including the Geological Department, were $64,577.54; expenditures, $62,977.37. No guarantee bonds were paid the past year. Bonds to the amount of $6,600, however, have been placed in the hands of attorneys for collection. William Crim presented his resignation as President of the State Board, and also as a member of that body.

The West in Congress.

There have been introduced in Congress the usual number of bills relating to Western interests. Mr. Franklin, of Missouri, has a bill providing for the construction of a postoffice and custom house at Kansas City, to cost $250,000.

Mr. Phillips, of Kansas, has a bill to provide a government building at Leavenworth, to cost $250,000.

Gen. Rusk, of Wisconsin, has a bill to provide a government building at La Crosse, to cost $50,000.

There are several bills relating to the establishment of mints already introduced. Mr. Banning, of Ohio, wants it at Cincinnati; Mr. Stone, of Missouri, at St. Louis; Mr. Crounse, of Nebraska, at Omaha. Chicago, Indianapolis and Denver have their claims in also.

Mr. John B. Clark, Jr., of Missouri, has introduced a bill to appropriate $1,000,000 to be expended in deepening and permanently locating the channel of the Missouri River, to secure a navigable depth of five feet, during low water, from Sioux City to the mouth of the Missouri, the improvements to be made under the direction of the Secretary of War.

Mr. Oliver, of Iowa, has a bill to provide for the construction, by the Sioux City Bridge Company, of a bridge across the Missouri River, at or near Sioux City, for the use of railroads and the public generally.

Mr. Williams, of Michigan, asks an appropriation of $1,200 to pay losses to workmen engaged in the construction of a lighthouse on Poverty Island, Lake Michigan, which was destroyed by fire Oct. 25, 1873.

Mr. Ingalls, of Kansas, has introduced a bill in the Senate to permit the organization of national banks with a capital of $50,000 or more in towns, irrespective of population.

Mr. Howe has a bill in the Senate to authorize the Green Bay and Minnesota Railroad Company to construct a pontoon bridge across the Mississippi River, from some feasible point in Buffalo County, in Wisconsin, to some feasible point in Winona County, Minnesota.

Mr. Harris, of Virginia, has a bill to aid the Washington, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railroad Company to construct a narrow-gauge railroad from tidewater to the cities of St. Louis and Chicago.

Mr. McCrary, of Iowa, has a bill in the House to permit the use of the surplus water of the canal, when constructed, along the Des Moines Rapids of the Mississippi River, for the supply of the city of Keokuk with water.

Mr. Brown, of Kansas, has a bill authorizing the sale of the Kansas Indian lands in Kansas to actual settlers, under the treaty of Nov. 17, 1860, and providing that the proceeds be set apart for the use of said Indians, under the direction of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

Curious Electric Phenomenon.

A most remarkable event occurred on Saturday, when the temperature was at the lowest point in the city. There was an occasion for giving an alarm of fire by telegraph. The first instrument struck by the policeman failed to operate, but a second attempt at another street corner roused the firemen, and the fire was soon after extinguished. Six hours afterward the first instrument awoke from its apparent nap, and the alarm so long delayed was sounded, and sent the firemen to the same locality to find that it was a false alarm. The telegraphers are at a loss to account for this unparalleled event, which can only be compared to the Munchausen account of the tunes being frozen in the horn of the stage-driver, and afterward sounding when hung up by the side of the stove at the inn.—Philadelphia Letter.

Rhode Island Justice.

The following almost incredible statement is copied from the Providence Press: "Hannah Purcell carried away a few yards of cotton waste from the shop of B. F. Almy, a day or two ago, and this morning the case was tried in the Justice Court. The value of the waste was nine cents, and Hannah said she carried it home to wash, as she used it for neck-cloths while in the shop. Hannah has worked for Mr. Almy nearly twenty years. Judge Randolph fined her one cent and costs." The Danbury News says "this is the Almy-tyest mean thing we ever read of!"

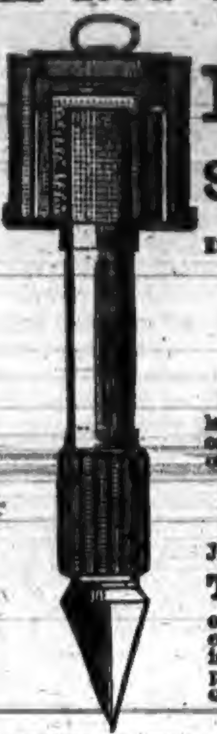
A New Method of Draining Farms!



YUNDT'S PATENT DRAIN!

FOR DRAINING

Swamps, Ponds & Low Lands.

It sinks the water just where it stands, saving miles of tile drains; keeps the water from cutting up your highways, or flooding your neighbor's, and is as far superior to tile drains as the railroad is to the common wagon.

TESTIMONIAL.

We, the undersigned, having seen one of Yundt's Patent Drains remove a large pond of stagnant water, on Hoyt street, in this city, do cheerfully recommend it to all persons who have wet cellars, or are troubled with ponds or wet lands. It will do all that is claimed for it.

DR. E. ATKINSON, HENRY GOLDTHWAIT, J. W. GRIFFITH,
H. B. CROSS, D. V. ROSS, LYMAN CASE,
N. E. RAPER, F. MORTON.

One of the above drains was put down on the premises of J. P. Frenzel, Jr., Cashier of the Merchants' National Bank, of this city, and in less than

Three Hours Had Drained the Cellar

of over 3,000 gallons of water. No better investment can be made of idle capital than in working territory with this Drain. A good, energetic Agent is wanted in every city and county, to whom a liberal commission will be paid. State, County, Township or Farm Rights for sale. Personal property or real estate taken in exchange for territory. Address

Butler, Ind.

AS A

Commercial Center.

Much has been written about our neighboring towns, in reference to their developments and progress within a few years past. While it seems that some one has always stood ready to look after the interest of their town, Butler has not been so fortunate, consequently her commercial channels have never been properly opened up to the public and business men of our country. In order to give the reader a correct idea of what I expect to show, in reference to our developments in the last twenty years, it will be necessary to carry you back to 1855. At that time its fields that are now cultivated with the latest improved machinery, and marshes ditched and all cultivated. The same fields at that time was a howling wilderness, covered with trees and frog ponds, and Butler with a population of forty-one persons, all told, men, women and children. The event of the following year is long to be remembered. On the 27th day of May, nineteen years ago, the first R. R. whistle was sounded in Butler, and the fourth of July following was Butler's first birthday. We will pass to 1860, a period of five years at this date found us in somewhat better circumstances, but during this time business has been checked, occasioned by fire that burned some of our business men, but soon others taking their place. Buildings were reared again, and business went on more lively than ever during this year, with the aid of the presidential excitement, we were enabled to pay out for produce $5,231,86, still we had a barrier in the way to impede our progress. The most beautiful portion of our town, the realty was owned and controlled by the R. R. Co., and could not be had to build on. This year found us with a population of 488 persons. We now pass to 1865, during this time some of our citizens had built a R. R. warehouse with a capasity of storing 6000 bushels of grain, the same building being occupied now for a wheel Tunkers house. During this time the great American rebellion was going on, which had atendency to increase our trade, and open up the channels for produce. The closing up of the year of 1865, found us with a population of 615, and cash paid out for produce $139,642:11. We next pass to 1870, and show some of the events that took place within that time. Peace had been restored between the two sections of our country, and everything was lovely, and our population and trade kept steadily increasing. During this time our citizens began to get tired of living in a town without some government, so they called a meeting and resolved to be incorporated. This necessitated the cleaning up of the town and building of sidewalks, and a general system of improvement was going on all over our town. At this period the Eel River R. R. was considered dead and we had lost all hopes of deriving any benefit from that source, still we kept pace with the development of the country, and our population and trade kept expanding from year to year until we were forced to believe that Butler was bound to become the greatest commercial center in DeKalb county, notwithstanding if the Eel River R. R. was never built. At this date, we a thriving town, with good schools and churches, enjoying all the rights and privileges of a free people, irrespective of race or color or previous servitude.—The classing up of this term of years finds us with a population of 967 inhabitants, with cash paid out in 1870 for produce, to the amount of $269,782.54.

We will now pass to the series of years from 1870 to 1875, and give you a little idea of the progress from year to year. In '71 2 there was no evidence that marked any particular change in our town only the natural development of our county, the wide fields of commerce were extended which naturally added to population and trade to some extent in 1873. The Eel River railroad, that had been sleeping for twenty years, was reserected and crowded to conpletion and in Oct. 1873 the iron horse came steaming into Butler, loaded with passengers from our neighboring towns, the occasion was marked by one of the oldest citizens of this county, Maj. Sprott, who made a short speech. This railroad coming in made it a necessity for something else to be done. A round-house had to be built, more track had to be built to handle cars, passenger and freight houses had to be built, depot grounds had to be built and improvements of all kinds were going on rapidly. During this period a company of citizens had organized together and bought all of the lots that the railroad Co had been holding and brought them into market, and now occupied with dwellings and business houses. This event was the turning point to our commercial and mercantile interests and as I will show that our commerce excelled in value that of any other town from Toledo to Chicago, and while her population has almost doubled since 1870. We have never occupied the position to which we are entitled as a commercial center. Whether this has been the fault of her citizens or whether it has been a feeling of rivalry existing between Butler and other towns of more pretensions and less business This we are unable to say, but for some cause justice has not been done our business interests. The annuel value of commerce that naturally drifts to Butler, as I will show, is surprising to the most sanguine of our business men. We have a territory that seeks its outlet for its produce at Butler, for 36 miles North and South and 12 miles East and West, this makes 442 square miles of territory, equal 264,480 acres of fertile soil as will be found in any valley of the State. This amount of land at five dollars per acre, will give us a product of $1,322,400, of this amount the last year ending January 1st, 1876, business shows the amount paid out at Butler, a careful examination of reports show the following results:

Grain alone..............	$622,847.44.
Live Stock................	121,143.68.
Dressed Hogs............	110,82.79.
Lumber and Staves.......	40,246.21.
Butter, Eggs & Potatoes..	31,163.10.
Poitry and Hay...........	4,221.16.
Wood.....................	88,681.36.
Clover Seed..............	58,727.94.
Furs......................	35,134.10.
Hides & Pelts............	47,800.59.
Making a total of.......	$1,056,985.38.

This amount equals over one third of the entire circulation of DeKalb county and will show more money paid out for grain alone than all the rest of the shipping points in the county. This amn't of property has been handled within the year by our business men; a year, that financial stagnation has been bearing down on every department of trade, but it has been done without loss to produce class. This alene should be sufficient evidence to entitle our business men to the full confidence of a greatful people and clearly show to any observing community that prosperity is paving every avenue of our long neglected town.

The receipts of products as stated above are accompanied by two lines of railways giving us direct outlets from east to west. We have steam elevators and capacity of storing thirty thousand bushels of grain, and every element necessary to a steady growth of our town.

The derangement of finances for the last year, which has occasioned dissasters to a considerable extent to the commercial and mercantile interests of the country. Still there has never been a a year since the Red-man, with his tomahock, felled the first sapling on Butler soil, that there has been for the last year and this in the midst of a financial crisis.

The past year has been a very prosperous one, in comparison to other years and it must be admitted by careful observing men that it has been a fruitful one in the development of improvements in the commercial interests of our town.

We ever have since our town has founded her industrial and mercantile interests have not been sleeping, but advanced firmly. Caution has filled the place of speculating schemes, stability taking the place of riches, this has causan under current that has drifted our people into one common compact and farmers, merchants and mechanics interests are all closely identified. While these elements are all working in union and harmony together, we can safely look forward to a prosperous future, and to-day Butler stands with a healthier, sounder and firmer record, prevading every branch of business than any other town in Northern Indiana. Our churches and schools would reflect credit to a much larger town. Had we time we would like to show the business of each firm in Butler. For the past year our taxation is not burdemsome incomparison to our improvements. As it appears to be fixed with railroad-men that Butler will at an early date be the western terminus of the Canada southern road and the probabilities are that that date will not be later than next June, we would suggest to the public who are looking for homes and a place where they can enjoy religious liberties and society—a place where they can enjoy good health, would take the trouble to come and examine for themselves the advantages that we enjoy over many other towns in railroads, churches and schools. These advantages with the expanding of our trade from year to year should be sufficient evidence for men with capital who are seeking for a place to invest we know of no place better and with proper investments could not fail to reap for themselves a handsome profit.

"UNCLE SAM'S A HUNDRED."

Oh, ye Powers! what a roar,
Such was never heard before—
Thundering from shore to shore,
"Uncle Sam's a hundred!"

Cannon boom and trumpets bray,
Fiddles squeak and fountains play—
'Tis his great Centennial day—
"Uncle Sam's a hundred!".

Stalwart men and puny boys,
Maids and matrons swell the noise,
Ev'ry baby lifts its voice:
"Uncle Sam's a hundred!"

Nervous folks, who dote on quiet,
Though they're half distracted by it,
Can't help mixing in the riot:
"Uncle Sam's a hundred!"

Brutes that walk, and birds that fly,
On the earth or in the sky,
Join the universal cry,
"Uncle Sam's a hundred!

Well, suppose he is—what then?
Don't let's act like crazy men,
Must we take to fooling when
"Uncle Sam's a hundred?'

There he stands—our modern Saul—
Head and shoulders above all;
Yet, "Pride goes before a fall,"
E'en though one's a hundred.

"What's a hundred in our day?"
Foreign Uncle Sams will say:
"Let us sit and watch the play—
He is but a hundred.

"Granted he's a shapely youth—
Fair and ruddy—yet, forsooth!
He's too young—and that's the truth!
Only just a hundred.

"When he's twice as old, pardie!
'Twill be easier to foresee
What will be his destiny.
Now he's but a hundred.

"When he played his boyish pranks,
Should he seek to join our ranks
We'll reflect. But now—no, thanks!
Why, he's but a hundred!"

Yes, our uncle's years are few;
He is young—the charge is true;
Let us keep that fact in view,
Though he counts a hundred.

Don't let's tempt him to ignore
Warnings that have gone before;
Perils both by sea and shore,
Now that he's a hundred.

Let us strive, with earnest heart,
Each of us to do his part,
So that he may escape the smart
Seeing he's a hundred.

And with solemn, graceful thought,
Of the deeds that he has wrought,
Guided, cherished, favored, taught,
Till he's reached a hundred.

Let us, as we vaunt his worth,
Mingle soberness with mirth,
While we shout to all the earth,
"Uncle Sam's a hundred."

Our Republic commenced in 1776, 100 years ago, with thirteen States and 815,615 square miles of territory, which was occupied by about 3,000,000 of civilized human beings. It has now a population of 43,000,000, who occupy thirty-seven States and nine Territories, which embrace over 3,000,000 of square miles. It has 75,000 miles of railroads, more than sufficient to reach twice and a half around the globe. The value of its annual agricultural productions is $2,500,000,000, and its gold mines are capable of producing $70,000,000 a year. It has over 1,000 cotton factories, 580 daily newspapers, 4,300 weeklies, and 625 monthly publications.

ODD UNCLE GREGORY.

Mr. Burton returned home from his store one evening and told his wife Bessie quite an exciting piece of news. He had received a message from an uncle whom he had not seen for twenty years, and said uncle was about to pay him a visit.

"And he's rich as a Jew—a perfect nabob, I hear," continued Mr. B., "with not a relative in the world except my brother Rob and myself; but he is awfully eccentric—the oddest of mortals. If we don't happen to suit him he will leave all his money to some asylum or other."

"Don't mention such a thing," cried Bessie, "why of course we shall please him, and then our fortune will be made. When does he arrive?"

"Next week, and as we live so near the depot, he will probably come here before going to Robert's. I remember seeing him when I was a little boy, and he looked as if just taken from a bandbox, so perfectly neat. Neatness is his hobby, they say."

"O, dear! then I must give the house a thorough cleaning. It is rather early for such work, but if your paragon of an uncle is coming, I will begin at once," said Mrs. Burton. "You may call on your way to the store to-morrow and tell Pat and Biddy Malone to come immediately. There is no time to lose, you know."

"Don't get excited, Bessie," said her husband, "it will be all right I dare say."

If Mrs. Burton's experience and wisdom had been equal to her energy, she would have made a capital housekeeper, but she was young and had never had an opportunity to learn much about domestic affairs.

Doing work in a systematic manner she did not understand; so when Pat and Biddy appeared, she told them that she wanted to clean house and must be very thorough, and the first thing to be done was to get everything out of the rooms, so that there might be a deluge of soap and water.

The two assistants obeyed orders promptly, and when at noon Mr. Burton returned he found Patrick whitewashing vigorously, and Biddy cleaning windows, while Mrs. Burton ran from room to room taking down pictures, curtains, and ornaments, and huddling them away. Stoves were out in the shed, carpets and feather beds in the yard, the piazza crowded with furniture, and all was a scene of confusion. No dinner was to be seen, and Mr. B. was about to hasten to a restaurant, when he thought of some very valuable papers which he had carelessly left upon his desk.

Hurrying up stairs, to his dismay, the room was empty. Desk and papers gone. Bessie could not tell him what had become of them, and he flew to Biddy.

"And sure, sur," she said, "if ye mane the rubbish lying about, I jist crammed it in the rag-bag."

"My precious papers!" he cried aghast, "but perhaps I can rescue them. Quick! tell me where you put the bag."

"Och, bad luck," moaned Biddy, "it's on the way to the paper mill they are I'm afeared, for the mistress sold the rags to a tin-peddler this blessed mornin'."

Mr. Burton rushed frantically from the house.

"Which way did he go? Have you seen him? The tin-peddler! find him! overtake him—help me!" he cried in an excited tone.

"Has he stolen anything?" asked the passers-by, and "stop thief!" screamed a crowd of idle boys, rushing down the street, followed by Mr. Burton, who created fresh excitement at every step.

Meanwhile, Mrs. B. and her assistants were endeavoring to restore order in the chaos about them, when the door-bell was loudly rung.

At first no attention was paid to the summons, but when it was repeated again and again, Biddy went to see what was wanted, and soon returned, saying that an old man with a satchel wanted to see Mrs. B.

"Send him off," said the lady, in an excited tone.

"Indade, mam, but he won't go," replied Biddy, "an' sure I tould him that ye didn't want to see the likes of him."

So Mrs. Burton descended the stairs in no very pleasant humor. She found an old gentleman in the hall, and she stood looking coldly upon him, in a dignified manner.

"Will you permit me to rest awhile, madam?" said he, bowing, "I am slightly acquainted with your husband, and I would like to show him some articles I have in my satchel."

"He isn't at home—you had better call some other time," she said, frigidly.

"I can wait for him," responded her visitor, "if it will be convenient. I would like to pass the night here. I think Mr. Burton will be glad to see me."

"It is not at all convenient to accommodate any one at present," replied Mrs. B., "the hotel is not far off, sir."

"I am very lame, and tired with walking," he said, rising. "I would have been contented in any corner, and could sleep on a lounge, as you are house cleaning; but I will not trouble you, madam;" and taking his satchel and cane, he departed, saying to Biddy as he passed her:

"It is a good rule to be kind to every one, don't you think so? your mistress would not have been a loser if she had allowed me to stay. I should have paid her liberally."

"Bad luck to the house clanin that makes a body so cross," said Biddy, "for a swate lady she is when there's no such doin's around; but her ould uncle's a comin', ye see, and so it makes throuble, ye know."

A queer smile flitted over the old man's face, but it was succeeded by a look of sadness, as he limped away.

After a hot chase, Mr. Burton succeeded in overtaking the astonished peddler, and overhauling his load, the important papers were rescued, and a five dollar bill paid to the insulted dealer in rags, then Mr. Burton retraced his steps wearily to the store. Soon after, his brother Robert entered.

"News, Henry," he exclaimed, "Uncle Gregory has arrived!"

"Indeed! I am very much surprised," responded his brother, "we did not expect him till next week."

"He's an oddity," laughed Robert. "He came to my house and pretended to be a book agent, or something of the kind, said he was very tired, and wanted to rest for awhile, so my wife got a nice easy chair for him, and gave him a good dinner. You know Mary has a very kind heart, and she pitied the lame old man, who looked so sad and weary, and when he told her that he was acquainted with me and would like to spend the night at our house, she smilingly assented. I wonder at her, for we are house-cleaning, and there is more work than Mary ought to do, but she takes things easy. She just cleans one room at a time, and the house is never in an uproar. Well, the old gent made himself very agreeable, and when I went home he revealed himself in his true character, no other than our eccentric Uncle Gregory."

The chagrin of Mrs. Burton can be imagined when she discovered her uncle's "ruse." But her humble apology did not win the old gentleman's forgiveness. He never spent much time at her residence, but seemed very happy at Robert's, and he lavished his money freely upon Mary and her children. Poor Bessie! she often saw them riding by in Uncle Gregory's handsome carriage, and she bitterly regretted her lack of kindness on that eventful house-cleaning day.

THE Hartford Times tells of a smart Connecticut stump speaker who was haranguing a crowd in Fairfield County, when the effect of one of his strong points was terribly broken by a bawling exclamation from a half-drunken fellow in the crowd, who sung out: "Oh, you're a demagogue!" The orator fixed his eye upon the fellow, and, pausing just a moment to fix the attention of the audience and give his response the more effect, merely answered, with one of his own unapproachable grins: "Put a wisp of straw around you, and you'd be a demijohn!" It brought down the house and extinguished the bibulous offender.

RESOLUTION.

She'll come to these sequestered grounds; to-day I'll boldly speak—
Why should I tremble at a child so gentle and so meek?
All others greet her joyously; I silent pass her by—
And to the brightest of all stars I dare not raise mine eye.
The buds that 'neath her footsteps bow, the birds with warbling clear,
Proclaim in different ways their love; then why should I know fear?
Through long, long nights I've pray'd and wept, invoking heaven above;
And yet to her have feared to breathe these simple words, "I love."
I'll lay me down beneath this tree—she daily passes here—
And I will talk as in a dream, of her my heart holds dear.
I will—ah! woe is me—she comes; my form she'll surely spy—
I'll hide behind this shady bush, and watch her passing by!

THE SUPREME COURT.

Nine Hundred Cases Behind, a Few Five Years Old—Three Years Required to Clear Off Present Business—A Bill to Relieve this Annoying Difficulty.

The condition of business in the United States Supreme Court, says a Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune is such that it has ceased to be an organ for the administration of justice. There are at this time upward of 900 cases on its calendar, extending back five years. To such an extent is it behind in its business, that it has come to be regarded by persons familiar with the facts that a case may as well be abandoned as to try to bring it up for trial in that court. The number of cases on the calendar is so great that if the court should sit every day, including Sundays, and dispose of a case every day, it would require nearly three years to dispose of the old business, to say nothing of the current cases during that time, which would be quite sufficient to occupy the time of the court. The question as to how the court could be relieved has been one of much interest, not only to the judges, but to the lawyers of the country having business before them. A year ago the limit was increased to $5,000, so that no case involving a smaller sum could be brought before that court. It was then supposed that such action would relieve the business, but instead, the cases have increased and the term of the court has been lengthened. The business in all the United States Courts is also yearly increasing, except the United States District Courts, where there is limited jurisdiction. The nine United States Circuit Courts are very much overcrowded and behind.

In view of all the facts, and after consultation with several of the Judges of the Supreme Court, Mr. McCrary, of Iowa, introduced in the House on Thursday a bill designed to reform the judiciary of the United States, which seems to be what is required to settle the difficulties. The bill in question requires the amount involved to be not less than $10,000, and provides for an inferior Court of Appeals in each of the nine Judicial Circuits, and enforce Circuit Court powers on the District Courts—permitting the former to transfer to the latter after next September any cause on its calendar. The Court of Appeals for each of the nine Circuit Court Districts is to be composed of the Justice of the Supreme Court assigned to the Circuit, the Circuit Judge thereof, and the several District Judges of the Districts composing the Circuit. The bill provides that appeals may be taken to this Court from the Circuit and District Courts, and that the decisions upon questions of fact shall be final and conclusive, and also on all questions of law where the sum involved is less than $10,000. The judgment or decision of the Court, if upon any appeal, shall be remitted to the Court appealed from to be enforced.

Book Learning.

Charles Francis Adams, Jr., has written a letter to the Quincy Patriot on the subject of the education derived from the reading of miscellaneous books. Mr. Adams, who is one of the Trustees of the Public Library of the town, says that four-fifths of the book education we all have is acquired from miscellaneous reading. Schools and school teachers have nothing to do with it; but it is home acquired. He considers the reading of books, in itself, the poor man's university. In referring to circulating and public libraries, and the kind of literature in most demand, he says that "three-fourths of the demand is always for the most vapid and sensational book." In closing his letter, he says: "Most assuredly, parents ought not to turn their children loose in any library. In our library there is now no excuse for their so doing. Before the catalogue was published they might have excused themselves on the ground that they had no means of selection; and the catalogue was prepared with that very consideration in view. It was intended to lay open to any person sitting in his own house the whole contents of the library, for his own use and that of his family; it, in fact, put at the disposal of every resident of Quincy an almost complete collection of the standard works in the language, for all practical purposes, just as much at his disposal as if he owned them. It put the library into the dwelling-houses. Under these circumstances, it was hoped that a great improvement would be noticed in the character of the books called for. How far this hope has been justified I cannot now say, but there is certainly yet great room for improvement. The great majority of the books borrowed are borrowed by young people, and still, apparently unassisted in their choice by any one. I am very confident that a competent trustee, who could give his whole time to the library, and do nothing but examine and purchase new books, and advise those who come there, especially the young, what to read and how to read it, could do much more for the higher education of Quincy than is done through the whole agency of our high school; nor in saying this do I mean to say anything derogatory to the high school, either. This we cannot expect. We ought, however, to be fairly able to expect now that parents and those engaged themselves in the work of education should realize what a large part in the work miscellaneous reading plays, and so try to give some direction to it."

A Wonderful Escape.

The friends of Mr. Fritz Zumann, of Springfield, Mass., reported lost in the terrible Bremerhaven explosion, have just received letters announcing his miraculous escape, and giving a graphic description of the disaster as he saw it, as follows: A box of dynamite exploded. The box was stored on a wagon, and was to be shipped with our steamer. Such a power had the explosion that everybody, say everybody in the cities of Bremerhaven and Geestemunda, were thrown down. Windows were broken at a distance of three miles and even farther. Nearly everybody on board or near the steamer had his ears burst through the terrible din; but my brother and I have not a finger hurt. When the explosion took place I was down in the gangway of the steamer, and all at once I felt as though two cannon-balls were boring into my ears, and then glass pieces, broken plates (I stood near the kitchen), doors, beams and boards, all flew around me, but nothing hurt me. When in this terrible fright I looked around for an escape, I found every way, on both sides of the gangway, blocked up by the ruins. Locked up in the steamer! And I thought every second she would sink, because it was my opinion that the boiler had exploded. It took me two to three minutes to make a way, and then I found, groping my way over corpses, bodies without heads, some without arms or legs, over heads without bodies, over lakes of blood; I found my uncle and my aunt, both I might say, naked, lying down and embracing each other, groaning and almost in the face of death. In the same moment my brother fell into my arms, sound and safe! And the other two are to be saved, too!

Finds in the Rag-Bag.

The "finds" in the rag-bag and the rubbish-heap are sometimes not a little curious. A mistress allows Betty, the maid, to keep a rag-bag; and occasionally Betty yields to the temptation of putting into that bag articles which are certainly not rags. But apart from any suspicion of dishonesty, valuables find themselves in very odd places, through inadvertency or forgetfulness. We need not say much about such small creatures as insects, spiders or lizards, that are found by the paper-makers in bundles of esparto; they are unwelcome intrusions rather than finds. A patent lock was once found among the contents of a family rag-bag; and as it was worth five shillings, the buyer was content. An old Latin prayer-book, bought as waste-paper, had a bundle of nails, curiously linked together, packed inside it. Half-sovereigns and other coins are found in cast-off pockets, in the heels of old stockings, and inside the linings of dresses. An old coat, purchased by a London dealer, revealed the fact—a joyful fact to the buyer—that the buttons consisted of sovereigns covered with cloth. Three pounds sterling, in German paper money, found their way into a bundle of German rags that reached a paper-maker. The London Rag Brigade boys once found a bank check-book, and on another occasion six pairs of new silk stockings, in waste paper and rags which they had bought; these unexpected articles were, to the honor of the Brigade, at once returned. A rare find once occurred in the Houndsditch region. A dealer—of the gentle sex, we are told—gave sevenpence and a pint of beer for a pair of old breeches; while the bargain was being ratified at a public house, the buyer began to rip up the garment, when out rolled eleven golden guineas wrapped up in a thirty-pound bank note. We rather think, that in strictness of law, the guineas of this treasure-trove belonged to the crown; but most likely the elated buyer and the mortified seller made merry over the windfall. Many people, in the days when banking was little understood, had a habit of concealing their spare money about their persons; thus, an old waistcoat, bought for a trifle, was found lined with bank notes! But of all the finds, what shall we think of a baby? A paper manufacturer assures us that in a bag of rags brought from Leghorn, and opened at an Edinburgh paper-mill, a tiny baby was found, pressed almost flat. Poor bantling! Was it accidentally squeezed to death in a turn-up bedstead, or was some darker tragedy associated with its brief history?—Chambers' Journal.

A Sample Case.

Chapter I.—It was New Year's morning. He had been thinking deeply for a day or two, and there was a Spartan look on his face as he sat down to breakfast. He was unusually quiet, though he said he never felt better in his life.

Chapter II.—Rising from the table he drew forth his tobacco-box and said to his wife:

"Hannah, I'm going to quit the weed!"

"No!"

"Yes, I am. I've been a slave to the disgusting habit for forty years, but now I am done with it! Come here, Hannah."

She followed him to the door, and he flung the box far out into the back yard.

Chapter III.—Four days had passed. Dried pumpkin, cloves, spices, gum and dried beef had been chewed in place of the accustomed quid. The family cat had been kicked out of doors; the dog had fled; the hired girl's nose was up; every peddler in town came to the door.

"But you will stick to your resolution, won't you?" asked the wife.

"I will or die!" he replied.

Chapter Last.—'Twas dark. Man sneaked around the house—on his knees on the grass—pawed around—fingers clutched an object—lid flew open—moved his right hand to his mouth—"Yum! yum! But what a fool I was!"

Moral.—Don't chew.—M. Quad.

Made a Mistake in His Man.

An insurance agent called into an establishment on Main street the other day, with a large account book under his arm, and, walking up to the proprietor in a business sort of a way, he inquired: "How's business—how's stock?" "Oh, business is very, very dull," returned the tradesman. "'Pon my word, sir, I haven't got $900 in the house! Terrible dull!" and he paused and looked inquiringly at his visitor. "Only $900?" said the insurance man in surprise. "'Pon my soul, sir," repeated the dealer, "I don't believe there is a dollar more—look for yourself," and the man looked sad and sighed. "Then, sir, said the insurance man, with a good deal of warmth, "how does it come that your stock is insured in our company for $4,500, eh?" "Oh! ah! beg your pardon!" exclaimed the dealer, in great confusion; "I thought you was the tax man! I was sure you was the tax-gatherer, or, 'pon my soul, I wouldn't a-said that, when, in fact, my stock is worth fully $5,000—look for yourself, sir!"—Dayton (O.) Democrat.

A Lady at Bradford, N. H., has had a narrow escape from being buried alive. She had been sick for some time, and had apparently died. Preparations for the funeral were made on the third day after the supposed death, when it was observed, as she was placed in her coffin, that one of the eyes was partly open. Nothing was, however, thought of this, as it was thought to be muscular contraction after death. But when all the arrangements for the funeral were complete, she astonished the attendants by a sudden request to be placed on one side. A complete recovery is expected.

The Toilet.

DECAY OF TEETH.

The causes of the decay of the teeth are two—acids and minute fungus, abundantly found in the mouth, and called "leptothrix buccalis." All acids, both vegetable and mineral, act promptly on the teeth by dissolving the enamel and by softening the dentine. Sour fruits and vinegar salad are likely to injure the teeth, unless the mouth is carefully washed out after eating them. The little parasitic fungus can only be removed by alkaline mixtures. Soap is one of the best dentrifices. It appears that the parasites grow and multiply very rapidly, and especially between the teeth. It would be advisable, therefore, for those who wish to preserve good teeth, to carefully use the toothpick and scrub the teeth with soap and water after every meal, or at least twice a day.

CARE OF THE NAILS.

The correct management of the nails is to cut them of an oval shape, corresponding with the shape of the fingers. Never allow them to grow too long, as it makes it difficult to keep them clean; nor too short, as it causes the tips of the fingers to become flattened and enlarged, and turn upward, which gives the hand an awkward appearance. The skin which grows in a semicircle on the top of the nail requires much attention, as it is often drawn on with its growth, dragging the skin below the nail so tight as to cause it to divide into what are termed agnails. This is prevented by separating the skin from the nail by a blunt half-circular instrument. Many persons cut this pellicle, or thin skin, which causes it to grow very thick and uneven, and sometimes damages the growth of the nail.

CARE OF THE HAIR.

To keep the hair healthy, keep the head clean. Brush the scalp well with a stiff brush while dry. Then wash with Castile soap, and rub into the roots bay rum, brandy or camphor water. This done twice a month will prove beneficial. Brush the scalp thoroughly twice a week. Dampen the hair with soft water at the toilet, and do not use oil.

FLESHWORMS AND PIMPLES.

Try this recipe: Wash the face twice a day in warm water and rub dry with a coarse towel. Then with a soft towel rub in a lotion made of two ounces of white brandy, one ounce of cologne and one half ounce of liquor potassa. Persons subject to skin eruptions should avoid very salt or fat food. A dose of Epsom salts occasionally might prove beneficial.

Them Hoofs.

As Bijah was at the door, shaking the corn-husk mat, an old man came along and halted. He had a Roman nose, a pale blue eye, and he was bent and gray. He stood so long and looked so fixedly that the old janitor finally inquired:

"What yer looking at?"

"I have come a weary hundred miles," replied the old man, "on purpose——"

"On purpose to git to be a clerk in the Custom House?" interrupted Bijah.

"No, sir. I have journeyed far on purpose to——"

"Git into the Postoffice?"

"Nothing of the kind," said the old man. "I have traversed a hundred miles of highway on purpose to see your feet. I heard of them clear up at Port Huron. They wanted to bet me ten to one that you had feet as big as soap boxes. I am old and near my grave. I wanted to see them feet—them hoofs. Where do you stable 'em? Who hauls 'em around for you? What do you do with 'em in freezing weather?"

"See here!" whispered Bijah, in a voice choked with passion, "I'll murder you if you don't dust out o' here!"

"What am I doing?" asked the old man.

"Hoofs, eh!" yelled Bijah, as he dropped the mat, "call them feet hoofs?"

Some said the old man got away by crawling under a wagon and dashing down the alley. Some said he was in the morgue with all his limbs broken. Life has many mysteries twice as large as good old Bijah's feet.—Detroit Free Press.

Peculiarities of Henry Clay.

In his day it was the habit of the polite world of the Capital, dressed in their gayest, to repair to the Senate Chamber to listen to him whenever he spoke. He was everybody's pet. No man has ever had such adulation since. No man has ever got habitually such splendid and brilliant audiences as he. Those were days of grand debate, when the press had not gained so much prestige—before oratory had given way in Congress to the reporters. There were no holes in the sky then, and you could not prick an orator, like a bubble, with a witty sarcasm. Clay never disappointed—he would not have dared. But he dared things that no other man then or now would dare. At the end of a brilliant passage he would pause deliberately, and walk six steps across the aisle to Robert J. Walker's snuff-box, and, taking a pinch gracefully between his finger and thumb, return to his desk and put it with such ineffable distinction to his nostrils that the whole audience was ready to burst into applause. With any other man this would have been ridiculous. Clay made it sublime. It was the great King going to bed in the presence of his admiring courtiers.

The Waste of Greenbacks to be Stopped.

Treasurer New has just issued an order which will save the Government annually half a million dollars, if it is not interfered with by parties interested in the manufacture of fiber paper. The order, in effect, is to prevent the return to the Treasury at the expense of the Government of Treasury notes and fractional currency not defaced, mutilated or worn out, and, in case Government notes are returned, the cost of counting and returning will be deducted from the amount at hand. All notes sent for redemption the United States Treasurer is compelled to burn to secure proper vouchers for the Redemption Bureau. The destruction of so much paper money requires the purchase of a larger lot of the expensive fiber paper, increased expenses in the Printing Bureau, as well as the necessity of employing a larger force in the Redemption Bureau. The saving proposed, with the cutting down of extraordinary expenses for worthless patents used in the manufacture of our paper currency promises an annual reduction of over a million of dollars.

American Parlor Organs Abroad.

In the year closing June 30, 1875, the United States exported to foreign countries, as shown by Custom House returns at Washington, parlor or reed organs to the aggregate value of $363,132. The exports for the previous year were $292,151, showing some increase. It is remarkable that more than half of these exports in each year were the cabinet organs made by the Mason & Hamlin Organ Company, whose exports in 1875 were $185,820, and in 1874 were $163,169. Considering that there are in this country from two hundred to two hundred and fifty makers, this fact that more than half the instruments exported are from this one company, shows in what high estimation its work is held abroad.—N. Y. Com. Advertiser.

"Heal Thyself."

The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book of about 900 pages, illustrated with over 200 engravings and colored plates, and sold at the exceedingly low price of $1.50, tells you how to cure Catarrh, "Liver Complaint," Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Sick, Bilious and other Headaches, Scrofula, Bronchial, Throat and Lung Diseases; all diseases peculiar to women, and most other chronic as well as acute disorders. It contains important information for the young and old, male and female, single and married, nowhere else to be found. Men and women, married and single, are tempted to ask their family physician thousands of questions on delicate topics, but are deterred from doing so by their modesty. This work answers just such questions so fully and plainly as to leave no one in doubt. It is sold by agents, or sent by mail (post paid) on receipt of price. Address the author, R. V. Pierce, M. D., World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y.

A VALUABLE WORK.

[From the Lafayette Daily Courier.]

Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, distinguished in surgery, and the general practice in the profession he honors, has made a valuable contribution to the medical literature of the day, in a comprehensive work entitled "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." While scientific throughout, it is singularly free from technical and stilted terms. It comes right down to the common sense of every-day life. Dr. Pierce is a noble specimen of American manhood. He has sprung from the people; and, with many sympathies in common with the masses, has sought to render them a substantial service in the great work of his life.

Pimples on the face, rough skin, chapped hands, saltrheum and all cutaneous affections cured, the skin made soft and smooth, by the use of Juniper Tar Soap. That made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, is the only kind that can be relied on, as there are many imitations, made from common tar, which are worthless.

For catarrh the only substantial benefit can be obtained through the blood. Vegetine is the great blood purifier.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP, SEA WEED TONIC AND MANDRAKE PILLS.—These deservedly celebrated and popular medicines have effected a revolution in the healing art, and proved the fallacy of several maxims which have for many years obstructed the progress of medical science. The false supposition that "Consumption is incurable" deterred physicians from attempting to find remedies for that disease, and patients afflicted with it reconciled themselves to death without making an effort to escape from a doom which they supposed to be unavoidable. It is now proved, however, that Consumption can be cured, and that it has been cured in a very great number of cases (some of them apparently desperate ones) by Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup alone; and in other cases by the same medicine in connection with Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic and Mandrake Pills, one or both, according to the requirements of the case.

Dr. Schenck himself, who enjoyed uninterrupted good health for more than forty years, was supposed at one time to be at the very gate of death, his physicians having pronounced his case hopeless, and abandoned him to his fate. He was cured by the aforesaid medicines, and since his recovery, many thousands similarly affected have used Dr. Schenck's preparations with the same remarkable success.

Full directions accompany each, making it not absolutely necessary to personally see Dr. Schenck, unless patients wish their lungs examined, and for this purpose he is professionally at his principal office, Corner Sixth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, every Monday, where all letters for advice must be addressed. Schenck's medicines are sold by all druggists.

THE GREAT BLOOD REMEDY

—IS—

VEGETINE.

MAKE IT PUBLIC.

South Boston, Feb. 9, 1871.

H. R. Stevens, Esq.:

Dear Sir—I have heard from very many sources of the great success of VEGETINE in cases of Scrofula, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Catarrh, and all other diseases of kindred nature. I make no hesitation in saying that I know VEGETINE to be the most reliable remedy for Catarrh and General Debility.

My wife has been troubled with Catarrh for many years, and at times very badly. She has thoroughly tried every supposed remedy that we could hear of, and with all this she has for several years been gradually growing worse, and the discharge from the head was excessive and very offensive.

She was in this condition when she commenced to take VEGETINE; I could see that she was improving on the second bottle. She continued taking the VEGETINE until she had used from twelve to fifteen bottles. I am now happy in informing you and the public (if you choose to make it public) that she is entirely cured, and VEGETINE accomplished the cure after nothing else would. Hence I feel justified in saying that VEGETINE is the most reliable remedy, and would advise all suffering humanity to try it, for I believe it to be a good, honest, vegetable medicine, and I shall not hesitate to recommend it. I am, etc., respectfully,

L. C. CARDELL,
Store 451 Broadway.

VEGETINE acts directly upon the causes of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, allays inflammation, cleanses and cures ulceration, cures constipation, and regulates the bowels.

HAS ENTIRELY CURED ME.

Boston, October, 1870.

Mr. Stevens:

Dear Sir—My daughter, after having a severe attack of Whooping Cough, was left in a feeble state of health. Being advised by a friend she tried the VEGETINE, and after using a few bottles was fully restored to health.

I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism. I have taken several bottles of the VEGETINE for this complaint, and am happy to say it has entirely cured me. I have recommended the VEGETINE to others, with the same good results. It is a great cleanser and purifier of the blood; it is pleasant to take, and I can cheerfully recommend it.

REGISTERED WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL TRADE MARK.

"NATURE'S GREAT REMEDY."

This Cordial is a CERTAIN CURE for Coughs, Colds, Inflammation of the Lungs, Sore Throat and Breast, Bronchitis, and if taken in time, will arrest that fatal disease Consumption. The basis of this medicine is a preparation of Tar obtained by a peculiar process from the sap of the Pine Tree, the medicinal properties of which are well known. With this powerful element are thoroughly incorporated several other vegetable ingredients, each of which possesses soothing and healing attributes, thus making it the most POTENT ANTAGONIST to all diseases of the pulmonary organs that has yet been introduced.

DR. L. Q. C. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

Is not a new remedy that has never been heard of before, but an OLD, RELIABLE, AND WELL-TRIED medicine that has been in daily use by families and intelligent physicians for the last sixteen years, and is spoken of in the highest terms by all who have used it, as thousands of UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIALS prove.

If you suffer from any disease for which this Cordial is recommended, we unhesitatingly say: "TRY IT, WE KNOW IT WILL DO YOU GOOD." A single bottle will demonstrate its valuable qualities.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

Wilbor's Cod Liver Oil and Lime.—Persons who have been taking Cod Liver Oil will be pleased to learn that Dr. Wilbor has succeeded, from directions of several professional gentlemen, in combining the pure oil and lime in such a manner that it is pleasant to the taste, and its effects in Lung Complaints are truly wonderful. Very many persons whose cases were pronounced hopeless, and who had taken the clear oil for a long time without marked effect, have been entirely cured by using this preparation. Be sure and get the genuine. Manufactured only by A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston. Sold by all druggists.

Riding Two Horses.

Consistency is not considered much of a jewel in Congress, and bad memory appears to have reached the stage of an epidemic. The amnesty debate furnishes an illustration in point. The bill offered by Mr. Randall is a copy of that which passed the Republican house a year ago, and some curious facts concerning it were brought out in a tilt between him and Mr. Blaine last week, when the latter proposed to except Jefferson Davis from amnesty. Here is the passage from the Congressional Record:

"Mr. Randall was not this very bill passed last year by an instruction from the Committee on Rules, of which you were a member?

"Mr. Blaine— And to which I objected.

"Mr. Randall—Never. Neither in the house nor in the committee did you object to this bill.

"Mr. Blaine—Being in the chair, and unable to interpose an objection myself, I endeavored to get several gentlemen to object.

"Mr. Randall—I say that this very bill in almost these identical words, came from the committee of which you were a member, without objection.

"Mr. Blaine—I differ with the gentleman in point of fact: I did object to it.

"Mr. Randall—I say that neither in the committee nor in this House, in any way as a member of this body or as its presiding officer, did you object. On the contrary I say more, that at that time so far as I saw able to see or know, you facilitaed the passage of that bill.

"Mr. Blaine—I endeavored to object to this bill, but I was not able, being in the chair. Had I been on the floor I should have done it.

The conflict of statement is not reconcilable with perfect truth on both sides. Mr, Blaine was certainly understood to favor general amnesty last year, and that fact was urged in his behalf as a merit. If he was really opposed to it he could have left the chair at any moment and made his opposition known. But the Record at that time tells a very different story We cite from page 91 of the second volume, part I., with the remark that Mr. Blaine was Chairman of the Committee on Rules:

"Mr. Maynard—I am instructed by the Committee on Rules, acting upon a resolution submitted to them the other day to report the bill which I send to the desk. It has met the unanimous approval of the committee.

"Mr. Lawrence—Would that admit Jeff Davis to a seat on this floor?

"Several Members—Certainly.

"Mr. Lawrence—Then I object to it.

"Mr. Butler of Massachusetts—I do not object to the bill if it has been considered and reported by a committee.

"Mr. Maynard—It is reported by the Committee on Rules unanimously,

"Mr. Butler of Massachusetts—All right,

"The Speaker—The bill would require a two thirds vote to pass it,

"Mr. Maynard—I move that the rules be suspended and the bill passed

"The question was taken on Mr. Maynard's motion; and on a division there were-ayes 141; noes, 29,

"So (two-thirds voting in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill (H. R. No. 472) was passed,

Two facts are established by this extract. First, that Mr. Maynard distinctly stated twice in presence of the Speaker, who might have corrected him on the spot, that the bill was reported unanimously from the committee of which Mr. Blaine was Chairman. Secondly, that the bill included Jefferson Davis, and objection was raised on that account by Mr. Lawrence of Ohio.

Mr. Blaine has a perfect right to change his mind in regard to amnesty and to raise an issue upon its policy. But he has not the privilege of altering the public records to make them conform to his fluctuations of political expediency. Nothing is to be gained by sharp practice when detection is easy and punishment is certain.

Broggs' Experiment.

Says the Yolo (Cal.) Mail: Broggs, who lives in Elliott's Southern Addition, ran across the item the other day that "at night a horse would refuse to step on or over the body of a man lying in the road, but, as if impelled by instinct, would stop, and remain motionless until the matter should be investigated." Grave doubts as to the truth of this statement arose in Broggs' mind, and to settle the matter for himself he resolved to give the thing a practical test Now Broggs has no horse but does own a very intelligent and frisky young mule, so he thought it just as well to try the experiment with him. There is a narrow lane leading from the clover patch to the water trough, and he sent his little son Bobby to open the gate and turn out the mule meanwhile Broggs lay down full length across the lane, assuming an apparently lifeless attitude. The mule had been kept in the pasture all day, and consequently was very dry, so he came waltzing down the lane at a great rate, and everything denoted a fair trial of the test. And so it was but not exactly as Broggs would have desired, although it confirmed him in his skepticism. When within a yard or two the mule preceived the prostrate form of his master, and with an explosion of sound which was a compromise between the shriek of a locomotive and the yell of a frightened maniac he bowed up his back, flung his tail to the breeze, elevated himself about fifteen feet in the air, and, with all four feet in a bunch, lit on the pit of Broggs' stomach. Then with a fiendish laugh, he spread out his feet with a scraping, lacerating sound, and was off like a flash, not omitting, however, to give the experimenter a parting kick in the small of the back as he departed. The pride of the mule did not near pay the doctor's bill, and Broggs is now calculating how many postholes he will have to mortise before he will get even on his experiment.

All Goods Retailed at Wholesale Prices

This is the Only Secret of Our Immense Trade.

we purchase at first hands and sell direct to the consumer, as there is no middlemen to eat up the profits. Some goods—take teas for instance—pass through four different hands before they reach the consumers, and each one has to have his profit, so that 40 to 50 per cent. is added to price. The importer has his profit of 10 per cent., the jobbing merchant his profit of 10 per cent., the speculator and wholesale merchants, 10 to 20 per cent. and the retailer all he can get. So Sugars, Coffees, Spices, Prunes, Fruits, Tobaccos, Liquors, or anything we deal in. Our customers get the benefit of all these intermediate profits, No middlemen with us. Which evidently shows on which side the largest number of dead beats may be found.

A. K. Rex, of Newville, is contemplating a visit to the Wyoming Territory in a short time. He will probably engage in the dry goods trade. Being a thorough business man and with his pleasing ways he will certainly meet with success.

Wall, the negro murder at Fort Wayne after preaching Methodism for twenty five years, is now a pretty badly scared darkie. He has lost confidence in his old faith, and now asks the Catholic church to keep him out of purgatory. He now says he never did believe what he preached. Let him sing.

Auburn will make some extensive improvements the coming summer. Business and dwelling houses in large number are largely contracted for. Wright & Co., are furnishing lumber so cheap that any ordinary mechanic can save enough in one year to put up a comfortable house.

The weekly "Floridian," of Tallabassa, speaking of the general Amnesty bill before Congress, thus with one stroke drives the nail to the center:

"The debates on this question have been sharp and bitter, and will arouse more or less of ill-feeling. But the South can do better without universal amnesty than the United States can do without the South at the Centennial Exposition.

Capt. White, of the Fort Wayne. Fruit House, as will be seen from his advertisement, is doing wonders in the tea trade. He is selling tea best brands at $1 per pound, and some grades as low as 25 cents per pound. His immense trade in this article enables him to sell at a very low profit.

Clothing at Cost.

Our entire stock must be sold before Mar. 1st 1876 as we will make a change in our business at that time. If you wish to secure goods at actual cost now is the time. We mean just what we say. Commencing to day we will sell our goods at first cost until Mar. 1st 1876.

D. KAHN.

Dramatic. — Octoroon.

Again we are to be favored with a fine dramatic performance from our local performers. It will be one or two weeks before they will be ready, as they intend to get appropriate scenery, wardrobe &c and give the piece in a first-class way. Jas. Lowrie to superintend the performance.

One little fellow was putting on considerable airs at the "skating rink," the other night, and coming down the pond at an immense gate, he brawled out: "How's this for spread eagle." And if he didn't spread the eagle then and there the eagle never was spread. If he hadn't struck a stump standing up above the ice, nobody could tell but that he'd been spreading yet. After the boys took his skates off, and fished his hat out of the swift water he crawled up the bank and took the shortest cut for home.

TURN OUT.

Next Saturday evening the scholars in Mrs Thomas' department will give an entertainment, at Ensley's Hall, consisting of singing, speaking dialogues, &c. Mrs. T. has had them under training for several evenings and our citizens can expect a rich treat. We hope the house will be crowded as this is the first effort of the kind that has been made for a long time. The price of admission is only fifteen cents, and anyone would give that to please and encourage the little ones.

Dull Times.

Our city has not seen the time for a number of years that trade in every department of business has been so dull as this winter. Most of our merchants have carried a large stock of goods anticipating a heavy winter's trade, but the weather being so open and so much rain the roads have been almost impossible for farmers to get to town. For the past two months our merchants have suffered greatly, but we are glad to know that trade is soon to open up. We can look for a lively trade shortly.

BAD BOYS.

We have some troublesome boys in this city, and when they find any one who will put up with their nonsence they never know when to let-up. We noticed them holding a jubilee at a store near the post office the other day, and if the proprietor would have done justice to himself and right to the boys he should have dusted their coats with the fire-poker until it would bend double, and then give the rest a grand bounce with his boot. We were told to mention this to the boys and hereafter if his dander should happen to "riz," they know what's a comin'.

DAVID KAHN & CO.

FROM WASHINGTON.

DEAR COURIER.—The President gave a reception at the White House a few evenings ago, and of course I attended, not because I had any individual interest in the affair, but more to get the main features of the occasion so that I could give the readers of the COURIER a correct account of the same. This reception business is a great feature in Washington. In fact many, many women live by that alone—it is their bread and butter and without these, they are disconsolate, luckless, unhappy. Many private receptions are held every day by the fashionable and wealthy of the city many of whom have nothing else in God's world to do but live out this aimless shallow life, and enjoy it as best they can.

The Presidential receptions are always largely attended, every nook and corner in the lower rooms of the mansion being filled with eager, anxious souls, willing to be compressed into an immeasurably small space to gaze for a few moments upon the august personages assembled. I was fortunate to get a good position near the folding doors to await the coming of the Chief Magistrate. Everybody kept buzzing and talking until the doors were thrown open when silence feel upon the assembly, and the President and Mrs. Grant followed by Col. Fred. and his lady, entered and took their places near the center of the room. Gen. Babcock was not there to introduce each one as they passed up to greet the party, but another gentleman officiated. You give your name to this personage, and he announces it to the President, you shake the proffered hand and pass on extending the same courtesy to Mrs. Grant, and who ever else may be assisting in the reception sometimes five or six.

For instance Mr. Brown steps up and says his name is Brown. Mr. Brown is announced and he approaches, the President says "Mr. President," shakes hands, passes on, says "Mrs. President" shakes, passes on, says, "Colonel," shakes, on again, "Mrs. Grant," shakes, and so on, until the end, and that is the extent of the reception. Of course, you have shaken hands with the Presidential family, and I have no doubt he has wished all of them in Jericho before he is half done with them. It must be a laborious, unpleasant duty, but this is one of the simplicities of our Republican institution, and must be kept.

The President looks stout and hearty, and seems to be accumulating averdupois each year. Mrs. Grant is a heavy-set lady of medium hight, with rather a pleasant expression, small dark eyes, a little cross-eyed, and regarded as a very charming woman. Col. Fred, is a large broad-shouldered fellow, who looks as if he could maul rails to advantage, but don't mean to. There is nothing particularly striking about him, except his wife, who is said to be very handsome. Well I don't think she is the prettiest lady I ever saw in feature, and surely not in form. She has soft black eyes, and a winning smile, but I have seen others have these, with fresh rosy cheeks in fact, I believe I can find girls in De-Kalb county who will distance her in point of beauty.

Mrs. Treasurer New, of our State, I think much more handsome both in carriage and expression, and certainly more in feature.

The Indiana editorial excursion arrived here on Thursday evening, and a complimentary reception was given them at Willard's last night. The Indianians here had done all they could to make their visit pleasant, but it is a little discouraging to find three-fourths of this editorial party, not editors at all, unless it be of a livery stable or coal yard. The party numbers about 250, and perhaps thirty of these are actually editors This must be stopped, because it is an injury to the fraternity in the State, and I think the manager is, to a great extent responsible. While they may all be pleasant, agreeable gentlemen, they do not represent the interest of the journalist, and that is the great interest of the State.

The committee of arrangements of whom your humble servant was one, made out a programme for a hop last evening at which the President, Post-Master Jewell, Atty. Gen., Pierrepont, Speaker Kerr, Senators and Representatives from Indiana were present. Mr. Baker of the 13th District responded quite happily to a call made upon him for a few remarks by the assemblage as also did several other members. I called on the President the other day, to invite him in person to the Editorial Reception, and I know from the way he looked he wanted to say something about "White Stockings," but I excused myself on account of having to see all the members of the Cabinet for the same purpose. It is never good policy to broach a subject of this kind, "a horse dicker," on your side first, as the would-be purchaser may get an idea you're anxious to sell.

The House has been employed this week principally in discussing the Centennial Appropriation bill, and it is still at it. They want $1,500,000, but I don't believe the House will pass it, and if so by a very close vote. No ex-citement has been occasioned in the discussion, and I don't believe they will get over two votes in Indiana in its favor, while the members individualy desire to see the celebration a success, they do not feel like giving out of the public treasury. The Pacific Railroad bill is expected to be up in a few days, when there will be some lively work done.

TOM.

Another Fire.

Last Thursday evening while Billy Edgerton, the barber, who occupies the rooms over Klotz' store, in the wooden row, opposite public square, was at supper, some miserable incendiary went in through his shop and set fire to his bed in a back room. As he soon returned the fire had not time to get fairly started. The damage was light, but had it not been so timely discovered probably 25,000 dollars of property would have been destroyed.

That same night about 11 o'clock, Benj. Williams, who occupies the next room north, had occasion to ascertain what was troubling his dog back of his building, saw a man jump over the high board fence in the rear of his and Klotz' stores and make tracks to the west.

Our citizens must be on the look-out, and shoot every one on the spot. Cold lead will put out fire.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

ANOTHER hitch has occurred in the arrangements for a Mutual Council to decide the dispute between Mrs. Moulton and Plymouth Church, and the Council will not convene. The churches of Drs. Storrs and Buddington had accepted Mrs. Moulton's invitation to act in the Council, but their assent is now withdrawn in consequence of the extraordinary action of Plymouth Church in protesting against their participation on the ground of confirmed enmity.

MAINE is once again the scene of a terrific onslaught against the cohorts of the Demon Rum. The temperance reformers are holding meetings all over the State, and the enforcement of the Liquor law is prosecuted with extraordinary vigor....Moody and Sankey have closed their Philadelphia campaign, and will now, after a little rest, pitch their tent in New York city.

THE town of Apollo, Pa., has been almost entirely destroyed by fire. Forty houses, including a number of stores, were burned. The loss is estimated at $40,000 to $50,000. The fire started by the explosion of a kerosene lamp.

THE WEST.

A LAWYER named Douglass and a man named Cole have been convicted at Chicago of conspiracy to obtain a fraudulent divorce for Cole from his wife, and sentenced to three years in the Penitentiary....A large number of the Chicago distillers indicted for connection with crooked whisky operations, came into court the other day and pleaded guilty.

THE new Centennial mine near Laramie City, W. T., is a genuine bonanza. The gold assays 903 fine in gold and 86 in silver. The quartz assays $46,784.34 per ton in gold, and $274.49 per ton in silver, being a total of $47,051.83 per ton of 2,000 pounds....Miners are constantly leaving Fort Pierre for the Black Hills, and are meeting with no obstruction by the military, and the location of the route is so far south that they have nothing to fear from Indians.

THE man Davis, who murdered the landlord Whyland, on Thanksgiving Day, in Chicago, was arraigned in the Criminal Court of that city last week. He plead guilty to the charge of manslaughter and was sentenced to twenty-one years' imprisonment in the penitentiary. ....The war on the revenue robbers has been reopened with vigor at St. Louis. Arthur Gunther, ex-Revenue Agent, has been convicted of accepting bribes while in office. It is expected that other convictions will rapidly follow....The Iowa State Horticultural Society met at Des Moines last week, and exhibited the finest display of apples ever seen in the West, there being 275 varieties. Prof. McAfee exhibited 160 varieties of Iowa wood, and Prof. Fox eleven cases of Iowa geological specimens. Two hundred and fifty varieties of apples were prepared in wax for the Centennial, and Iowa will be first on the ground.

THE Supreme Court of Michigan has decided that the Sunday Liquor law, enacted at the last session of the Legislature, is constitutional. ....Henry C. Kibbe, Secretary of several mining companies, has absconded from San Francisco, a defaulter to the amount of $60,000.... The Minnesota Legislature has adopted a resolution approving of the proposed transfer of the Indian Bureau to the War Department, "which should not be trammeled in its action by any of those sectarian or humanitarian influences which have recently been recognized by the Government, to the prejudice of the frontier settlements and of the country."....A letter from Maj. Harper, of the Sixth Cavalry, at Camp Apache, Arizona, says the Indians broke out at Camp Apache on the 19th inst., and Maj. Harper and his company were ordered out just in time to save the lives of Maj. Ogilby, of the Eighth Infantry, and Lieut. Bailey. The troops charged the Indians, killing Diablo's brother, and wounding others. The Indians then attacked the garrison, but were driven back to the hills.

A MOB of disguised men recently destroyed the office of the News and Press at Cimarron, New Mexico, and threw the type and material into the river....The Southern Car Company, of Jeffersonville, Ind., has joined the innumerable caravan of bankrupts. The liabilities amount to the trifle of half a million dollars.... William Harlan, the only son of ex-Senator Harlan, of Iowa, died a few days ago at San Francisco, whither he had gone in search of health. He was 24 years old....Boyd, the notorious counterfeiter, has been tried and convicted in the United States District Court, at Chicago.

THE SOUTH.

THE Louisiana Legislature has passed a resolution that the Governor shall send militia to the parishes of East Feliciana, West Feliciana, and East Baton Rouge, to assist the courts in executing the laws against the so-called regulators. If the militia is insufficient, the Governor is requested to report so by special message to the Legislature, the latter to call, under the Constitution, upon the President of the United States to restore a republican government in the said parishes....The Grand Jury of Louisville, Ky., has indicted a number of citizens for betting on the recent municipal election....A late fire in Mobile, Ala., burned a block of buildings. Loss, $100,000.

THE widow of the late ex-President Johnson died at the residence of her daughter, near Greenville, Tenn., last week.

GEN. BEAUREGARD has applied to Congress for the removal of his political disabilities.... The famous Tredgar Iron Works at Richmond, Va., have suspended, throwing about 600 operatives out of employment.... A body of disguised men took four negroes from jail at Friar's Point, Miss., a few nights ago, and shot them to death. The mob reached the town soon after dark, and compelled the jailer, Maj. Alcorn, to surrender the jail keys, which were in the Court-House safe. The mob then entered the jail, and unlocked the cells in which were confined four negroes—Jim Stokes, Bob Young, Carey Irwin, and Tom Pugh. The prisoners were quickly tied, and then taken a mile from town and riddled with bullets. There were fifty or sixty men in the mob, half of them being negroes. The negroes were in jail on charges of robbery and arson.

WASHINGTON.

THE House Foreign Affairs Committee have agreed to the suggestion of the House Appropriation Committee to reduce the salaries of the Ministers to the four great powers, Great Britain, Russia, France and Germany, from $17,500 to $12,000. The salaries of the Ministers to Spain, Austria, China, and Brazil are reduced from $12,000 to $10,000. It was also proposed in the committee by Gen. Springer to abolish the following missions: Switzerland, Denmark, Greece, Bavaria, Ecuador, Hawaiian Islands, Hayti, Paraguay, Uruguay, Venezuela, and Liberia. This will involve a saving of $475,000....The President has appointed Samuel Wilson special counsel to conduct the internal revenue cases in San Francisco.

THE War Department in response to a request from the Committee on the reorganization of the Civil Service, has submitted a draft of a plan for the transfer of the Bureau of Indian Affairs from the control of the Interior Department to that of the War Department. It is believed that the transfer will be recommended by the committee, and concurred in by both the House and Senate.... A Washington telegram states that the House Committee on Banking and Currency have had a consultation on the subject of the Specie-Resumption act, and do not consider it a measure of any practical value, or calculated to further the object it purports to aim at. It is, therefore, about decided to report a bill materially modifying the existing legislation on the subject....It has been discovered that $12,000 has been illegally consumed by the Government in the Black Hills business, a law forbidding such action as has been had being in obscure existence, and having been recently discovered.

SECRETARY FISH has assured the House Committee on Foreign Affairs that all communications from Spain on the Cuban question have been of a friendly character, and that there now exist no questions the settlement of which are likely to give us any trouble.

REPRESENTATIVE SPRINGER, of Illinois, proposes an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, prohibiting special legislation by Congress in granting pensions, bounties, lands, or prize money to any person or persons, or for correcting the records of any department of the Government in reference thereto; granting relief of authorizing the payment of any claim against the United States or any officer thereof, except appropriations in general laws to pay the judgments of courts or commissioners authorized by law, remitting fines, penalties, or forfeitures; creating, increasing, or decreasing the fees, percentages, or allowance of public officers during the term for which said officers are elected; granting subsidies or special privileges to railroad corporations, and in various other cases.

SECRETARY FISH has laid before the Foreign Affairs Committee his correspondence with Spain concerning Cuba. The important part of the correspondence is the letter of Nov. 5 to Mr. Cushing, about which rumors have been flying through the air ever since Congress assembled. The note contains no imperative demand upon the Spanish Government. It sets forth the long continuance of the insurrection, with its evil effects upon our commerce and upon the property of Americans in Cuba, and incidentally alludes to the inhumanities practiced by the contestants. Mr. Fish does not consider that the note amounts to an actual attempt at intervention, neither does he admit that application has been made to any other government for countenance or co-operation in intervention. All that was done, he says, was to inclose copies of the note to Mr. Cushing to our several Ministers in Europe, who were authorized to read the dispatch to the governments to which they are accredited, and suggest verbally the question whether those governments could coincide with the United States in the propositions for pacification. Mr. Fish declines, as yet, to make public the number and intent of the answers he has received, as he considers that publicity for the time being is incompatible with public interests. On the whole, Mr. Fish entertains a hopeful expectation that the Cuban question will be settled peacefully.

IT is said that the real obstruction to Pinchback's admission to the Senate at present is the question whether there is a de jure Government in Louisiana. Until this question is settled by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, Pinchback will not succeed in obtaining a vote of the Senate....The House Committee on Appropriations has completed the Consular and Diplomatic bill. The estimates of last year were $1,352,385, and the amount appropriated $1,351,285. The present bill appropriates $911,147. The salaries of the Ministers of Great Britain, France, Germany and Russia are reduced from $17,500 to $14,000 each. The Ministers to Spain, Austria, Brazil, Mexico, Japan and China from $12,000 to $10,000. The Minister to Italy from $12,000 to $8,000. The salaries of all other officers are reduced in about the same proportion ....Senator Christiancy has introduced a bill looking to the punishment of polygamy in Utah. It provides that in any trial for bigamy or polygamy, it be sufficient cause for challenge and for the rejection of any juror, first, he has more than one wife living in said Territory, whether married by ordinary rites, or by the so-called sealing ceremony; or, second, that he believes it morally right for a man to live with more than one wife. If the panel is thus exhausted, talesmen may be summoned till the requisite number of jurors be obtained.

GENERAL.

THE American ship Harvest Queen, of the Black Ball line, on her way from San Francisco to Liverpool, was sunk in the Irish Channel early on the morning of the 31st of December, and her crew, numbering some thirty persons, perished.

THE English National Rifle Association have accepted the challenge of the Rifle Association of America to compete in a match for the championship of the world during the Centennial.

THERE is no chance for a disagreement or a jangle as to the composition of the rifle team which will represent Great Britain in the great Centennial contest in America. It was expected that different teams, distinctively Irish and Scotch, would compete with the teams of the world, but the English managers will not agree to this; whereupon Col. Gildersleeve promptly telegraphs them to send on any sort of team they choose, be the same English, Irish, Scotch, or mixed.

THE National Temperance Society has issued a call for an International Temperance Conference in Philadelphia, June 13, as a fitting occasion to consider the relations of the temperance reform, in its scientific, economic, intellectual, social, moral and religious aspects, to individual and national life, its progress and needs, and to invite the co-operation in its deliberations of representatives of the cause of temperance from foreign countries.

MR. SARGENT, of California, has introduced in the United States Senate a bill for the establishment of a postal telegraph system, of which the following are the main features: Every postoffice in the United States situated at a point on any telegraph line shall also be a telegraph station at which any telegraph company maintaining such line may establish and operate instruments. The charges for telegraphing shall be fixed by the Postmaster-General, but must not exceed the following: For ten-word messages less than 250 miles, 10 cents; for distances between 250 and 500 miles, 15 cents; from 500 to 1,000 miles, 25 cents; and for all greater distances, 50 cents. The Government is to have the right to purchase any line accepting the privileges of this bill, at any time within three years after commencing operations under it, and at actual cost, with 6 per cent. interest added.

POLITICAL.

THE friends of Senator Morton, says a Washington correspondent, claim that the selection of Cincinnati as the place for the holding of the National Republican Convention is a victory for him, and greatly enhances his Presidential prospects. Blaine's friends are openly denouncing the Indiana Senator for going into the National Committee meeting and making three speeches in favor of Cincinnati, or, as the Blaineites claim in favor of himself....Gov. Kellogg refuses to issue credentials to J. B. Eustis, who was recently elected Senator from Louisiana, to occupy the seat claimed by Pinchback and Marr.

THE President has appointed George S. Bangs Assistant United States Treasurer at Chicago....The Democratic National Committee has been called to meet at Washington, on Feb. 22.

THE Mississippi Legislature has elected Congressman Lamar to succeed Mr. Alcorn in the United States Senate. The Republican members of the Legislature refused to take any part in the vote, and will dispute the legality of the election upon the ground that a large number of the Democrats owe their seats in the Legislature to the employment of fraud and violence at the polls.... Hon. James B. Beck has been chosen United States Senator from Kentucky, to succeed Mr. Stevenson, whose term expires March 4, 1877. ....At a meeting of the Pennsylvania Republican Association in Washington, the other night, a resolution was offered declaring Blaine their choice for the Presidency; but as, in the opinion of the majority, it was too soon to agitate the subject, the resolution was laid on the table.

THE Republicans of the Maine Legislature have unanimously adopted a resolution designating Mr. Blaine as their choice for the Presidency.

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

FRIDAY, Jan. 14.—Senate—The Senate transacted no business to-day.

House—The Pension bill was passed. It appropriates $29,533,500, about $800,000 less than was voted last year ...Willard introduced a bill in the interest of Civil Service reform. It forbids members of Congress, under penalty of a fine of not less than $100, nor more than $1,000 to urge, advise, recommend, or in any manner interfere with the appointment of any officer, unless such advice is sought by the President or heads of departments or bureaus....The Amnesty bill, as amended by Banks, was reported back from the Judiciary Committee, put to a vote and defeated —yeas 182, nays 97—there not being the requisite two-thirds in favor of it. The following Republicans voted yea: Anderson, Banks, Egbert, Farwell, Haralson, Kelley, Landers (Ind.), Luttrell, Mackey (S. C.), Morey, Pierce, Seely O'Neil....Adjourned to Monday.

MONDAY, Jan. 17.—Senate—Gordon presented a petition of G. T. Beauregard for the removal of his political disabilities. Referred ....West introduced a bill intended to secure the Government interest on the Pacific Railroads....Sherman submitted a concurrent resolution proposing a common unit of money and accounts for the United States and Great Britain....Boutwell announced that the officers of the Treasury Department were preparing a statement in answer to the points made by Senator Davis.

House.—O'Brien introduced his proposed amendment to the Constitution, providing that no State shall enact a law respecting an establishment of religion, and that no minister of the gospel shall hold a public office....White (Ky.) introduced an Amnesty bill excluding Jeff. Davis. The House refused (166 yeas to 110 nays—not two-thirds) to suspend the rules and put the bill on its passage.... Bills were introduced: By Joyce, to repeal the stamp duties on medicines; also, to prevent traffic in spirituous or intoxicating liquors in the Centennial buildings or grounds during the exhibition; by Banks, for the removal of all political disabilities; by New, a constitutional amendment to limit the Presidential term to four years; by Cutler, applying the proceeds of the public lands to the support of free schools; by Jenks, to reduce the salaries of all the executive and legislative officers of the Government, except the army and navy, under $1,500, 20 per cent., and to fix the salary of the President at $25,000; by Hendee, for the printing of speeches delivered in Congress in the language in which they are delivered; by Woodworth, to establish a Bureau of Transportation, and to regulate the management of railroad transportation companies employed in internal commerce; by Hurd, to restore to gold and silver their monetary use in the United States from and after January, 1877, and to repeal the act for the resumption of specie payment....Holman moved to suspend the rules and adopt a resolution declaring it unwise and inexpedient at this time that a specific and arbitrary period should be prescribed by law for the resumption of specie payment, and instructing the Banking and Currency Committee to report a bill repealing the Specie Resumption act of Jan. 14, 1875. The rules were not suspended—yeas, 112; nays, 158....Morrison offered a resolution calling on the President for copies of all correspondence with Spain in reference to the Island of Cuba. Adopted.

TUESDAY, Jan. 19.—Senate.—Thurman presented the credentials of James B. Eustis, claiming a seat as Senator from Louisiana. The Davis Treasury investigation resolution was debated without action.

House.—Knott, from the Judiciary Committee reported a proposed amendment to the Constitution declaring that "no person who has or hereafter may hold the office of President shall ever again be eligible to said office."....Bills were introduced as follows: By Hunter, to fix the legal rate of interest on national money throughout the United States at not exceeding six per cent.; by Baker, fixing the pay of members of Congress at $3 000, and no allowances; by Anderson, fixing the pay of members of Congress at $1,000, with mileage at ten cents per mile; by Henderson, for the construction of the Illinois and Mississippi Canal; by Whiting, to repeal the tax on bank deposits; by Cannon (Ill.), providing a penalty for mailing obscene matter, and prohibiting lottery-circulars passing through the mails; by Hartzell, for the payment of a portion of the import duties in legal-tender notes; by Luttrell, to prevent the naturalization of Chinese or Mongolians.... Williams (Wis.) introduced a proposed amendment to the Constitution. It is supplementary to the amendment proposed by Blaine, which prohibits the distribution or control of any school fund or school lands to or by sectarian schools, and is designed to extend the prohibition. It is in these words: "Neither shall money raised by taxation in any State be appropriated for the maintenance of any sectarian school or sectarian institution."

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 19.—Senate.—The whole day was consumed in discussing Davis' Treasury investigation resolution, and in listening to Morton's promised speech in support of his resolution calling for an investigation of the Mississippi election.

House.—The House spent another day in discussing the bill making an appropriation for the Centennial. No action was taken on the bill.

THURSDAY, Jan. 20.—Senate.—Bills were introduced: By West, to recover from the Pacific railways the interest due on their bonds; by Allison, for the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Sioux City; by Christiancy, providing for the punishment of polygamy in Utah; by Sargent, for the establishment of a postal telegraph system.... Morton continued his speech in support of the resolution appointing a committee to investigate the late election in Mississippi.

House.—The House devoted the entire day to the discussion of the Centennial Appropriation bill.

WASHINGTON.

The Debate on Amnesty—Eulogiums on Ex-President Johnson—The Currency Question—Mr. Payne's Bill—Opinions in Regard to It—The President of the Senate.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15, 1876.

The great event in Congress of the past legislative week has been the debate on amnesty. This brought about not only a "field day," but several field days. It has crowded the south wing of the Capitol for four days with a surging, excited mass of people of about all nations and of all human hues,—white, red, black, yellow, pepper-colored, and I think that at times some were indigo-blue. It has brought about scenes of excitement on the floor of the House the like of which have not been witnessed for many years. It has induced a perfect monopoly of big and small talk in the town. Men take their drinks while talking of "amnesty." It is talked of by "society" and the clubs, at the gambling hells, and at the spacious rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association. It is, in a word, the all-absorbing sensation of this national political metropolis. Of course there is a great deal of politics in it.

Upon the question which has brought forth this excitement, or upon the comparative merits of the debate in the House, I have no single word to say. I beg leave to remark, however, as an impartial observer of men and things here, that the debate has demonstrated the fact that there are uncommonly able men in the House belonging to all parties. Whether one were a Republican or not, he could not have heard Mr. Blaine's speech without acknowledging his great powers as an orator. On the other hand, no man could have listened to Mr. Cox's reply without laughing at his wit and enjoying his keen thrusts and palpable hits of humor. Ben Hill, of Georgia, had, perhaps, the most attentive audience. He has been called an "extreme" man. He is generally considered one of the ablest men of the South. He had long been out of public life. There was great curiosity, therefore, to hear him, and on the day he spoke the Capitol was simply "ram-jam full." I only report a fact when I say that while all agreed that Hill showed great oratorical powers, many who agree with him in general politics regretted that he made the speech. They conceded that many of his statements were so highly colored as to create entirely erroneous impressions. Gen. Garfield also made a strong speech, and the remarks of Gen. Banks, who is a Liberal, were received with very great favor.

I have said that there was a good deal of politics in this matter. It is regarded here as a preliminary skirmish to the great Presidential battle of the year. This is the opinion of politicians. For myself I think they have overestimated the importance of the matter with the people at large, who care more for what is going to be the policy of the present and the future than for what was done in the past. But, however this may be, the debate conclusively shows that we are going to have a lively session. It has kindled the party fires and they may be expected to burn with more and more glow from this time on till after the Presidential election. There is not much "bad blood" in the current feeling, but there is an evident determination by the leading men of both the great parties to do their level best for success next November.

EULOGIUMS ON EX-PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

The death of ex-President Andrew Johnson was formally announced in the Senate on Tuesday, and in the House on the following day. Mr. Johnson always had, even in the stormiest times of his stormy career, a great following in this city. Besides that, he was always greatly respected on account of his personal integrity. I recollect well that, when he last spoke in the Senate he drew thither a greater concourse of people than had been there for years to hear a speech. Thousands were unable to gain admission. So also great crowds came to hear the eulogiums upon his life and character, the other day. Speeches on occasions of this kind are generally fulsome, indiscriminately adulatory, and a tremendous bore all around. Not so in this instance. They were all, except one in the House, short, and altogether devoid of that puffy character which has so often made efforts of this kind utterly stupid and worthless. The character of Mr. Johnson, with his faults and foibles as well as his noble and great qualities, may be not unprofitably studied in these eulogiums. Who shall say that we are degenerating when the orations over our dead statesmen are worth listening to and are worth reading?

THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

There have been introduced in Congress several bills and resolutions upon the currency question. The defeat by a very large vote of Mr. Rea's resolution against any further contraction of the currency—upon which I commented in my last—was regarded as a tolerably sure indication that the resumption act of the last Congress would not be interfered with. Since that time Mr. Payne, of Ohio, has introduced a bill which is likely to be much discussed in Congress and by the people and press. It is understood to have received the hearty assent of some of the leading members of the majority in the House. Whether this be so or not, Mr. Payne's position in the House, as the second man on the Committee on Banking and Currency, and as a member of high standing and ability, would give to any measure on this subject which he introduced and advocated no small amount of attention. The bill provides for a repeal of the resumption pledge for January 1, 1879, as contained in the act of the Forty-third Congress, and requires both the Government and the national banks to retain each year in coin a sum equal to five per cent. of the outstanding legal-tender and national bank notes. The object of the bill is to provide specie for the resumption of cash payments, but no time is expressly set forth in the proposed measure of resumption. It is claimed that at the end of six years—July, 1882—there being then 30 per cent. of specie for the outstanding paper, resumption could be safely undertaken. At that time the accumulation of specie in the banks and by the Government would amount to about $210,000,000, perhaps $225,000,000. The bill is brief and simple. It is regarded by some as a fair compromise on a matter in which there is confessedly a wide difference of opinion. On the other hand, I hear both "hard money" and "soft money" men condemn the bill as a surrender—the former alleging it is a surrender to the "inflationists," and will inevitably damage the national credit; the latter asseverating that it is a surrender to the bullionists, and inimical to the true wants of the country. As the bill has the approval of the Banking and Currency Committee, and calls forth such adverse criticisms as these from representative men of the two opposing theories on currency, and as it is likely to elicit wide debate, I thus early give an outline of its provisions and of what is said about it by friends and opponents at these headquarters.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE PRO TEMPORE.

The Senate, by unanimous vote, has decided that the President of that body pro tempore holds his office at the pleasure of the Senate. This may be of use hereafter, but is of no present importance, there being no intention of displacing Mr. Ferry, who was elected at the last session, and re-elected a few days ago. Should President Grant die, Mr. Ferry would at once become President. But as the Senate may at any time elect another man President pro tem., there is no telling who might occupy the White House, should Gen. Grant postpone his demise for a considerable period. As he is in very vigorous health we need not go to worrying on this point. L. M. N.

PASSING EVENTS.

JOSH CLARK, a veteran engineer on the Western Division of the Erie road, recently ran his engine 1,750 miles, putting in sixteen and a half days' time in a single week, and drew therefor sixty-six dollars pay. This is said to be the biggest locomotive feat on record.

IMMIGRATION to the United States has shown a remarkable decrease during the last two years. In the year 1872–3 the number of immigrants was 459,803; 1873–4, 313,339; in the last fiscal year only 227,493. It is evident that the news of our hard times has gone abroad.

ON the principle that retrenchment, like charity, should begin at home, the lower house of Congress has adopted a resolution reducing the number of committee clerks on its pay-roll from thirty-five to twenty-five, making a saving of about fifty dollars a day, or perhaps $10,000 for the session.

SOME of the fastidious people in Washington object to the modest fashion certain Congressmen's wives have introduced of having their cards inscribed "Mrs. Hon. Congressman, etc." But it will be a dreadful fall for these proud women when they will be obliged to sign themselves "Mrs. ex-Hon. Congressman."

A NEW way of putting it has been discovered by Mr. Sinnickson, a member of the lower house of Congress from New Jersey. In his bill for the relief of a constituent, who was formerly of Virginia, for supplies furnished the army of the United States, Mr. Sinnickson describes the late unpleasantness as "the late war between the States."

A CASE is pending in the Supreme Court, involving the constitutionality of the act by which Alexandria County, Va., was retroceded from the District of Columbia to that State. Prominent citizens of Georgetown are also moving in the matter of retroceding that city to Maryland, on the ground that it is damaged rather than benefitted by being a part of the District.

JAMES BLANCHARD, the precocious little reprobate who has been personating Charley Ross at St. Albans, received a grand ovation when he reached his home in Milford. A correspondent of the Springfield Republican thus describes it: "The streets were crowded, and his weeping mother clasped the little liar to her bosom, and promised not to whip him. He dropped a tear or two himself, but on the whole, was comfortably happy, especially as his St. Albans keeper, Mr. Rugg, wants to adopt him."

THE steamship Alaska has brought to San Francisco fifteen carloads of material for Japanese houses to be erected on the Exposition grounds. The Japanese carpenters accompany the wood, which is, in the main bamboo. It is already prepared in a great measure; all the hewing, the dressing, etc., has been done, and no labor remains for the carpenters excepting the task of finishing the material and putting the frames together. Several styles of houses will be on exhibition. They are entirely devoid of nails.

JARNDYCE VS. JARNDYCE was not an exaggeration, as witness the case of Ashley vs. Ashley. It was begun in 1740, when Lord Harwicke was Chancellor. It was reported on in 1792, and slept from that time till November 19, 1875, when it came up before Vice-Chancellor Malins, who ordered it to the Court of Appeals for final adjudication. It was quite delightful to observe that the Vice-Chancellor wound up his judgment on the point before him with these refreshing words: "Tax and pay the costs of all parties out of the funds in court."

MR. LAWRENCE, of Ohio, is after the Pacific railways with a sharp stick in the shape of a resolution requiring those corporations to indemnify the Government for the interest advanced on the subsidy bonds. According to Attorney-General Pierrepont this will amount to over $200,000,000, and Mr. Lawrence wants Congress to strike the roads for this small sum. It is barely possible that these corporations may be compelled to drop their enormous steal after all. It is a little to heavy for even a pair of railways to make off with.

THE Omaha Herald comes out strongly as an opponent of capital punishment. It suggests imprisonment for life, with an absolute prohibition of the pardoning power, except in cases where innocence can be clearly established. In Rhode Island, where there is practically no capital punishment—the statute providing that the death penalty shall only be inflicted on persons who may commit murder while undergoing life imprisonment—the pardoning power is vested in the Governor and Senate. The Governor's recommendation and Senate's consent are necessary. The result is that pardons are rare, and generally judicious.

NOT many months ago, in India, a gentleman and wife having taken passage for England went on board with their baggage. Presently the husband discovered that there was time for him to go ashore and see a man. He went, he saw, he was conquered; and when it occurred to him that it was time to go aboard again, he hailed a boatman and ere long found himself on board a large passenger-ship. It was night. A sleepy steward inquired the number of his cabin, which he chanced to remember, as also that his was the upper berth; so he contrived to clamber into it without disturbing his wife, as he supposed, who slept beneath. But when dawn broke, and the ship was well on her way, a feminine voice was heard shrieking, in a tone of terror, "Steward, steward! there's a man in my cabin!" The wretched man was aroused, and the situation explained to him. He had mistaken the ship. They were under way for Australia, and his unhappy wife was steaming away to England under a firm conviction that he had been robbed and murdered by ruffians who frequent the quays. When he at length arrived in Australia, he could not even there relieve her mind, as the cable connecting that country with Europe was not completed—it having, in fact, only now been working little more than a year—so that about four months passed before she heard anything of him.

Lieut. Cameron's March Across the African Continent.

Further details are to hand respecting Lieut. Cameron's expedition. The gallant explorer, in traversing the breadth of the entire continent from Zanzibar to Angola, met, on the whole, with a favorable reception by the natives.

He reached Benguella on the 7th and Loanda on the 10th of November, with fifty-seven East Coast men, all in good health.

It was Cameron's intention to remain at Loanda until an opportunity arrived for sending his men home round by the Cape to the East Coast.

It is understood that the intrepid traveler has accumulated some very valuable geographical materials, besides a large amount of general scientific information. Of course, the especial interest attaching to his mission is the great question of the connection of the Congo with the great eastern lakes. It appears that he followed a large river flowing out of Lake Tanganyika in a southwesterly direction, tracing its whole course till he came upon a new lake, which he named "Livingstone."

From this body of water a second large river runs westward, which the Lieutenant, having traced it for a considerable part of its length, believes to be the Congo.

It would seem that he was unable to continue along the river on account of meeting with a tribe of hostile natives. He had to choose between fighting his way through these unfriendly tribes, with the risk of loosing all his journals and papers, or of taking a different direction. The latter alternative seemed preferable, and, though it prevented the absolute verification of his important discovery, he has personally no doubt that the stream flowing out of Livingstone Lake and the Congo are one and the same.—London Times.

A GOOD-SIZED REVOLVER.—The largest revolving gun that has probably ever been manufactured is now at the royal gun factories in the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, England. It is a revolver with five chambers, firing successively through an open-mouth barrel, and moving about on a kind of truck. It weighs 35 cwt., and appears to be very ingeniously contrived. It will shortly be forwarded to Shoeburyness, to undergo a series of trials in competition with various charges of gun-cotton.

EMPLOYER—Good morning William, how are you? and how's your poor old mother? William—Well, sir, I don't know; I don't live with the old woman now; I've got lodgings of my own. (Pause.) But I won't see her want. Employer—Ah, perhaps that's why you moved away!

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

Driving Home the Cows.

Out of the clover and blue-eyed grass
  He turned them into the river-lane;
One after another he let them pass,
  Then fastened the meadow bars again.

Under the willows, and over the hill,
  He patiently followed their sober pace;
The merry whistle for once was still,
  And something shadowed the sunny face.

Only a boy! and his father had said
  He never could let his youngest go;
Two already were lying dead
  Under the feet of the trampling foe.

But after the evening work was done,
  And the frogs were loud in the meadow-swamp,
Over his shoulder he slung his gun,
  And stealthily followed the foot path damp.

Across the clover and through the wheat,
  With resolute heart and purpose grim,
Though cold was the dew on his hurrying feet,
  And the blind bat's flitting startled him.

Thrice since then had the lanes been white,
  And the orchards sweet with apple bloom;
And now, when the cows come back at night,
  The feeble father drove them home.

For news had come to the lonely farm
  That three were lying where two had lain;
And the old man's tremulous, palsied arm
  Could never lean on a son's again.

The summer day grew cool and late;
  He went for the cows when the work was done
But down the lane, as he opened the gate,
  He saw them coming one by one—

Brindle, Ebony, Speckle, and Bess,
  Shaking their horns in the evening wind;
Cropping the buttercups out of the grass;
  But who was it following close behind?

Loosely swung in the idle air
  The empty sleeve of army blue;
And worn and pale, from the crisping hair
  Looked out a face that the father knew.

For Southern prisons will sometimes yawn,
  And yield their dead unto life again;
And the day that comes with a cloudy dawn
  In golden glory at last may wane.

The great tears sprang to their meeting eyes;
  For the heart must speak when the lips are dumb;
And under the silent evening skies
  Together they followed the cattle home.

Around the Farm.

A CONSCIENTIOUS farmer in Lewiston, Me., wiped the mud from his cart-wheels before permitting his load of hay to go on the scales to be weighed. But such men are never sent to the State Legislature.

FOR A CRIBBING HORSE.—Feed with a nose-bag and give hay only from an iron rack. Coating the woodwork in a manger with crude petroleum is also recommended. The bad taste will soon cure the animal of all desire to bite his crib.

WATER FOR DAIRY COWS.—No animal should be required to drink water which the owner himself would refuse, and especially so if the cow from which you hope to make good butter. It is sufficient on this point to say that pure water is an indispensable article to the success of the dairymen, for good butter or cheese cannot be made where good water cannot be obtained.—Canada Farmer.

CLEAN CELLARS.—Take care that the air in your cellar be free from bad odors, lest your butter, cheese, fruit, or whatever else be kept there, become ill flavored, having an old, musty taste. It is important that the air of your cellar should be changed, as that of your parlor, sitting-room, dining-room, kitchen or sleeping-room. Pure air is one of the very best preventives of the typhus fever, diphtheria and other kindred ailments. Will farmers and housekeepers make a note of this?—Boston Cultivator.

THE wood-pile is always needing some attention, and a few hours a day in chopping wood will be in order now. But where wood is used, the winter ought to be improved to get up the supply for the year. It is a very shiftless plan to leave it to the spring or summer. Time is too valuable then to have to stop a day's work to run and get up wood to keep the pot boiling. It is always best to keep a stock of wood on hand for a year's supply ahead, and it is a very comfortable and independent feeling that attends a first-rate supply of fuel.

TWO HINTS.—When you wish to set out your tomato and cabbage plants next spring, start them in little boxes made of tarred felt or building paper. Make the boxes about as large as a tumbler, but without any bottom. Have one plant to a box. When ready to transplant, you can slip the box off without disturbing the roots, and then the plant will grow right along. Another thing—don't bring that stake you intend to drive into the ground to a point, but taper it off like a chisel or wedge, and then it will drive straight.—Western Rural.

SWEET OIL FOR POISON.—It is now over twenty years since I heard that sweet oil would cure the bite of a rattlesnake, not knowing that it would cure other kinds of poison. Practice and experience have taught me that it will cure poison of any kind, both on man and beast. The patient must take a spoonful of it internally, and bathe the wound for a cure. To cure a horse it takes eight times as much as for a man. One of the most extreme cases of snake bites occurred eleven years ago. It had been of thirty days' standing, and the patient had been given up by his physicians. I gave him a spoonful of the oil, which effected a cure. It will cure bloat in cattle caused by fresh clover. It will cure the stings of bees, spiders, or other insects, and persons who have been poisoned by a low running vine called ivy.—College Courant.

TOOLS IN THE ROAD.—We cannot reform the world even by continued reiterations, but would feel well paid if we could make even a few farmers, who persist in leaving an array of farmers' tools with an intolerable amount of rubbish in the road opposite the house, secure their property in a neat, respectable manner. Passing a farm of considerable pretensions near Marshall the other day, we noticed five plows, three cultivators, three excuses for stone boats, and other farm implements in proportion, strung along the highway for twenty rods directly at the front of the house and barn. At a hasty estimate there was $250 worth of property ornamenting the road and wasting away at the rate of one per cent. a month for want of care. We trust men like this one will find no fault with the taxes, for it would be so uncalled for when he is wasting yearly enough to pay a large proportion of them.

SOCIAL BIRDS.—It is wonderful how the birds love the companionship of men. Even the Indian recognizes this liking, and puts up his gourd-shell for the purple martin; the colored man of the South, in like manner, sets up a calabash, while in our villages are seen martin-houses, often evincing taste in their construction. But the American swallows formerly kept aloof from men, and in the far west the martin, as of old, builds in hollow trees. Some of our migratory birds are seen with us in the winter. This is explained by the agricultural habits of men. Wherever agriculture flourishes, so will insects, and the fields of the husbandman are thus attractive to the birds, who come thither with their sweet voices and good deeds. Now, this fact does in time greatly modify the migration impulse. The blue-bird is a frequent visitor of our gardens in winter, though not in large numbers. He now finds his food in the larvæ of those insects which are the pests of the farm; and it is pleasant to watch him peeping around palings and under ledges and rails for his food.

About the House.

HICKORY-NUT CAKE.—One pound of flour, one pound of sugar, three-quarters pound of butter, six eggs, two teaspoonfuls cream of tartar, one of soda, half a cup of sweet milk. Beat the cake thoroughly, then stir in a small measure of hickory nuts, first, of course, taking them from the shell. Bake in a steady but not quick oven. This is a very fine cake.

WASHING WOOLEN OR FLANNEL ARTICLES.—Cut up some white soap, put it into soft water, boil it up and skim; when no more scum rises leave it to cool. Put a very little quantity of spirits of wine in it, and wash the things as quickly as possible, rinse in luke-warm clear soft water, into which a small quantity of spirits of wine has been stirred.

TEA BISCUIT.—One quart of sweet milk, one small teacup of butter, the same of sugar, one gill of good yeast flour to make a sponge. Mix over night; when light stir in more flour to make the dough of proper consistency; press the knuckles firmly into the middle of the dough, and when it rises to a uniform oval it is ready to be worked over into biscuit. Kneed twice, and, when light the third time, bake in a quick oven about twenty minutes.

WATERPROOF DRESSING FOR LEATHER.—A dressing which makes leather waterproof is made as follows: Dissolve one part of India rubber in five parts of illuminating petroleum, let stand for a day, then add twenty parts of paraffine to the pasty mass; let stand again for half a day, with repeated stirring, and then mix it with five parts of oil and five of tallow, and finally add ten of petroleum, or enough to give the mass the consistency of butter.

A CHEAP BUT GOOD SOAP.—Take four large bars of yellow soap, two pounds of sal soda, three ounces of borax, one ounce of liquid ammonia. Shave the soap in thin slices; put it into eight quarts of rain water. When the soap is nearly dissolved, add the borax and sal soda; stir till all is melted. Pour it into a large tub or shallow pan; when nearly cool add the ammonia slowly, mixing it well. Let it stand a day or two, then cut it into bars, and dry in a warm place. The soap is excellent for all household purposes. It costs but three cents a pound, and may be made in less than an hour.

WORTH TESTING.—Save the tea leaves for a few days, then steep them in a tin pail or pan for half an hour, strain through a sieve, and use the liquid to wash all the varnished paint. It requires very little "elbow polish," as the tea acts as a strong detergent, cleansing the paint of all its impurities, and making the varnish equal to new. It cleans window-sashes and oil-cloths; indeed, any varnished surface is improved by its application. It washes window-panes and mirrors much better than water, and is excellent for cleansing black walnut picture and looking-glass frames. It will not do to wash unvarnished paint with it.

THREAD CASE.—Many ladies are annoyed by their white spool cotton becoming gray with the particles of dust that will accumulate in work baskets, but do not feel like spending money to purchase a thread case. Here are directions given in the New England Farmer for making a substitute: Take a small pasteboard box (a collar box is good), cut a piece of thin board to fit the box tightly, bore holes in this at convenient distances for the spools to stand, and into the holes fit small wooden pegs, an inch in height, and of such size that the spools placed on them will revolve easily; then in the sides of the box, pierce small holes for the end of the thread to pass through, and you have a spool case without cost, which, if not as ornamental as a bought one, will be equally useful. If one chooses, the box may be prettily ornamented with gilt paper, flowers cut from wall paper, or any of the various methods for decorating fancy boxes.

All the Work of an Editor.

The plan of making England the purchaser of the Khedive's interest in the Suez Canal, and its practical controller, for $20,000,000, was substantially the work of Mr. Frederick Greenwood, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, and one of the most capable of London journalists. The memorandum drawn up by him setting forth the arguments in its favor is said to have made a deep impression on Mr. Disraeli, and secured his adhesion.

THE old adage, laugh and grow fat, is not of universal application. John Morris, a young man about twenty-eight years of age, living near Langley, Ga., went to a masquerade the other night. He had always been noted for laughing immoderately at any funny incident. Some ludicrous feature of the masquerade caused him to set up in a fit of laughing, when he suddenly stopped and fell to the ground. He was picked up and a physician sent for, who pronounced the case hopeless, as Mr. Morris had ruptured a blood vessel. The unfortunate man lingered until the next morning, when he died.

A DETROIT HERO.

Over One Hundred Lives Saved by One Man.

The New York Tribune says: Among the applications made to the last Congress for a medal for services in the saving of life was that of John Horn, of Detroit, who may be justly styled a home-bred John Lambert. The character and adventures of John Lambert of Scotland were very graphically described by Charles Reade a year ago in the Tribune, under the title of a "Hero and Martyr." Mr. Horn is a young man living at Detroit, assisting his father there in a small tavern near the public wharves. Doubtless this proximity to the water has given him the opportunity which he has had in several years for saving what he calculates in the aggregate at about one hundred human lives from death by drowning.

The Hon. Moses W. Field, of the House of Representatives, who knew Horn in Detroit, brought his claims to the attention of Congress. In collecting information in regard to Horn's singular and thrilling adventures, the following letter was obtained from the hero himself. It is a very modest and not detailed report of what he has accomplished, told in simple and homely language, and will be read with peculiar interest:

THE HERO'S OWN STORY.

DETROIT, Feb. 22, 1874.—The Hon. Moses W. Field, House of Representatives—DEAR SIR: I have never desired a public statement of the service which, under God, I have been able to render in saving human life, but as you have asked me to send you a list of the men, women and children whom I have rescued from drowning, I will do so as far as I can from memory. I have never kept a record of the names, and the number is so great that you will excuse me if I leave some unmentioned.

I think I have altogether saved more than 100 human beings, but I take no credit about this matter, and I have never regretted doing what I have done in any case, although I have had at times to keep my bed for many weeks on account of the exposure in the cold water. It is well for me that I had a good mother to take care of me at such times of sickness. On the 21st of May, 18—, I saved Mr. Manning, of Windsor. On the 7th of July, 1865, I saved Mr. George Taylor, of New York State; he was very near dead when I got him on the wharf. Oct. 10, 1866, I saved a child of Mr. F. Gorman, of Adrian; she was about 5 years old, and was near drowned when I got her out. Dec. 12, 1865, I saved a son of Mr. Yates, who kept a clothing store on Jefferson avenue. The night was very cold, a high wind was blowing at the time, and he was very near dead when we reached the wharf.

April 11, 1866, was the worst night I ever had. It will be ever memorable as the night of the great conflagration at the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad Depot, when sixteen poor fellows were drowned. I rescued nine, and then became so exhausted that I could not swim, and had to abandon them to their fate. I got a very bad cold and lay in bed two weeks, but that was nothing in comparison to the good accomplished. July 25, 1866, I saved Mr. Joseph Noble, of Windsor, and I believe you were there at the time. He was once engineer on the Great Western Railroad. You know he came near drowning me by his struggles in the water, at which time I received severe injuries. April 7, 1867, I saved the son of Mr. Myers, who lived in Mullet street. He was a boy about 12 years old. June 14, 1867, I saved the daughter of Mr. Andrew Norse, of Cleveland. She was going on board the ferry-boat, with her mother and some other ladies, when she fell off the plank. When I got to the wharf she was going out of sight for the last time, and I plunged in and brought her to the surface. Sept. 15, 1867, I saved a colored man, who was a deckhand on the propeller Meteor. He kicked me about in the water terribly, for drowning men are always crazy. Nov. 2, 1867, I saved Mr. David Miller, the man who drove a wagon for Hull Bros., storekeepers, on Monroe avenue. May 10, 1868, I saved Mr Robert Sinton, known as "Free Press Bob.' You know, he used to be a reporter for the Free Press. And in his haste to get news, he fell in, and I got him out.

A few nights after that, I saved Mr. Steele, who used to keep a store on Michigan avenue. He was on the ferryboat with his wife; he had a very spirited horse, and was holding him by the head when the boat struck the wharf. The horse jumped and threw him into the river, when the current swept him under the wharf. I jumped in and got him out all right. Oct. 4, 1868, I saved a daughter of Mr. McDonald, of Windsor. May 12, 1869, I saved Mr. Flattery, one of the Flattery Brothers, who keep a furniture store on Woodward avenue. He was a heavy man; when I got hold of him he was near gone, and I came near loosing my own life in getting him out. June 21, 1870, I saved a man called Mr. George Brodier. I was eating dinner at the time, when some person came running in after me, saying, "There is a man in the river." I ran out and jumped into the river, and as soon as I got near him, he clutched me like a vise and took me under the water twice. When I came to the top the last time, my father handed me a long pole, which I caught, and that saved me. He was a powerful man, and kicked and struggled so hard that he made my legs black and blue for many months.

My mother goes to the edge of the wharf with me very often, when I jump in; but when she sees persons struggling in the water and drowning, she never holds me back.

Aug. 24, 1871, I saved the daughter of Mr. A. Wilson, of Milwaukee. March 4, 1872, I saved a colored man by the name of George Wilkes; he fell off the wharf while under the influence of liquor, but I think he has been a sober man ever since. July 4, 1873, I saved the daughter of Mr. F. Barlow, a butcher, who keeps a stall in the market. She was going on board the ferry-boat Detroit with her mother and some other ladies; the crowd was very great, being the 4th of July, and, although her mother held her by the hand, the crowd surged, and she was crowded off the plank and fell into the river. There were about 500 people on the wharf at the time, and they were all staring at the poor girl struggling in the water, not one of them daring to go to her rescue. I was in the house when some one came to give the alarm, and when I got out there I could just see her dress as she was going out of sight four or five feet below the surface. I jumped in and caught her, and when I got out on the top of the wharf with her the people gave me three cheers. March 6, 1873, I saved a young lady called Miss Louise McKenzie. This was the closest call I ever had for my life. I was in the water about seventeen minutes, and the river being full of floating ice at the time I was nearer dead than alive when I got out. Four men carried me into the house, and they rubbed me with hot whisky for over four hours before circulation was restored to its normal condition. This severe exposure made me sick, and it was over three months before the right feeling was in my hands.

You will remember this incident, for you came to me when I was unwell. I regret very much at this time I lost the beautiful medal presented me by the citizens, and I think you were one of the gentlemen connected with its presentation. I have been informed that I would receive a medal from the British Parliament, but it has not come. I don't ask any.

I saved "a poor unfortunate individual" last month, when I took a severe cold, and as I was lying in bed reading the proceedings of Congress, I saw something about an appropriation for medals to persons for saving life on the sea shore, and I thought then that some gentleman would be very likely to remember also those who save lives on the Northern lakes and rivers. There are many other cases which I don't mention, as I have not got their names. You must know yourself of a great many; as your place of business and warehouse are near by, and I recollect seeing you several times when rescuing people from a watery grave. Wishing you and your family good health, I remain, very truly yours, JOHN HORN, JR.

WHITEWASH.—Mix some fresh slaked lime with water till of the consistency of cream, dissolve a small lump of copperas in warm water; when cold mix with the lime water. Lay it on the walls with a large brush, taking care to stir up the mixture every time the brush is dipped into it.

Rather Hard on the Cats.

It is estimated that between 15,000 and 20,000 cats perished in the flames that lately licked half our city from the side of Mount Davidson. The estimate is probably too high, as it appears to us that we miss no more than about 10,000 or 12,000—that is, in a general way. We, however, particularly miss and mourn no more than 200 or 300. These were favorites of our neighborhood that were wont nightly to do gambols and execute difficult musical selections for our diversion. How often, when the witching hour marking the noon of night was stealing in, have we seen a giant of the feline horde—a fighter from Bitter Creek—mount the giddy height of a neighboring firewall and sound his warlike bugle. We can see him now, as with arched back reared against the sky, like some rounded chaparral hill, and erect tail waving like a cedar tree in a storm, he stands, in his sphere and according to his knowledge, a defiant Ajax. The moon is playing hide-and-seek among a floating archipelago of clouds as he thus stands up and defines his position categorically as the boss fighter of the town. Another yell of warlike portent tells that the challenge is accepted, and another Ajax appears upon the wall, arches his back, and waves an angry tail. The pair draw their feet well under them, dig their claws into the wall and cautiously creep forward, ever and anon uttering sounds that would seem great though they came from the lungs of a pair of adult mastodons. The friends and allies of the champions make their appearance on the roofs of surrounding houses and sheds, utter their several war-cries, and deploy as skirmishers. The two champions come together like rocks rolled from the sides of opposite hills; the skirmishers, with green eyes flashing, engage in all directions, and the battle has become general. The air is rent with howls, shrieks, groans and gurgles—all the house-tops are covered with hair. Half a dozen soda bottles and as many old boots crash down upon those roofs and against the walls. There is a spit, a sputter, and a fizz; then all is as silent as the tomb. Where now are those heroes and their heroic followers? Alas, their calcined bones alone are left in the places where they once frisked and fought? All are gone! The tortoise-shell of the old maid, the mighty Maltese of the old bachelor, the pet cats that used to sleep on the counters and bite all who stroked them, and the wild cats that dropped down from places and stared at one in the night—all are gone! The great fire cremated them all. In vain they darted from shed to stable and from stable to sidewalk, with their tails erect and smoking or all aflame. Their time had come, and they were either cooked in holes or roasted as they ran. Let all true lovers of the cat join in and wail a willainous caterwaul!—Virginia City Enterprise.

Precocious Children.

Never be anxious to have your children precocious. It is often the very smart child that makes the commonplace man, and the dunce, who makes his parents ashamed of him, that at last becomes distinguished. The boy likely to be "somebody" in due time will, probably, be that torment of your life who poaches preserves, fights his brothers, and is brought in black and blue from bruises gained in a fall from some neighbor's apple tree; while the excellent fellow who is at the head of his class, and never wears out the knees of his trowsers, will disappoint your expectations. The very worst way to make a genius of a boy is to bring him up for one. Under such training, if he has not the real stuff in him, he will become a conceited jackanapes. If he has the real stuff in him, it will develop itself in its own fashion, and at its own time; and nature will generally postpone that time until his legs are sturdy, his arms strong, and fun, frolic and a good appetite have done their best for him, and made his body capable of helping his mind at its work, which is something more necessary than parents who like show-children are apt to think.

The Ravages of the Sea.

The destruction of ship property belonging to or trading to ports in the United States during 1875, was $1,164,000 less than in 1874, the total being $7,622,000. In 1873 the loss was valued at $11,783. The most disastrous months for shipping last year were May and November, when over $2,000,000 worth went to the bottom of the sea, including six steamers, six ships, sixteen barks, five brigs and forty-four schooners, a total of seventy-seven vessels. Last year twenty steamers were lost; in 1874 nineteen. We have no data at hand showing the value of the cargoes lost in the 373 vessels last year, but no doubt the marine insurance companies are familiar with the figures. The loss of life incident to these disasters has been comparatively small, but those brave men who have been sacrificed, over whose resting place no monumental stone can ever be placed, have left behind them hearts to mourn.—Boston Globe.

A Frightful Death.

Coroner Deitzsch held an inquest yesterday afternoon on the body of James White, a man of about 50, who met his death at the Northwestern Fertilizing Works in a most horrible manner. White was employed to remove the fertilizer from the tanks, and when last seen he was inspecting them from a platform on a level with the tops. Nothing more was seen of him until yesterday morning, when his friends, becoming alarmed at his protracted absence, made inquiries about him. A search was made, and finally the tanks were drawn off, when a horrible sight was disclosed. The unfortunate man must have slipped from the platform into the tank, which was twelve feet deep and contained four feet of the boiling liquid. Nothing was left of him but a few bones, the flesh and clothing having been entirely removed by the action of the scalding fertilizer. The jury returned a verdict of "accidental death."—Chicago Journal.

How Indians Cure Meat and Dress Skins.

When her lord has killed a buffalo the woman's work begins. She has to skin it, the meat to secure, and all to pack upon ponies or mules, and carry to camp, where the meat must be cured. This is done by cutting it into thin sheets, and hanging it over poles in the hot sunshine, where it is dried thoroughly; then it is packed fresh in packages of about one hundred pounds each, and inclosed in a nice folding sack of thick buffalo skin, prepared especially for the purpose. This is not dressed down thin after being fleshed, but well tanned, and of the full thickness of the skin; the hair side, nicely ornamented with paint, for the out-side of the sack. This is cut out like a huge envelope, so that the ends and sides will fold over whatever is put in them, and secured by strong buckskin strings. By being thick it retains its form, and is very useful for carrying other things besides meat and tallow. After the meat is taken care of the skin must be looked after. Those taken at this season of the year are mostly dressed for lodges. They are first staked on a smooth spot of ground, and water put upon them, when they are ready for fleshing. This consists in removing the flesh with an instrument made of a straight bar of iron, about a foot in length, flattened at one end and filed to an edge. This being grasped in the hand, and a succession of quick blows given, the work slowly proceeds. The skin is then dried, after which the hair is removed in a dry state, and the skin reduced to a proper thickness by dressing down on the hair side. This is done with an instrument made by firmly tying a flat piece of steel, filed to a beveled edge at one end, and with the corners rounded, to a large prong of a deer's horn. This is so trimmed, in connection with the body of the horn, as to form an elbow, and is used a little as a carpenter uses his adze. This work is usually done in the cool of the morning. The brains of the animal, having been properly taken care of for the purpose, are now soaked and squeezed by the hand until reduced to a paste, and applied to both sides of the skin, which is afterward worked and rubbed until flexible. The preparation of robes is from winter skins, and differs from the foregoing only in being dressed down on the flesh side, so as to leave the wool and hair upon the robe, and is more thoroughly worked, and scoured by means of a sharp-gritted stone.—Battey.

New York State Tax Burdens.

The Comptroller's report to the Legislature shows that the people of the State of New York have borne a taxation for all purposes—State, county, city, town, and school taxes—in the aggregate, for ten years past, of $503,244,529.24. The total for 1875 was $56,926,370.69. The total for 1866 was $40,568,244.69. The corresponding total for the year 1860 was $18,956,024.50. In the ten years last past the State Treasury has received of the people's money $182,087,048.43. The State's finances have in that time been so managed that a State debt of $51,532,082 in 1866 is now reduced to $14,747,302. But municipal finances have in the same time been so managed that local debts, which in 1860 barely exceeded $75,000,000 have now come to exceed $225,000,000.

The revenues of the United States in the year 1875, from customs and internal revenue, were $155,815,530.39, gold, and $114,866,798.12, currency, or, the gold being converted into currency at an average of 114 for gold, an aggregate of $292,496,512.58, currency. The proportion of this tax ultimately borne by the people of the State of New York, fairly estimated as one-eighth of the whole, would be $37,312,064. In the same year (1875) the State tax was $14,206,680; and the municipal and other local taxes in the State aggregated $42,716,690. The total burden of taxes—Federal, State, and local—borne by the people of the State of New York in 1875 was therefore not less than $94,238,434, or more than $20 per head of our population.—Brooklyn Union.

Didn't Agree with Him.

A Michigan farmer brought home two jugs, one labeled "boiled oil" and the other "turpentine." They were placed in the barn, and pretty soon it was noticed that the old man had business there at regular intervals. His oldest son slyly followed him and saw him taking a deep draught from one of the jugs. The old man heard a step outside, and before going out he arranged the jugs according to his artistic taste. He was hardly gone when the son skipped in and took a drink from the jug out of which he supposed his father drank. The next moment he was sputtering, coughing, and gasping, and the old man entered and asked:

"Turpentine doesn't agree with you, does it?"

"But I saw you drinking it!" exclaimed the injured and indignant son.

"That is true," said the old man, while a beautiful smile played over his face, "but it doesn't necessarily follow that the rest of the family must relish turpentine because I do!"

"OPEN that safe," said a merchant to an expert who had been sent for. "Open it in twenty minutes and I will give you $20." The safe was open in five minutes. "All right," said the merchant, "here is $10—enough for five minutes' work." The $10 was looked at but not taken, and in the next moment the safe was closed as tight as ever. "Oh, how is that?" "The how," said the man, "is that I charge nothing for closing the safe, but $20 more for the next opening—$40 in all, and want my pay in advance." Of course he did, and whoever has anything to say on the subject can now speak.

THE LOST STEAMER PACIFIC.—Twenty years ago this month the steamer Pacific, of the Collins line, sailed from this port for Liverpool with one hundred and eighty-six passengers, and was never seen nor heard from, nor was a trace of her left to indicate the manner in which she was lost. It is believed that she struck an iceberg, filled and immediately went down.—New York Mail.

SOME rascal in San Francisco sounded seven false fire alarms in succession the other day, and liked to have sent the whole Fire Department crazy.

INDIANA ITEMS.

TERRE HAUTE ships whisky to the Indian Territory.

THE teachers of Indiana will attend the Centennial in a body and camp out.

AUNT SALLIE WILLIAMS, a colored woman aged 106 years, died at the hospital in Indianapolis on Monday evening.

ELKHART will whack a big drum at the Centennial that was made by Richard Bickel, at Dundee, Scotland, March 23, 1840.

NEARLY 10,000 more letters were received at the Indianapolis postoffice in December than during any previous month.

THE Deputy Sheriff of Jackson County has just been made the victim of a suit for damages by false imprisonment which cost him $150.

Two hours after he had been pronounced dead by the physician in attendance, a small-pox patient of Indianapolis sat up in bed and commenced talking.

WILLIAM MOXLEY, a 15-year-old boy, of Osgood, hung by his feet to a limb of a tree, twenty feet from the ground, last Sunday. He will never hang from another limb.

TERRE HAUTE is threatened with a boot-blacking match for ten dollars and the championship of Vigo County, between Joseph Jackson, white, and Edward Smith, colored.

A FEW days since William Chancellor was found dead near his residence in Bicknell. He had been unloading wood, and it is supposed fell from his wagon and broke his neck.

THE young wife of Thomas Oliver, of Somerville, Gibson County, whose nuptials were celebrated on December 16, committed suicide last week, on learning that her husband cared nothing for her.

MR. ARNOLD, a clothing-man, of Terre Haute, shot at a supposed burglar, and missing his aim, attacked the fellow with a poker, and administered a terrible beating to him. When he got through, Arnold discovered it wasn't a burglar, but a drunken neighbor.

A GIRL named Belle Riley, aged 15, daughter of John W. Riley, in Franklin township, Floyd County, was arrested recently on an indictment for arson. It is alleged that the barn of the girl's father was burned last April, and that the girl was the party who committed the arson. The father of the girl was surprised at the arrest of his daughter and does not believe her guilty. The theory is that the Grand Jury was imposed upon by some malicious person. The girl was released on $5,000 bail.

THE Fort Wayne News tell how "once upon a time an editor wanted to go to Grand Rapids. So he got a friend to do his work during his absence. Now, this editor was not altogether pleased with the tone of an editorial that had appeared in the paper a few days before. So he retracted all that had been written. Below will be found a photograph taken of the editor immediately after his return from Grand Rapids. He was looking for his friend." Then follows a spirited steel engraving of the editor armed with a blunderbuss, a bowie-knife, a mitrailleuse and a needle-gun, but we are unable to reproduce it here.

THE Laporte Chronicle says that an insane person has been occupying the woods, just east of the city, for some time. He has been sleeping upon the ground, though lately he has made himself a bed, which consists of two rails laid vertically upon the ground, and twigs and sticks laid across them. His principal food is corn, which he pops and mixes with lard that is melted in an old boot, kept expressly for that purpose. His potatoes, when he has any, are baked upon the ragged points of a stick, over a small fire, which he builds. He occasionally comes to the city for a loaf of bread. He is quite talkative, and claims that the land on which he roams belongs to him.

JUDGE BORDEN, of Fort Wayne, has rendered his decision as to the motion for a new trial of Joseph Wall, charged and convicted of the murder of Morgan Cronkeit in July last. The court-room was so crowded that standing room could hardly be had. Wall, who was very much depressed, was the center attraction, of course. Counsel for the defendant presented several reasons why sentence should be revoked, which was all overruled by the Judge, and the prisoner was sentenced as follows: "That you be taken back to the County Jail and there kept in close custody until Monday, March 13, between 10 a. m. and 3 p. m., when you will be taken to the private enclosure near the jail, and there be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may Almighty God have mercy on your soul." The case will be reviewed before the Supreme Court.

MIRIAM COLES HARRIS, the author of "Rutledge," has a regular income of $6,000 a year from the sale of her books. When she wrote "Rutledge," she took the MS. to a number of publishers, who looked it over and declined it with thanks, as lacking the elements of popularity. At last she had it published by Mr. Carleton at her own expense, and 60,000 copies were sold just as fast as the printer could turn them out. As royalties wer in those days, she only made $8,000 out of this enormous sale.

THE following are the new witnesses in the proposed new trial of the Tichborne case: Mrs. Alexander, a lover of Roger Tichborne in 1849, and who met him in Australia in 1855, when he was going under the name of Castro; Mr. Deakin, a solicitor; Mr. Locke, clerk of the insolvent court; Mr. Rockets, a pilot, who declared that the Osprey actually saved the crew of the Bella, and that the claimant was the man he saw on board the Comet when he was leaving the Osprey.

A PALMIST has made a collection of more than fifty outlines of European fingers. He finds the tendency in the female hand is towards a longer third than index finger. In all hands he found the third finger of the left hand, when longer than the index, to be proportionately longer than the same finger of the right. There appears to be no correspondence between the mind and the length of the index finger.

YUNDT'S PATENT DRAIN!

FOR DRAINING

Swamps, Ponds & Low Lands.

It sinks the water just where it stands, saving miles of tile drains; keeps the water from cutting up your highways, or flooding your neighbor's, and is as far superior to tile drains as the railroad is to the common wagon.

TESTIMONIAL.

We, the undersigned, having seen one of Yundt's Patent Drains remove a large pond of stagnant water, on Hoyt street, in this city, do cheerfully recommend it to all persons who have wet cellars, or are troubled with ponds or wet lands. It will do all that is claimed for it.

H. B. CROSS, D. V. ROSS, LYMAN CASE,
N. R. RAPER, F. MORTON.

One of the above drains was put down on the premises of J. P. Frenzel, Jr., Cashier of the Merchants' National Bank, of this city, and in less than of over 3,000 gallons of water. No better investment can be made of idle capital than in working territory with this Drain. A good, energetic Agent is wanted in every city and county, to whom a liberal commission will be paid. State, County, Township or Farm Rights for sale. Personal property or real estate taken in exchange for territory. Address

Spain, bearing date November 5, 1875 is just made public. It recites our grievances againts the Spanish Government; recounts our long suffering; calls attention to the powerlessness.

La Page, the murderer of Josie Langmade, in New Hampshire, has been sentenced to be confined in the penitentiary till the 17th of January, when he is to be hanged.

We noticed James Finch, of Corunna, on our streets last Friday. Jim is in the livery business, and has suffered this winter from the bad roads, with many of his brother livery men.

A man can fully appreciate the terrors of winter when he awakes near morning and finds the bed clothes on the floor, and himself engaged in a gigantic struggle to crawl under his shirt.

Mrs Amy Rigg advertises in a Texas paper that she is able to whip either one of the two women she saw walking on her husband's arm a few nights before. What an Amy-able women she must be, eh?

When Massachusetts elected a Democratic Governor, Gaston, why didn't Oliver Morton howl about an armed revolution?" That was quite as remarkable and revolutionary as the late election in Massachusetts.

The next Senate of the United States will receive strong accessions to the Democratic side in the persons of Lamar of Mississippi, and Beck, of Kentucky. They are the ablest and strongest men in their respective States.

The play to-morrow night will eclipse everything ever before rendered in the city. Steam Boat and Auction scenes are, to say the least, simply grand. Admission 25c.

When you hear a man or woman talking about a neighbor just think that they are afraid the neighbor will tell the truth about them. Bad people always have bad neighbors but good people always good ones.

At a recent meeting of the General Railroad Ticket Agent's Association, it was decided to recommend railroads to deduct twenty-five per cent from pirsent passenger rates to the Centennial. But railroad managers will find that nothing short of half-fare will satisfy the public.

The Superintendent of a railroad leading to Indianapolis refused a State official an annual pass on the ground that a State that taxes railroads shoud pay the fare of State officers. There is an appearance of justice at least in the refusal.

General Sherman insists that he paid a high tribute to General Thomas in his memoies. No man, he says is without his defects, but he thinks Thomas one of the grandest characters in our history.

The latest counterfeit circular announces that there are in cirulation spurious bills of the First National Bank of Indianapolis, the First National New Albany, and the First National and Richmond National of Richmond. Look out for them.

If we were one of the young ladies of this place we would cut the acquaintance of all young men who persist in waiting at the church door for their partners to emerge. This is leap year, girls, and you have a perfect right to object to such irregularities.

We don't thank the 'Valparaiso Messenger man to speak of our congressman as the "thirteen majority Baker of Goshen." The truth is bad enough but such a little whopper as that won't go down with us, nor anyone who tells the truth once in a dozen times. When you get the right figure we will advise you.

Morton made his debut in a new role the other day in the Senate, appearing as one of the chief eulogists of the late ex-President Johnson. Oliver always has an eye to the windward, and seized upon the occasion to make an attempt to justify his mean and malignant course during the trial of Andy for impeachment. They razenfaced impudence of this hypocritical buzzard, beggars description.

Go to Beckhoffer's for a good cigar.

The press in our great cities has much to say about unemployed married men. Married men need not out employment. Splitting kindlings, mending furniture, wiping dishes, trimming lamps and taking care of the baby while the wife goes to the sewing circle ought to keep a man reasomably busy.

Look here, gentlemen, why this howl about ladies' stripped stockens? It is your solemn duty, as a respectable citizen, to walk with your eyes on a level with second story windows, and it is none of your business what kind of stockings are shown on the cross-walks.—Anything is preferable to a bare-footed woman.

A Philosopher says: "I never yet heard a man or woman much abused that I was not inclined to think the better of them, and transfer any suspicion or dislike to the person who appeared to take delight in pointing out the defects of a fellow creature.

Charley Yandes, who has been the clever "devil" in the Republican office, has concluded to try his fortunes in Indianapolis and has left us.—Republican.

Well, we hope Charley will make a "fortune" at Indianapolis, but not go through with it as he did the "fortune" he made while with the "Republican." This last "fortune" was squandered for one ounce of sixty-cent tobacco.

The following letter of a St. Louis girl to her bethrothed, tells its own sad story: "Dear Jack—Our engagement is off. I hear that your father's brother married a woman whose uncle belongs to the whisky ring. Its too awful for anything I return a box of cardamon seeds I found on the sofa where you sat last night. Your forlorn, resolute Edith." Poor fellow.

The following problem is now occupying the attention of amateur mathematicians: "A one hundred dollar bill is 7 inches long and 3 inches wide. The Rothschild estate is said to be worth $1,100,000,000. How high must a room be, which is 7 feet long and 6 feet wide, to hold this amount of money in one hundred dollar bills, supposing 200 of the bills to be one inch thick.

As the ladies seem to be somewhat dilatory in availing themselves of their leap-year privileges, it is perhaps advisable to lay before them the oft-repeated law on the subject that they may see where their duty lies. The law dates from 1660, and is as follows;

"Albeit it is nowe become a part of the common lawe, in regard to social relations of life that as often a every bissextile year doth return the ladyes have the sole privilege during the time it continueth of making love unto the men which they doe either by wordes or lookes, as to them it seemetd perfer; and moreover no man will be entitled to the benefit of clergy who dothe in any wise treat her proposal with slight or contumely.

Mrs. Tilton Repulses Her Daugoters.

The New York correspondent of the Chicago "Tribune writes: "Mrs. Tilton spent a sad New Year. Her husband returned, a few days before, from his successful Western tour, and found that his daughters, Florence and Alice, had not called upon their mother. Florence, the elder, now a dignified and self-reliant young woman, was quite disincl ined to do so, but Mr. Tilton it is said, urged that her mother would miss the calls and attentions she had been accustomed to receive, and the daughters at last started off in a carriage with two bouquets for their mother. Arrived at the door, they sent up their names, boqoets, and an affectionate note with the salutations of the new year, and asked to be admitted. The servant quickly brought back the boquets and the note unopened, with the message that Mrs. Tilton did not wish to see them or receive anything at their hands.

Dramatic. — Octoroon.

Again we are to be favored with a fine dramatic performance from our local performers. It will be one or two weeks before they will be ready, as they intend to get appropriate scenery, wardrobe so and give the piece in a first-class way, Jas. Lowrie to superintend the performance.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1876.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

A FRESH contribution to the Brooklyn scandal is made by the New York Sun, which publishes what purports to be some recently-discovered testimony. The statement is that, on Dec. 14, 1870, two weeks before Frank Moulton knew and confronted Mr. Beecher with the charge, Prof. Moses Coit Tyler, now of the Michigan University, was by Oliver Johnson informed that Mr. Tilton had discovered the crime between his wife and her pastor. Prof. Tyler is said to have made known this fact, and others corroborative in character, when visiting New York on the 2d of January, 1876, and to have intended to repeat them before the Mutual Council if that body had not failed to exist.

THE New York Mercury is authority for the statement that a body of representative congregationalists is about to be organized for the purpose of investigating the Beecher scandal unhampered by any side issues. It is stated that this council will take the testimony of any one having any knowledge of the alleged scandal, including Susan B. Anthony, Henry C. Bowen, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and others, and will do all in their power to probe the matter to the bottom, whether it end in the vindication or condemnation of the Plymouth pastor.

THE magnificent residence of James Ingersoll, the whitewasher of the Tweed ring, near South Norwalk, Ct., was burned last week. The loss is $100,000; the insurance $80,000.

A BOSTON journalist named E. D. Winslow has developed into a first-class scoundrel. He obtained upward of $500,000 on forged paper, and has left for parts unknown.

A STUPENDOUS robbery has just been perpetrated upon the National Bank of Northampton, Mass. The residence of the cashier was entered by masked burglars at midnight, who took from him the keys of the vault. They then repaired to the bank and helped themselves to $870,000. Of course, much of this is not negotiable, so that it is difficult to estimate the real loss to the bank and depositors. The bank officers offer a reward of $25,000 for the return of the property and the conviction of the burglars. The loss falls comparatively light upon the bank, the greater part of the securities belonging to special depositors.... Jonathan Earle (N. J.), Treasurer of the Norfolk and New Brunswick Hosiery Company, is a defaulter to the amount of $142,000. He has turned over all his property. Wall Street speculations led to his downfall.... It has been ascertained that E. D. Winslow, the Boston publisher who recently robbed his friends of large sums by means of forged checks, sailed from New York for Rotterdam, Holland, with which country we have no extradition treaty.

THE WEST.

THE Minnesota Legislature has voted $10,000 for the Centennial.... The trial of William McKee, the journalistic member of the St. Louis whisky ring, began in that city last week. It excites more interest there than any of the previous trials.

INDIANA has 667,763 children of school age, of whom, according to the census just published, only 4,922 are illiterates. The State has a snug little school fund, stated at $8,799,191, and her school property is valued at $10,870,338.

THE National Poultry Association has just closed a most successful exhibition at the Exposition building in Chicago. The display of fancy poultry and fancy dogs is said to have been the finest ever witnessed in the country. ....A non-sectarian school bill is pending in the Iowa Legislature.... A letter received at Helena, Mont., from Fort Pease, on the Yellowstone River, says Sitting Bull's band of Sioux had attacked a party near Fort Pease, killing one man and wounding five others. Eight horses were also killed. Another party of nine men were cut off from the fort by Indians who numbered several hundred. It was feared that the entire garrison would be massacred unless speedily assisted.... There is a fresh outbreak of the Black Hills gold fever at Bismarck and other frontier towns.

THE pretty and vivacious little Minnie Palmer is playing an engagement at McVicker's Theater, Chicago. Minnie is probably the youngest star actress on the American stage—being just sweet sixteen. She belongs to a family of distinguished social position, has been highly educated, and possesses dramatic talent of no mean order.... J. Esaias Warren, one of the largest real estate operators in Chicago, has gone into bankruptcy. ....The Federal Grand Jury of Chicago has returned several more indictments against the whisky conspirators. Among the indicted are Anthony C. Hesing, of the Staats Zeitung, and Jacob Rhem, late Chief of Police.

A DISPATCH from Lincoln, Neb., reports that large parties of men are passing through there every day bound for the Black Hills.

THE SOUTH.

A FIRE at Nashville, Tenn., last week, destroyed five stores, involving a loss of $75,000. ....Whittle and Bliss, the evangelists, have commenced a revival in St. Louis.

AN audacious robbery was recently perpetrated on a bank at Comanche, Texas. Three men rode up to the bank, hitched their horses, and entering the building applied to the cashier to get some money changed. The latter turned to the safe to get the money, and in an instant the three robbers were over the counter, and had their revolvers leveled on the cashier and bookkeeper, no one else being present. They then went through the safe in a quick style, securing $5,500, after which they mounted their horses and made their escape before the alarm could be sounded.

COL. W. OFFITT, Democratic ex-State Senator from St. Landry Parish, La., was recently assassinated by unknown parties, near Washington, La.... Doc Mangum, a noted guerrilla on the Union side during the war, was recently assassinated while at work in his field near Savannah, Tenn., his body being riddled with balls. The assassins then placed the corpse on a horse, carried it away and threw it into the Tennessee River.

WASHINGTON.

THE committee appointed by the St. Louis Railroad Convention to wait upon the President and present him with copies of the resolutions and proceedings of that body fulfilled their mission the other day, and President Grant is represented as saying that he would like to see a competing line to the Pacific constructed, but he did not say he would like to see such a competing line constructed by a Government guarantee of bonds.... The House Military Committee will recommend the transfer of the Indian Bureau from the Interior to the War Department.... It is said that the Ways and Means Committee are preparing a great surprise for the country, and that there will shortly be sprung upon the House a Tariff bill radical in its changes. The free list is to be increased, the tax on tea and coffee restored, the customs revenue to be collected from articles on which a specific duty can be imposed, and the complicated workings of the tariff system abolished. With these changes it is said the revenue force of officials can be largely reduced, the opportunities for smuggling and evading duties very much diminished, and the cost of collecting the revenue cut down in every direction. The Western Democrats favor the revival of the income tax to offset the tax on tea and coffee, but it is not believed such a recommendation will be adopted.

THE note of Secretary Fish to Minister Cushing has been published. It embodies the views of our Government on Spanish misrule in Cuba island for the past seven years, and recites the numerous causes our people have for complaint as relates to the manner of carrying on the war there, notably the barbarity practiced by Spain and her evident inability to bring it to a close. The fact of slavery existing at our very doors forms an important feature of the grievance, and the leading foreign powers are called upon for their friendly offices in suggesting reform. The attention of Spain is called to these facts: Estates of Americans, seized without form of law, must be released; Americans must have their full rights in Spanish courts, and Burriel must be tried and punished, according to Spain's promise.... The House Library Committee are preparing a bill giving to newspaper publishers and editors the same right to send manuscript for publication through the mails that authors now have.... A large number of members of Congress express themselves as opposed to a disturbance of the tariff to any important extent.

THE bill introduced in the House by Gen. Hurlbut, of Illinois, to provide for cheap transportation, proposes to adopt some of the leading features of the Belgian railway system. The bill contemplates the building of a double-track freight railroad from New York to Chicago, Council Bluffs, and St. Louis. It is proposed to have the Government guarantee the interest on the bonds at $42,000 per mile, for which a mortgage is to be given, the United States to have the only mortgage. There are to be no stockholders. Five Commissioners are to be appointed by the Government, who are to have control of the stock and bonds. The plan is to pay all stock certificates within the life of the bonds, and to leave the railroad at the end of thirty years absolutely free in the hands of the Government.... The House Appropriation Committee have commenced work on the Legislative Appropriation bill on the following basis: To reduce all salaries over $1,200 10 per cent.; to reduce the force in all departments 20 per cent.; to increase the hours of labor from six to eight. The increase in the hours of labor equalizes the reduction of 20 per cent. in the force.

TWO HUNDRED and six new bills were introduced in the House last Monday.... The House Judiciary Committee have prepared a bill allowing persons to testify in their own behalf in criminal cases.... The House Committee on Appropriations will recommend that the salaries of members of Congress be reduced from $5,000 to $4,500.... The bill appropriating $1,500,000 for the Centennial celebration, is very unsatisfactory to the friends of the measure. An important amendment adopted on motion of Mr. Springer, of Illinois, deprives the appropriation of the character of a gift, giving it the character of a loan, and makes the United States a preferred creditor, in case the enterprise is profitable. The entire million and a half is to be returned to the United States before any dividends are paid to the stockholders. The second amendment takes the management of the fund out of the hands of the Philadelphia people, and places it under the control of Gen. Hawley, President of the Commission, and his Government associates, who are required to give bonds in 500,000. Some of the Philadelphia people claim that the bill is of little value to them in this shape, as it will compel them to mortgage the buildings.

IT is said the House Postoffice Committee will recommend, as a measure of economy, the abolition of the fast mail trains.

THE House Appropriations Committee have voted to reduce the President's salary to $25,000 a year after March 4, 1877.... The Grand Jury for the District of Columbia have returned indictments against ex-Senator and ex-Assistant Treasurer Frederick A. Sawyer, William T. Haines, Frank W. Brooks, Phineas D. Roddy and William H. Barstow for conspiracy to defraud the Government of the United States of the following sums of money: $24,315 and $33,207, F. W. Brooks and Phineas D. Roddy presenting a false claim, Frederick A. Sawyer aiding as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in passing a Government claim and receiving therefor $1,000; William H. Barstow, a Government officer, receiving $1,000 and a watch and chain. William T. Haines, also a Government officer, received $1,000.

GENERAL.

THE town of Barbourville, W. Va., was the other night the scene of a deed of horror. Edward Williams and Mrs. Meling, who had been arrested on the charge of having murdered the latter's husband, were taken from their cells into the court-yard, where Williams was hanged after a full confession of the murder had been wrung from his unwilling lips. The woman also made a confession of her share in the crime, admitting that she incited her paramour to the deed. She begged piteously for her life, and though the crowd of lynchers voted unanimously for her execution, her sex saved her, not a man among them having the hardihood to place a rope around a woman's neck, and she was returned to her cell.

IT is stated from Washington that the House committee to whom was referred the investigation of recent outrages on the Texas frontier are considering the question of recommending to the President the propriety of issuing a proclamation declaring martial law in a strip of country bordering on the Rio Grande.

"CAME to their deaths by a mob—names unknown," is the laconic verdict of the Coroner's jury in the case of three murderers—Dawson, Estep and Hines—who were missed the other morning from the Charleston (W. Va.) Jail, and subsequently found dangling from the limb of a tree.... An agent of the Borden City (Mass.) Mills has just returned from a business trip to England. He reports finding a better market there than in this country, and 25,000 pieces per week will, therefore, be exported by his mills. Thirty thousand pieces have already been shipped.

FORTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

FRIDAY, Jan. 21.—Senate.—The Senate devoted the session to commemorating the life and services of the late Vice-President Wilson. Eulogies were delivered by Boutwell, Dawes, Hamlin, Cragin, Cameron, Morton, Anthony, Ingalls, Bogy and others.... Adjourned to Monday, Jan. 24.

House.—The House passed, after an animated debate, the bill for the retirement on full pay of United States Judge McCandless, of Pittsburgh, Pa., in consequence of physical disabilities.... The House took action on the usual resolutions in honor of the memory of the late Vice-President Wilson. Eulogies were pronounced on the virtues of the deceased by Warren, Harris (Mass.), Kelley, Knott, Clymer, Kasson, Banks, Lynch, Hurlbut, Lawrence, Lapham, Reagan, Joyce and Blair, after which the House adjourned.

SATURDAY, Jan. 22.—Senate.—Not in session.

House.—Nothing of interest transpired in the House, only a brief session being held, and that was mainly devoted to the discussion of the Centennial bill.

MONDAY, Jan. 24.—Senate.—Goldthwaite presented the report of the Committee on the Alabama Legislature, and the testimony taken by the committee in regard to the election of George E. Spencer as United States Senator. Referred.... Davis' resolution to investigate the books of the Treasury Department was virtually killed by being referred to the Finance Committee.... Morton introduced a bill to establish a mint at Indianapolis.... A bill was reported from the Committee on Railroads to extend the time for completing the Northern Pacific Road.... The Chair laid before the Senate unfinished business, being the resolution of Morton in regard to the recent election in Mississippi.... The Senate had a long debate on the bill to provide for a commission to investigate the alcoholic liquor traffic.

House.—A large number of bills were introduced under a call of the States, including the following: By Hurlbut, to provide for the cheap transportation of freight between the Atlantic and the Ohio and Mississippi valleys; by Whiting, for the improvement of the Illinois River; by Lapham, fixing the first Monday in January as the time for the meeting of Congress; also, a constitutional amendment proposing to change the commencement of the Presidential term from March 4 to May 1; by Hulton, to abolish the tax on spirits distilled from fruit; by Waddell, to classify and equalize the rates of postage on manuscripts intended for publication; by Wike, for repairs of levee along the Mississippi River in Illinois; by Morrison, preparatory to the redemption of United States notes and the resumption of specie payments; by A. S. Williams (Mich.), a constitutional amendment prohibiting Senators and Representatives from soliciting appointments to or removals from office, and providing for a Civil Service Commission; by Wilson (Iowa), a constitutional amendment providing that the term of a Representative shall commence on the 1st of January instead of the 4th of March; by Cox, to abolish the Board of Education; by Scales, to reduce tax on tobacco and whisky; by Hereford, to restore to the pension rolls of pensioners of the war of 1812 the names of persons struck off for disloyalty.... A resolution was adopted looking to a fresh inquiry into the Pacific Mail corruption.... Several other investigating resolutions were adopted.

TUESDAY, Jan. 25.—Senate.—Sargent presented a petition, signed by a large number of ladies, asking that the right of suffrage be conferred upon the women of the District of Columbia.... Sherman's bill to appoint a commission to inquire into the liquor traffic was passed. The bill limits the operations of the Commission to the Territories and District of Columbia. This was the effect of the Christiancy amendment.... Morrill introduced a bill to establish an educational fund, and apply a portion of the proceeds of the sale of public lands to public education.... Cameron presented a petition of citizens of Wisconsin asking an amendment to the Constitution of the United States for the abolition of the Senate and transfer of the powers of that body to the House of Representatives.

House.—Upon a call of the Speaker for committee reports, several of the committees were heard from upon matters of minor importance.... The bill transferring the custody of certain Indian trust bonds from the Secretary of the Interior to the Treasurer of the United States was passed.... The bill appropriating $1,500,000 for the centennial celebration was passed by the close vote of 146 yeas to 130 nays.... Knott, from the Judiciary Committee, reported a bill to reorganize the judiciary of the United States. Recommitted.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 26.—Senate.—The Senate proceedings were barren of interest.... The Centennial bill, as passed by the House, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.... Most of the day was spent in discussing Ingalls' bill to protect the pre-emption rights of homestead settlers against land-grant railroad adventurers.

House.—The bill repealing the act passed at the last session, increasing the rate of postage on third-class mail matter, was passed without division. The present bill reinstates the postage as it was before—one cent for two ounces.... The House indulged in an animated debate on the bill, reported from the Appropriation Committee, proposing a large reduction in the appropriation for the West Point Military Academy.

THURSDAY, Jan. 27.—Senate.—Boutwell presented a report prepared by the Chief Clerk of the Treasury Department, and submitted to the Secretary in December, 1872, in regard to irregular practices in accounting in the Treasury, which have grown up in usage, or have been authorized by law. Ordered printed.... The bill protecting the rights of settlers upon lands within the limits of railway grants was passed.

House.—A question of privilege was raised by Dunnell, in reference to some remarks by White, of Kentucky, some days ago, which were regarded as offensive to Adams, the Clerk of the House, and which White had, at the time, agreed to expunge from the report of his speech in the Congressional Record. After a long discussion, participated in by Hale, Blackburn, and Dunnell, Hoar (Mass.) objected to the further alteration of the Record, and there the matter ended.... The bill introduced by Cannon (Ill.) providing penalties for sending obscene matter through the mails provoked a spirited discussion. It was considered too sweeping in its scope and provisions, and was recommitted.... Another day was spent in debating the West Point Appropriation bill.

WASHINGTON.

Pensions—The Centennial Bill—The Texas Pacific Railway Project—Our Relations with Spain: War Improbable.

[From Our Own Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22, 1876.

As compared with last week, the present has been one of quiet and peace and serenity at the metropolis. Everything has been lovely. There was, indeed, a slight drawing of "bad blood" in the early part of the week, when the Amnesty bill was again up, but the skirmish did not last long, and did very little good or harm to either side. Meantime the House has got down to serious work, and the Senate is ever ready to move on in its slow and dignified gait.

PENSIONS.

The only important bill of a general nature yet passed by the House is the Pension Appropriation bill. This appropriates about twenty-nine millions, being only slightly changed from the estimates made by the Government, and reduces the amount required for last year by no very considerable sum. There was no substantial unanimity in the passage of the bill. The Senate will make few changes.

There has lately been a great deal of discussion here upon the general subject of our pension list. It is said that many abuses exist; that large numbers of men who are as stout and hearty as Hercules regularly draw pensions for wounds or disabilities received in the service; that many are borne on the lists who never smelt gunpowder or saw a squadron in the field, some of these fraudulently representing persons who have been dead and buried these many years. Not a few of just such cases as these have been unearthed. On the other hand, there are large numbers of persons who are in justice entitled to pensions who do not receive any, either through their own neglect, or the delays, technicalities and circumlocutionary antics of officials of the kind caricatured by Dickens in the Tite Barnacle family. Abuses of this kind are doubtless incident to a pension list so great as ours, but they are now receiving unusual consideration on the part of eminent men of all parties, so that we may confidently expect that some of the evils complained of will be cured during this very Centennial year.

THE CENTENNIAL BILL.

The debate in the House on the bill appropriating $1,500,000 to complete the construction of the Centennial buildings at Philadelphia has been more protracted and acrimonious than was expected. The report of the committee for the appropriation was unanimous, and it was then supposed by almost every one that the bill would go through swimmingly on the tidal wave of good feeling. The debate on the bill, which at this writing is still progressing, shows that the measure is by no means as popular as the proposed exposition. Constitutional objections have been made to the bill, and it has received unfavorable criticism as a mere scheme to bear Centennial stock also, so that it cannot go through with a hurrah, even if it shall succeed at all, which is now regarded as not a little doubtful.

It is noteworthy that party politics has had nothing to do with this bill or the debate upon it. Mr. Reagan, of Texas, ex-Confederate Postmaster-General, and Gen. Waddell, of North Carolina, have advocated the bill no less earnestly than Judge Kelley himself, or Mr. Frye, of Maine. Perhaps the ablest speech against the bill was one by Mr. Tucker, of Virginia, while one of the best, if not the very best, in its behalf was by Mr. Harrison, of Chicago. Both of these gentlemen are Democrats. Whatever may be the fate of the bill, the Centennial will go on. That great national show will not be postponed on any account. The original programme will be carried out about as announced. Whatever of good there is in it will be got out of it, with the aid of Congress if possible, without if so Congress shall will. No earthly power can prevent the American people from having what the boys used to call "a high old time" at Philadelphia in this year of jubilee.

THE TEXAS PACIFIC RAILROAD.

In the absence of any important legislative results in Congress further than above stated, let me refer to a matter which is now receiving much consideration here—the proposed bill to aid in the completion of the Texas Pacific Railway by a Government guaranty of its bonds to the amount of $40,000 a mile. Col. Thomas A. Scott, President of the Company, also of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and well-known as one of our big "railroad kings," is in the city, doing all he can for this project. He made an argument before the Committee on Pacific Railroads last evening, and it is understood that a majority of the committee is in favor of his scheme. I learn from excellent authority, however, that in view of the pending Presidential election it is not at all likely that Congress will act upon the measure at this session, but that it will receive early and perhaps favorable action at the next session. Knowing that the people of the Northwest have very decided convictions upon the subject of grants to railway corporations, I thus state this prognostication of one of the most knowing men at Washington, that the aforesaid Northwestern people may have ample time and opportunity to inform Congress of their views on a question of such vast practical importance.

OUR RELATIONS WITH SPAIN.

There is a great deal of newspaper comment and talk in political circles about our relations with Spain, growing out of the unfortunate situation of affairs in Cuba. It has even been hotly asserted that we are on the verge of a war with our ally of revolutionary times. I have inquired as to the actual situation from a few men of all others most likely to know the exact truth, and am happy to state that the probability of a war between the United States and Spain is exceedingly remote. I am also happy to state that men of all parties in Congress agree that we have no cause of quarrel with Spain. There are those who believe that our Government ought to recognize belligerent rights of the insurrectionists in Cuba, while others do not think the time has yet come for such recognition. So, unless there be some political event not now anticipated, we shall take our centennial enjoyments undisturbed by apparitions or realities of the rugged front of grim-visaged war. L. M. N.

FOILED.

Frustration of an Attempt to Outdo All Previous Train Robberies.

[From the Toledo Blade.]

A singularly daring and well-planned scheme to rob the express train on the Lake Shore Railroad was frustrated this morning by the action of detectives and officials who had become aware of the plot through the confession of one of the parties to the plot. The conspirators were L. C. Hartwell, an ex-conductor on the road, two brothers named Dwight, and a Texas desperado named Sophus, all former brakemen on the road, and well acquainted with every detail of the running of the trains. They went some days ago to the little station of Archibald, and prepared for their work. Supt. Cone, of the United States Express Company, was advised of their movements, and kept a watch upon them. Last night, accompanied by Capt. Purdy and Sergt. Nohl, of the city police, Detective Cavanaugh, of the Lake Shore Road, and another person, all in disguise, he went out on the westward bound train until he met the eastward bound Chicago express, which was boarded, two of his party taking a position in the express car and three going into the baggage car adjoining, to emerge upon a signal to be given by pulling the bell-rope. The night was intensely dark, and the rain was falling heavily. The express messenger in the car was instructed to lie down and feign sleep. Shortly after leaving Wauseon for the long run into the city those waiting inside saw the end of the car penetrated by an auger. The robbers outside carefully inspected the inside of the car through this hole, and were satisfied that everything looked favorable. They then bored out a piece of the door, and Hartwell reached in his hand to unbolt the door. In an instant his hand was seized by those inside, and his arm drawn through to the shoulder. The signal was given by pulling the rope to those in the baggage-car, who opened the door and sprang out upon the astonished scoundrels from the rear. A desperate fight ensued with billies and knives. The thieves tried to throw themselves from the train and drag the officers with them, and nearly succeeded, but at last were all dragged inside the baggage-car and secured. The train was not checked in its speed, but continued running at the rate of 40 miles an hour during the whole encounter, which greatly complicated the conditions of the fight. In a little while the train reached the city, and the desperadoes were placed in the prison. They were heavily armed, and masked with Ku-Klux masks. They were all severely, but not dangerously, beaten about the heads with the slung-shots of the officers. The latter escaped with but little injury. The whole affair was admirably planned on both sides. If the robbers had been successful they would have secured about $275,000 in currency and $125,000 in coin.

A Colorado Zephyr.

The heavy wind registered on Pike's Peak the other day seems to have struck earth about Cucharas, and judging from the reports received from that quarter it must have been a pretty severe zephyr. Considerable damage was done along its track, and all work and business was perforce suspended during the prevalence of the gale. A Cucharas correspondent of the Chieftain relates the following among other effects of the storm: "While the proprietor of Cucharas Sample Room was at breakfast this morning, the back door of his establishment was burst open by the wind, and his bar and bar fixtures were carried through the front window and scattered over the broad pampas in wild and dire confusion. There was about $10 in currency in the drawer, and all was lost. Mr. Mitchell, one of the leading merchants here, has been engaged all the morning removing his goods from the shelves and putting them in a place of safety. His house sways and vibrates so much that he fears it may go down at any moment." He also relates a touching story of a mule being blown out of its harness at a grading-camp, and carried away bodily. The same paper also earns from a gentleman just arrived from Walsenburg that the most tremendous storm of wind ever known in that section commenced about daylight on Wednesday morning. The air was full of flying dust, the roar of the hurricane was deafening, and it was almost impossible to stand on one's feet on account of the power of the storm. The houses of Sheriff Thomas Sprout and Jose Rival, as well as Mr. Ben Arnold's stables, were unroofed, and the timely use of ropes alone saved the roof of the Masonic Hall from being carried out on the prairie. Doors and windows were blown in in all parts of town, out-buildings overturned and unroofed, and the whole place looks as though it had experienced a heavy bombardment. Fortunately during all the uproar no one was injured, though the air is said at times to have been full of flying boards, shingles, etc.—Denver News.

MR. GEORGE BLODGETT recently cut a pine tree on his farm near Mt. Fay, N. H., which, from the number of rings, is supposed to have been at least 300 years old. Its height, when cut, was 125 feet, and the top had been broken off probably 25 feet. The circumference at the top of the stump is 16 feet.

BABCOCK will not be convicted if eminent counsel can prevent. He has retained Emory Storrs, of Chicago, and Judge J. K. Porter, of New York, to defend him.

A Hundred Years Ago.

This year, 1876, is full of memories for every day in the year. The mind is irresistibly carried back to the men and times of a hundred years ago. Washington was then in his prime, a few weeks less than forty-four years old, and in the full bloom of his magnificent manhood. Franklin had just completed his three-score and ten years, but was still hale and hearty, and ripe in wisdom and experience. John Adams was in his forty-first year, and Thomas Jefferson in his thirty-third. Washington was with the army at Cambridge, and Franklin, Adams and Jefferson were at Philadelphia, working the Continental Congress up to the point of making the Declaration of Independence.

And a hundred years ago this day, way down in the Waxhaw settlement in North Carolina, there was a poor, fatherless little boy, in his ninth year, named Andrew Jackson. And in Braintree, Mass., there was another little boy, also in his ninth year, named John Quincy Adams. These little boys both became deeply embittered against England; and each of them, when grown to manhood, dealt her terrible blows, one with his sword, and the other with his pen. And those two little boys, each going his separate way—one through poverty, and fierce frontier contests, and the wildest scenes of war, and the other through the universities of America and Europe, and foreign courts, and high official honors—came into collision forty-eight years afterward as opposing candidates in one of the most envenomed Presidential contests this country has ever known.

It is well for us to let our hearts go out in affectionate remembrance of the sages and heroes of a hundred years ago, the fruits of whose wisdom and courage we now enjoy.

How Two Dogs Dined on a Steak.

The Green Bay (Wis.) State Gazette relates the following fable: "A large dog belonging to one of our citizens, and who usually accompanies his master to market in the capacity of porter, was intrusted with a fine steak, securely wrapped in paper, to carry home. The animal grasped the parcel between his teeth and trotted homeward beside his master. A short distance from the butcher's the gentleman entered another store, leaving the dog with the parcel standing on the sidewalk. Shortly two vagabond-looking curs arrived on the spot and began sniffing about. Finally, the larger of the two curs began growling and barking at the guardian of the steak, who stood this sort of thing for some time in a calm and dignified manner, till, finally, his bullying tormentors probably having applied some opprobrious epithet to him, he opened his mouth to reply, and of course dropped the steak on the ground. The vagabond cur retreated, and the other dog, now fully exasperated, set off in pursuit of him. In an instant vagabond cur No. 2, who had been standing off a short distance, apparently a silent spectator of the scene, sprang forward and seized the steak in his mouth, and put off in an opposite direction. Not long after, and in an alley not far from the scene of this little episode, were two curs holding a high festival over a rich, juicy steak, and these two curs were the identical ones engaged in the transaction previously related. Who can say that this was not a put up job between these two outcasts of canine society?"

WHAT IS AN INCH OF RAIN?—An English acre consists of 6,272,640 square inches, and an inch deep of rain on an acre yields 6,272,640 cubic inches of water, which at 277,274 cubic inches to the gallon makes 226,225 gallons; and as a gallon of distilled water weighs 10 lbs., the rainfall on an acre is 226,225 lbs. avoirdupois; counting 2,240 lbs. as a ton, an inch deep of rain weighs nearly 101 tons per acre. For every hundredth of an inch a ton of water falls per inch.

T. C. MAYS, PUBLISHER.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

The [illegible] at Home.

Oh, blest is he, from business free,
  Like the merry men of old,
Who tills his land with [illegible],
  And knows not the [illegible] of gold.

No sailor he on the stormy sea,
  No soldier trumpet-stirred;
And he shuns the town and the haughty frown
  Of the courtier's fawning herd.

But he bids the vine with her tendrils twine
  Around the poplar tall;
And he adds a graft with a gardener's craft,
  To the tree that climbs his wall.

Or a grazier keen, o'er the pastures green
  He sees his oxen feed;
Or he shears his flock, or he brews a stock
  Of his rustic nectar mead.

And when autumn at length, in his manly strength,
  Has raised his fruit-crowned head,
He plucks the pear with its flavor rare,
  And the grape with its cluster red.

With his knee on the sod, he thanks his God
  For His mercies and favors free,
And he lays him along while he lists to the song
  Of the thrush in the old oak tree;

While the waters glide with their rippling tide,
  And the zephyrs softly creep
O'er the [illegible] the murmuring trees,
  And lull the sense to sleep.

But when thundering Jove, from his stores above
  Sends [illegible] snows and rain,
And rock and wood and field and flood
  Lie bound in his icy chain,

With many a hound in the woods around,
  He hunts the grisly bear;
And ere daylight fade his gleaming blade
  Is red with the monster's gore.

When the sun has set, he spreads his net,
  And the partridge, fluttering, dies;
He takes his hare in his crafty snare,
  And the crane, a goodly prize.

'Mid joys like these what ills can tease?
  Who could remember pain?
He feels no wrong, and he laughs at the throng
  Of cares that swell love's train.

If a loving wife—best staff of life—
  Be his, and children dear,
The fire burns bright with its ruddy light
  His homeward step to cheer.

At the cottage door, when his toil is o'er,
  She stands with her smile so sweet,
And holds up her face, with a modest grace,
  His welcome kiss to meet.

And his children glad, swarm round their dad—
  But the hungry man must dine;
So she spreads the cloth, and he sops his broth
  While she pours out the home-made wine.

Around the Farm.

GRASSHOPPERS don't molest sheep, and hence a good many Kansas people are going into the wool business this year.

PUMPKINS, for domestic purposes, can be kept in a good cellar where they will not freeze, by being put on a scaffolding, for from six to nine months.

THERE is no simpler remedy for preventing cider growing sour than mustard seed. After the cider has fermented and reached the desired palatable condition, put one pint of mustard seed to a barrel of cider, and bung tight.

IT has been commonly stated that germination would not take place in seeds below the freezing point of water. M. Uleth, however, states seeds of Triticum and, indeed, other seeds also, were found to germinate when placed in grooves formed in blocks of ice.

GROWTH OF ROOTS.—A singular instance of root growth is reported from France. An elm tree, standing over Fontainebleau sandstone, forced its rootlets down so that they perforated the rock, leaving in it a perfect impression of their form. It is supposed that the cement which holds the grains of the rock together was dissolved by carbonic acid given off by the roots of the tree.

DRYING OFF COWS.—This is the time of year when many farmers dry off part of their cows for the season. This drying off is a matter of some importance, and needs careful management. After the regular milking of the cow has ceased, the udder should be frequently examined at intervals of a few days, and any milk which has collected should be removed. If left unattended to, serious injury may be inflicted upon the cow's udder, such as the loss of one or more teats, a shrinkage of part of the udder, etc., thus impairing the future usefulness of the cow.

WHEN TO SELL.—A correspondent of the New York Times thus alludes to the proper time to sell farm produce: "If you have anything to sell, and are offered a fair price, sell it. It is better to sell than to run the risk of lower prices. This is especially true of perishable articles. An enterprising but cautious farmer was offered, during the late war, ninety cents per pound for wool, but he held it for a dollar. He held it three or four years and finally took forty-five cents. He learned a lesson and enjoys telling his experience. It is not safe to wait till the market is at its highest point."

WE would recommend to those who are going to try sheep, to commence with a small flock and learn the business. Purchase no old sheep, let the price be ever so low; be sure there is no disease among them; build a dog-proof yard, with an open shed on the north side, with a roof that will shed rain; yard them every night. See that your pasture fences will prevent them from trespassing on your neighbors; provide a variety of food for winter; feed liberally without waste, and see that they have water when they want it. Tame grass makes the best pasture; rye makes good fall and winter pasture. After shearing, dip your lambs and sheep in tobacco liquid to rid them of all vermin, and, as a preventive against such.

PAYING CROPS.—A large net profit per acre is undoubtedly the basis of all good farming. It is one of the conditions of success, and the profit of the business materially depends upon it. For every tiller of the soil, therefore, a large yield per acre, of crops which pay, is the first thing to consider, because without this no large results are possible; small crops are always easy to get, but they are seldom worth the time and outlay they require, and frequently entail great loss. Of course, it is also true that even a prolific yield may sometimes bring a loss, but such cases are always due to either negligence, extravagance or needless folly. They do not alter the general rule, but are simply the exceptions. The great fact still remains that the chances of profit in every crop are clearly in favor of large products per acre.

"AS FOR horses' nooning," says a clever writer, "I would rather my team should go through the day without a dinner than to be allowed only sufficient time to swallow it, if they are to be put to heavy work. In fact, I have an idea from experience with a horse team when driving upon the road all the time, that they had better have an hour's rest without dinners than to have an hour to eat in, and then be put directly at work. I have seen many teams upon the road every day that were never fed at noon, and they kept in as good condition and were able to travel as many miles in the afternoon and carry as heavy loads as those which were fed at noon and then put immediately at work again. The noon feed must be carried undigested until night, and can be carried easier in the wagon than in the horse's stomach. The same reasoning may not hold good with oxen, inasmuch as their work is not, or should not be, so rapid or hard as to prevent them from chewing their cuds as they work."

About the House.

A WASH composed of a teaspoonful of powdered borax to a pint of water, is most excellent to keep on the dressing table for dandruff and all sorts of eruptions of the skin.

SAVE the soot that falls from the chimneys, when the latter are cleaned. Twelve quarts of soot to a hogshead of water makes a good liquid manure to be applied to the roots of plants.

To take mildew from linen, mix soft soap with starch powdered, half the quantity of salt, and a piece of lemon, and lay it on both sides with a paint brush; let it be in the open air—on grass is preferable—till the stain is removed.

TO CURE HOARSENESS.—When the voice is lost, as is sometimes the case, from the effects of cold, a simple, pleasant remedy is furnished by beating up the white of one egg, adding to it the juice of one lemon, and sweetening with white sugar to taste. Take a teaspoonful from time to time. It has been known to effectually cure the ailment.

ORANGE FLAVORING.—Cut orange peel in long, thin strips, and stew it in water till all bitterness is extracted. Then chop it fine, and stew it half an hour in a thick syrup, allowing one pound of sugar to one of peel. Keep in a cool place. As this is the season for oranges, every family may provide themselves at small expense with this delicious flavoring.

A VERY pretty pen wiper can be made in the form of a closed parasol. Sharpen a thin wooden lead pencil that has an ivory tip. Cut a circle of silk, and another, somewhat smaller, of thin black cloth. Point or scallop the edges all around, pierce a hole in the center of each circle and run the point of the pencil through, leaving the silk circle on top. By a little ingenuity you can now crease, fold and secure these circles close to the handle, so that the whole will look precisely like a closed parasol; by experimenting first with a piece of paper you can best get the size of the circle required to suit your pencil.

LEMONS FOR FEVER.—When persons are thirsty and feverish beyond what is natural, one of the best "coolers," internal or external, is to take a lemon, cut off the top, sprinkle over it some loaf sugar, working it downward into the lemon, and then suck it slowly, squeezing the lemon and adding more sugar as the acidity increases. Invalids with feverishness may take two or three lemons a day in this manner with the most marked benefit, manifested by a sense of coolness, comfort and invigoration. A lemon or two thus taken at teatime, as an entire substitute for the ordinary supper, would give many a man a comfortable night's sleep and an awaking of rest and invigoration, with an appetite for breakfast to which they would otherwise be strangers.

CAMPHOR AND ANTS.—I wonder if anybody ever did drive away ants by using camphor? From the number of times that this recipe has gone the rounds of the press, one might suppose that it had been thoroughly and satisfactorily settled that camphor would drive away these pests, but the fact of the case is—it won't. Mrs. Ruralist has camphored and dosed one particular cupboard infested with the small red ants in the most thorough manner, without disturbing the serenity of these vermin in the least. I should not have thought of disputing the camphor preventive had it not appeared in the columns of the Rural. This was coming too near home, and I had to speak right out in meeting and say, "It won't do it."—Rural New Yorker.

HELPS IN HOUSE-CLEANING.—Provide ammonia for cleansing paint and carpets, the water when done with to be poured on house-plants or vines; cold tea for graining; a window-scrub, which is a little stiff brush with a long handle; a step-ladder; a carpet-stretcher; a self-wringing mop, which consists of a long handle with a stationary ring at the end, and another ring which moves freely up and down the handle, strips of cloth being sewed to these rings, and the movable ring being pulled up when in use as far as the cloth will permit and turned around the handle till the cloths are wrung dry; pumice stone to remove marks from hard-finished walls; plenty of soft, clean old muslin and linen for cloths; a chamois-skin to polish mirrors and plate glass; long-enduring, exhaustless patience, and an uninterrupted flow of good humor. With these the labor and discomfort of house-cleaning will be reduced to its minimum.

The Young Lochinvar.

Something of a sensation was roused here by an unexpected denouement at a wedding-party last evening. A wealthy German citizen gave an elegant banquet in honor of his daughter, who was to be married to-day to a young German. While the festivities were at their height, the young lady excused herself for a moment from her affianced and passed out of the front door, where a carriage was in waiting containing another admirer, a young Irishman, and the two were driven to an Alderman's office, where the marriage ceremony was hastily performed. The happy couple left on the midnight train for the wedding trip.—Wilkesbarre (Pa.) Cor. Chicago Tribune.

WHY CHILDREN ARE LIKE FLOWERS.—"Children," said a country minister, addressing a Sunday school, "why are we like flowers? What do we have that flowers have?" And a small boy in the infant class, whose breath smelled of vermifuge, rose up and made reply, "Worms," and the minister crept under the pulpit chair to hide his emotion.

ABOUT WOUNDS.

Maiming Wounds Inflicted by Bullets, Shells, Cannon-Balls, Etc.—Some Remarkable Cases.

A soldier accidentally wounded in the great toe by the discharge of his musket, before Port Hudson, in June, 1863, died while chloroform was being administered to him preparatory to amputation. It may be questionable in this case whether the fatal result is properly attributable to the nervous attack, the fright, or the effects of the chloroform. It is well known that in rare cases the administration of this anæsthetic is necessarily fatal.

Spent balls have sometimes produced death. At the battle of Winchester, in September, 1864, the present writer was knocked down by a musket-ball, which did not even indent the skin. In some cases of this kind the shock to the nervous system has been sufficient to kill, without drawing a drop of blood.

At the assault of Port Hudson, June 14, 1863, one of our soldiers in reserve saw a cannon-ball, apparently spent, rolling over the ground near him. He carelessly reached out his foot and tried to stop it. The result was a mangled foot, which had to be amputated.

In marked contrast with the above were the following cases, all occurring within my personal knowledge:

A Major of Connecticut volunteers, before Port Hudson on the 27th of May, 1863, was struck in the breast by a grape-shot, which traversed the body and was taken out from the back. Contrary to expectation, he did not die immediately, and was laid aside without attention until he should die. But a couple of days passed, and he still survived. He was sent down the river to New Orleans, with some hundreds of others, and lay there in hospital for months. Still he did not die—would not die, and becoming well enough to travel, was sent home. At that time it was not within the expectation of any person who knew anything about the case that he would ever be able to perform the slightest military duty again. And yet, on October 19, 1864, just sixteen months after the wound was received, the Major was in command of his regiment at the bloody battle of Cedar Creek, Va. He escaped the perils of that day unharmed, and for aught I know to the contrary is alive and well now.

Not to speak too much in the first person, at the assault of Port Hudson, June 14, 1863, I was prostrated by a buckshot just above the hip. After being taken to the rear the wound was probed by a surgeon, and the shot could not be found. "This is serious," he said; and his face expressed his sincerity. I was laid aside to die, and others for whom something could possibly be done were placed on the table. Three days passed, and I lived; ate vigorously, and felt well except for the condemnation of the surgeon which seemed to settle it that I ought to have died within twenty-four hours. My persistency, not alone in living, but in feeling well, excited renewed attention, and the case was re-examined. It was then discovered that the buckshot had struck a rib, followed its general course around to the front, and buried itself in the abdominal integuments so deeply that it could not be extracted. And there it lies to-day. A heavy feeling in that vicinity sometimes reminds me of it, and occasionally a pain from the spot where the shot entered; but my life has probably not been shortened a day by the wound.

Before Port Hudson, June 10, 1863, Corporal Medbury, of my company, on duty with a fatigue party, constructing a military road, was seriously wounded by a minie ball striking him just back of the right shoulder joint. The wound was probed, the ball lay too deep to be extracted, the patient was considered as fatally hurt. He was sent down to New Orleans and taken to hospital. A week later I found him there, with his arm in a sling, walking about, feeling cheerful and well, and expecting to recover entirely in a few days. In five days after that Medbury was confined to his bed; in two days more he was dead! A post-mortem examination showed that the bullet had passed through one lung and half through the opposite one. The death was caused by gangrene—mortification—and necessarily fatal from the first. The curious part of the matter was that a man should carry a fatal bullet in his body for two weeks before his death, should apparently recover from the wound, and should shortly afterward die of it.

On the assault of Port Hudson, before referred to, a Sergeant of my regiment was struck in the mouth by a buckshot. It took out every tooth on one side o the upper jaw, front, as cleanly as a dentist's saw could have done it, and inflicted no other injury.

I saw, after the surrender of Port Hudson, a Colonel, who, during the siege, had received a minie ball in one cheek, just forward of the angle of the jaw. It had passed entirely through the face, through both cheeks, taking out at least four double teeth on its course, but happily escaping the tongue. The wound had entirely healed and the disfigurement was great; but the gallant Colonel could talk and eat as well as before.

At the St. James' Hospital, New Orleans, on the pallet next me, in June, 1863, lay a Captain of the Fourth Wisconsin Volunteers, helpless and suffering with one of the strangest wounds that I ever saw. He had received it on the 27th of May, in command of his company of skirmishers, creeping over the ground in advance of the line of assault, among the tangled forests and ravines before the enemy's works. While working forward upon his hands and knees he was struck by a minie ball just below the hip. The ball took a circular course round the leg, never touching the bone, but running round through the muscles at least twice between the hip and knee, thence, skipping the kneepan, it circled around twice in the same way between knee and ankle, and was finally extracted near the foot. The wound was one of the most debilitating and confining, as well as painful, but not necessarily dangerous; but its course and nature was most unusual.
